In June Frank Elwood informed his brother and his sister-in-law that their legal separation would be completed in six months. On the 20th of December he notified them that the decree would be granted early in January, and he desired them to call at his office on the 23rd of December for the purpose of making certain transfers of property that had been agreed upon out of court. On the 23rd he informed them that the papers would not be ready for signature till after office hours the next day. He therefore appointed the meeting to take place at their home at 6 p.m. sharp.

"To-morrow evening!" exclaimed Luther Elwood. "Why, that's Christmas Eve."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Edith Elwood. "The awful man, to bring us together at our old home for such a purpose on Christmas Eve!"

The attorney was called to the telephone by both parties for the purpose of protesting against the place of meeting, and both were answered that the heating apparatus in the building where Frank had his office was out of commission, that no other place was available, that a winter storm which was raging rendered it necessary that some warm place should be selected and that the place provided would be both warm and comfortable. This ended the argument, and both the husband and wife gave a reluctant assent.

At a quarter to five Mrs. Elwood ran up the steps of what had been her home, rang the bell and was admitted by a maid who had been in her employ ever since her marriage.

"Christine," she said, "I have an appointment here at five and have come ahead of time in order to see the children."

"Yes'm. I'll tell Mrs. Albright."

The lady went into the living room and stood before a fire blazing brightly on the hearth. The maid went upstairs and returned with a message from the woman who had the care of the children that she had no orders from Mr. Frank Elwood to permit Mrs. Elwood to see the children except on her regular day.

This was, indeed, a disappointment. The mother wiped away a tear, then began pacing back and forth before the fire till there was a ring at the doorbell and her husband was ushered into the room. He bowed deferentially, but the wife did not return his salute. He took a seat by the fire, and she sat down as far from him as possible. Neither spoke till the clock struck five, when the husband remarked:

"Frank said we were to be punctual. He is going to be late himself."

"He should be ashamed to bring us together here, of all places, on Christmas Eve."

"Perhaps he did it for my benefit. Being a bachelor, he doubtless understands that a club is no place for a man at Christmas time."

"One would suppose that this home, into which you brought me a happy bride, would be the last place you would wish to come on Christmas Eve, especially since you broke the promises you then made."

"I didn't break any promises. It was simply your inordinate jealousy that rendered life unbearable. This separation has been all your fault."

"Not at all; it has been yours. But we have not met for recrimination."

"You are right. For my part, I am content to await Frank's coming and then have the whole affair over with forever."

"Yes, forever."

He drew a newspaper from his pocket and began to read. She took up a book. Several minutes of silence passed, when the maid appeared and said:

"Please, ma'am, Mrs. Albright has just had a telephone from Mr. Frank to say that he can't come for half an hour. He says that to pass the time you may both see the children, if you like."

"I'll go to them at once," said Edith.

"Mr. Frank said that they were to be brought in here."

There was no need for further discussion, for a racket was heard on the landing above, and four youngsters, the oldest a boy of 11, the youngest a girl of four, came tumbling downstairs with shouts and whoops, and, rusing into the room, the boys jumped into their mother's arms, the girls into their father's.

"Oh, mamma! We're so glad you've come back for Christmas!"

"Oh, papa! We're so glad you've come back for Christmas!"

"And we're so glad you're not going away any more too."

"Who told you that?" asked the father.

"Uncle Frank!"

The father and mother gave each other a meaning look.

"Edith," said the former, "this is Frank's doing. He has doubtless surmised that I have learned that women who don't care a snap of their fingers for me are a mighty poor substitute for this."

"And you're going to stay with us for Christmas always? Say yes, mamma. Say yes, papa."

There was a ring at the doorbell.

A pained expression returned to the faces of the husband and the wife. Frank was coming with the papers they were to sign. When he came in he stood at the doorway looking into the room at the scene before him. Father and mother were in the centre, the children crowding around them.

"Frank, you rascal," said Luther, "this is your doing."

"Well, if it is, I never did a better job."

"It all came true, Uncle Frank, didn't it?"

"What came true, dear?" asked the mother.

"Why, Uncle Frank told us that if we could wait till Christmas he promised that we should have you both home again to stay ever so long."

"Uncle Frank is right, sweetheart," said the father, "Our being away from you so long is all papa's fault, and he won't ever do so any more. He promises his little boys and girls that."

This statement was received with a clapping of hands and a shower of kisses for paps, each child struggling for place to impart the kiss.

"Where are you going, Uncle Frank?" called one of the children, seeing that Frank Elwood was making for the door.

"I'm going to spend a bachelor's Christmas all alone by myself. If I had such a home as this you had better believe I wouldn't do anything to pull it down over my head and over the heads of a good woman and a lot of innocent children."

"Right you are, Frank. But you're not going to spend your Christmas alone. You're going to spend it right here in the home you've saved from a permanent wreck."

The mother said nothing. She dared not trust her voice to speak. She went to Frank, put her arms around his neck and kissed him, while one of the girls took his hat away from him, and the youngest boy, seizing his cane, capered around the room using it for a horse.

Christine entered and announced dinner.

"Dinner!" exclaimed Elwood. "I thought we were brought here for another purpose than dinner. Can it be true that we are all to dine together in our own home on Christmas Eve with our own children?"

"And Uncle Frank," put in one of the boys.

"Did you provide the dinner, Frank?" asked Mrs. Elwood. "I thought you were rather given to providing essentials of another kind."

"I had nothing to do with providing this dinner, but I will admit I ordered one for to-morrow."

That was the end of the troubles for the Elwood family. The Christmas they spent united was made the more delightful in contrast with the Christmas before, at which they were separated and their sudden and unexpected coming together.

But the central figure of that Christmas celebration, the mighty hero, was Uncle Frank, who really seemed to enjoy it all as much as if the family belonged to him. He is married now and has children of his own, but he denies that any Christmas in his own home has been happier than the one he spent at the reunion of his brother's family.

By this time the children, in order that they might caress both parents at once, had drawn them so near together that father, mother, boys and girls were mingled in a single group.

"What have you got for me for Christmas, mamma?"

"What have you got for me for Christmas, papa?"

"I want a hobbyhorse!"

"I want a drum!"

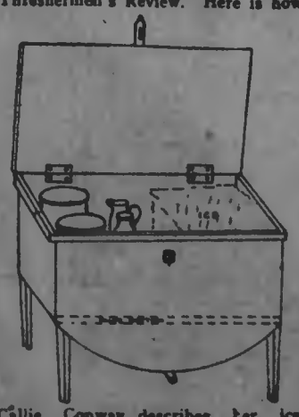
"I want a doll with a wax head and light, curly hair and eyes that close when she goes to sleep!"

These few requests do not express the din that greeted the parents. They are merely given to enable the reader to form some idea of that din. — By F. A. Mitchel.

A COBBLED-UP REFRIGERATOR

Mrs. Robt. Smith, Brome Co., Que.

A refrigerator that will not cost too much and yet be efficient is one of the things I have been looking for for a long time. In looking through a recent issue of "The Threshermen's Review and Power Farming," I ran across a description of a "cobbled-up" ice chest that I believe will answer my requirements nicely. The boys have promised to make it for me this winter when other work is slack. In case other housewives would like to benefit by this "find" of mine I send along a diagram and a description of the refrigerator as it appeared in The Threshermen's Review. Here is how



Callie Conway describes her ice chest:

"How could I have a refrigerator without spending $15 to $30 that I did not have? That problem next occupied my thoughts. Someone of the family is in town at least twice a week, so we could easily have ice brought out, and the cost of the ice, since we did our own delivering, was less than the town people paid. We could save enough on food not allowed to spoil to pay the cost of the ice. I knew, too, that having ice would save me time because I could cook more food at a time and keep it until needed.

"I searched the attic, cellar and sheds for available material for a refrigerator. My most available asset seemed to be the discarded, worn-out washing machine. I established this in the cellar above the drain, which carries away the dripping. As the bottom of the machine was curved I laid in boards to make a level false bottom. On this I placed the cake of ice, covered with newspapers and a piece of carpet. All around the ice the food is set in covered vessels. The working parts of the washer were attached to the lid so I had Tom remove it and hinge on a new lid of old but clean boards, with a clasp to fasten it shut. The washer has a drain outlet and works well in its new capacity. Our ice-box cost nothing but labor."

Not Too Bad.

"Both my husband and I had to go to a hospital on the day we were married and submit to operations for appendicitis."

"What an unfortunate experience!"

"Oh, it might have been worse. We would probably have spent the money on a honeymoon trip anyhow."

Quite a Success.

Wife of the Professor — Charles, here is a telegram—an explosion in your laboratory and the place wrecked.

Professor—Thank goodness! Then that experiment was a success after all.

Progression.

"But sometimes it's right to tell a white lie, isn't it?"

"Perhaps. But I notice that when a man gets that idea once it isn't long till he becomes color blind."

A WAVE OF THE HAND

E. F. Flint, in Dairy Record

While driving, recently, with a man high in authority in the Federal dairy division, I noticed that, as we passed farmers working in the fields, he invariably waved his hand at them and that he always drew a vigorous response.

Finally he said, "Did you ever plow alone in a field, day after day?" Indeed I had. "Well then," he said, "you will remember what an event it was to have some one pass and wave his hand. Something you would think about for some time; breaking up the monotony of a long day and of thought-worn subjects."

Yes, I remembered it all very distinctly even more perhaps because I had not thought of it for a long time. The thought has come back to me and forced these conclusions:

That man was a success as a buttermaker partly, largely, because he "waved his hand" at the patrons whenever they appeared at the creamery or elsewhere within waving distance. He was a success in a State department position and is a success in his present position because he is interested in his fellow man and is still figuratively and literally waving his hand to those in the dairy work.

The buttermakers of to-day must take a greater interest in their patrons than those of 15 years ago because conditions are different.

The successful creamery man of to-day is a trade getter in as full a sense as the general merchant.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Fourteen doses of Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

FEW FOLKS HAVE GREY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its colour and lustre, or when it fades, turns grey, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A BOY

Is there anything that a boy likes better at this time of the year than a good, long visit from grandma? Sometimes it seems as though she knows better what a boy wants and is thinking about than father or mother. Her baggage is always certain to contain a new knife, and one year she brought a pair of skates, and on another visit a kite that looked like a bird and sailed in the air just like one. It was made in China where men and boys fly kites in kite time.

There are no holes in stockings, no buttons missing and no holes in pockets, while grandma stays, and she never forgets to bake cookies once or twice a week, for she says that growing boys need a lot to eat; and when father and mother are disposed not to take the boy to town on the Christmas shopping trip, it is grandma who puts in a kind word, and father and mother relent.

Mother says grandmothers spoil boys, but grandma replies, "I didn't spoil your husband," and then mother says, "But you are not his grandmother," and then they both laugh. Grandma believes that we must not be too hard upon boys; they have their troubles, such as hard lessons at school and hard work at the barn, and it is right that they should be petted a little.

It is nice to sit on a stool at her feet in the evenings while she knits stockings for father, and have her tell what daddy did when he was a little boy, and the things he said and how far he had to walk to school, and the way through the woods where everybody said there were spooks.

Grandma can tell, too, things that her grandmother used to tell her of the time when there were Indians about, and how they would sometimes come into the house in the middle of the night and sit around the big fireplace and ask for something to eat. But they never hurt anybody, for they were called "friendly Indians," and grandma has baskets of beadwork they made for her grandma many, many years ago.

The boy who has a grandmother to come and see him once in a while is in great luck, for she is about the best friend a boy can have.—Farm Journal.

AGRICULTURAL EXPERTS TO CONFER WITH FARMERS

The Dominion Government is arranging through the Department of Agriculture for a series of conferences this winter between agricultural experts and the farmers in each district throughout Canada, with a view to taking all possible steps towards stimulating Canadian agricultural production. Meetings with farmers will be held in each district during January and February, and experts selected by both the Federal and the Provincial Agricultural Departments will advise with the agriculturists in each locality as to how best to increase production, what crops to raise, etc.

Emphasis will be placed on the opportunity given for good markets and good prices through war conditions and decreased European production. Accurate and complete information is being gathered as to the needs of Great Britain and her allies next year, as well as the needs of the home market.

FEAR SOON LOST UNDER FIRE, SAYS OBSERVER

British Medical Officer Makes a Study of the "Psychology of Courage."

LONDON, Dec. 30.—A medical officer who has been making a study of the "psychology of courage" at the British front, says that most men confess to a feeling of fear which only wears off after several days in the trenches. "But once this physical instinct of terror is conquered, there comes," says the medical man, "a second courage, which while not despising danger, is able to dismount it. Under fire these men find a self hitherto unsuspected, an elusive quality which for want of a better title is called manhood."

He says:

"The soldier first learns to control, then to measure, his fear. He learns to discount possibilities just as the ordinary railroad traveller does. And the work in hand generally engages and holds more and more of his attention. There comes a time when he wants to go back to the firing line, not because it is pleasant there, but because staying away is just impossible.

"While the man who has not yet been under fire cannot safely count upon experiencing this or that particular feeling when his hour comes—this depending upon temperament and circumstances—he can, I believe, count upon soon achieving the second courage which is the priceless possession of the veteran. Under fire he may lose every preconceived notion he ever cherished or shunned, but it is highly probable that he will find himself."

A WINTER EGG RATION

Will you kindly recommend a ration for winter eggs—"Subscriber," R. G.

We cannot do better than give you the methods that are used at the O.A.C., whose excellent results are being secured. Prof. Graham explains his method as follows:

"We try to simplify our methods and use only the common foods, and at the present time are using as whole grains, wheat, corn and buckwheat. These grains are fed in equal parts, both morning and evening. The morning food is fed the previous evening after the hens have gone to roost, by sowing it on the litter, and then turning the litter over; the straw is new on top and the grain below and when the hens get up in the morning, they start to dig out the grain, and are kept busy all forenoon. At noon we feed mangels, cabbage or clover hay. The night feed consists of the whole grain fed in troughs, and what the birds do not eat is taken up. Rolled oats are kept constantly before the hens in hoppers. Buttermilk only is given as drink."

Fifty Million for France.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic" is a favourite expression where Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The little overblouses are smart and new and almost invariably made up in velvet. The idea is that they shall match the suit and be worn over a white waist or perhaps a chiffon underbody in the same tone. Some fasten in the front, others in the back, and others still appear to slip on over the head, as there is no visible opening. Those shaped in postilion style in the back have the little postilion caught in with a sash.

Two types are illustrated here, either simple to make. One has the postilion and closes at the front, the other has a round neck opening and closes at the back. The pattern, No. 6,969, comes in three sizes, small, medium and large. The sash may be made of satin or ribbon and for the best effect should match the velvet. Sometimes both the sash and collar are made of satin and the edges of the velvet bound with silk braid. Velveteen, by the way, is an excellent substitute. The idea of binding with braid is not confined to these overblouses, but is quite a popular feature this season. Many of the shirt waists are finished in this way and they are very smart indeed. The braid is said to launder well and is used for waists that are meant to be tubbed.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

Turkey's "Man of Destiny" Raises War Fund and 500,000 Men By Assassination Threats

CONSTANTINOPLE, via courier to Salonika and mail to New York, Dec. 6.—Enver Pasha, Turkey's 32-year-old self-styled "man of destiny," raised money almost over night for mobilization of Turkey's soldiers. He did it by a wholesale threat of assassination of those who failed to "come across."

How poor, nearly bankrupt Turkey was able to maintain on a war footing a respectable sized army, has been one of the wonders of the war. Here is the story of how he accomplished the feat:

"We must have an army at once, to preserve our neutrality," he told his colleagues when the European war broke out.

"It is impossible," was the unanimous cry of the other ministers. "We can't do it. Turkey hasn't enough money to properly equip one regiment, let alone an army. And we haven't enough men."

"Leave that to me," was Enver Pasha's answer. "I'll get the men and the money, too. In the first place I'll threaten with death every man who doesn't answer the mobilization orders. After I've had a dozen or so executed and they find we mean business you'll see that we'll have all the men we want.

"Next I'll announce that those wishing exemption can have it for 48 pounds ($190 and that will give us all the money we need."

The war minister was a good prophet. His scheme was put into practice and men and money both came rolling in. Employers found themselves facing the prospect either of giving up their employees or paying 48 pounds each for their exemption. As to give up their employees meant the ruination of their business most of them paid the money demanded.

All Ambassadors Hard Hit.

The ambassadors from all countries were hard hit. All employ many Turkish servants. United States Ambassador Morgentau found himself about to be deprived of the service of ten men, whom he needed badly. He went at once to Enver Pasha.

"Surely, your excellency," he protested, "you don't mean to tell me that you are going to deprive me of this help."

Enver looked him squarely in the eye and replied:

"And surely, your excellency, you don't mean to tell me that a great country like the United States is going to ask a poor struggling country like Turkey to give it 48 pounds? Why, only this morning, my wife on her bended knees, begged me to exempt her favourite servant. I refused her, saying that my country either must have the man or 48 pounds."

Cost U. S. Ambassador $2,000.

Ambassador Morgenthau made a profound bow.

"I understand perfectly, your excellency," he said. "You need say no more."

That afternoon Morgenthau sent his cheque to Enver for nearly $2,000.

What the American ambassador did was also done by representatives of the other powers. England, France, Russia, Belgium and Servia, at the outset of the European war, all helped pay for Turkey's mobilization.

Likewise every rich Ottoman merchant who needed his servants contributed to the cause. All Christians were kept out of the army, too, by the exemption rule. They would have hampered the government in declaring a holy war. The Christians knew that they would be assigned to the very first ranks, so almost to a man they paid the exemption fee and escaped service.

Altogether Enver not only succeeded in raising funds for the mobilization, but he raised an army of 500,000 men, completely equipped on a war footing.

"PREPARE FOR WAR" IS SLOGAN OF FEMALE ARISTOCRACY--ASK MONEY AND CLOTHING SUBSCRIPTIONS

ROME, (By mail to New York) — Prepare for war!

This is the battle cry of Italy's women of the aristocracy. The names of the most famous princely houses in Italian history on the committee of the Union di Lavoro Fra Le Donne Romano (the Roman Women's Union for Work) have brought new significance into this feminine war interest.

The presence of the "blackest" of the Black aristocracy side by side with the aristocrats and nobility of the White party is something which shows plainer than mere words the general attitude toward war in Italy to-day.

With the Princess Sonnino Colonna, of that famous house name, is interwoven with Italian history since the tenth century, as president of the union, and with Marguerita, the queen mother, leading the subscription list with one thousand lire, with Donna Guistiana, president of the woman's league, and the real leader of the Black party, Contessa Spaletti Rasponi, feminist and president of the national council of women, and other noblewomen of White or court circles associated with much uncompromising Blacks as the Princess Doria, the work of these combined aristocrats is blazing a way for common interests in the face of war.

For whatever difference exists between the papacy and the crown, when the fate of Italy is concerned, patriotism beats alike in the two parties. Money, immediate supplies of warm clothing, helmets, gloves, bands, socks, scarfs, woollen shirts, are all asked.

"If," said a young countess, "at the opening of a fox hunt, when requested to aid in the immediate cause of supplying warm clothing for soldiers, "Italy is not going to break the neutrality why all this perturbation about their clothing? Also why," she continued, "if Italy is not going into this war until spring, as everyone insists, should we worry about winter clothing? Why not prepare spring raiment."

The query was answered by a significant silence. And the Princess Colonna continued to call for funds and supplies.

The new organiastion of the Italian aristocracy, it is said, indicates not only a common interest in war preparations, but the necessary arrangements of proper affiliations whereby the Black and White aristocracy might meet. But there are homes which no black aristocrats may enter, just as there are papal palaces where the blending of the white and the black could not take place. While the women of the white aristocracy, from the queen mother down, may be of the most pious and religious tendencies, their allegiance to the court bars them from the innermost recesses of the sacred black circles—the papal aristocracy of which the Dorias are of the blackest black. The joining of the representatives of the two factions in the common work of preparation for war brought them closer together than they ever were before.

In the list of these aristocratic workers are the names of former American girls. Now the wives of nobles of Italy they are sharing in the work of getting funds and supplies for soldiers.

An incident which excited considerable comment among Rome's English and American residents, was the protest made by prominent English women against the British embassy's desire to aid Italian soldiers. The English women were firm in their contention that although they were in sympathy with the movement they believed England's official representatives and her private subjects should be working for the relief of English soldiers—not Italian.

The Procession of The Months

First, JANUARY charged with hope and fear,
Flings open wide the portals of the year;
Then FEBRUARY comes with storm and rain;
Whilst boisterous MARCH goes shouting down the plain;
And then sweet APRIL smiling through her tears
Shakes raindrops from her hair and disappears.
MAY comes in singing, and still singing goes;
Whilst JUNE is glad with nightingale and rose;
JULY grows languid with the summer's heat,
And sits beside the stream and bathes her feet;
Whilst sultry AUGUST sees her harvests grow
And ripen 'till the sickle lays them low;
SEPTEMBER follows later with a hoard
Of fruits to brighten all the Autumn's board;
OCTOBER'S torch, when the cold makes its claim,
Touches the fields and sets the woods aflame;
Then comes NOVEMBER, frosty lance in hand,
And scatters his white mists above the land;
White-cloaked DECEMBER passes, and the door
Closes upon those months for evermore.

They went up the Suez Canal where, it is learned, they safely arrived and are now stationed.

SPECIAL INTERCESSORY SERVICE AT MURRAY ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

"Sanctify Yourselves: For the Lord Will Do Wonders Among You."

"When wilt Thou save the people,
O God of mercy, when?
The people, Lord, the people;
Not thrones, and crowns, but men;
God save the people, Thine they are,
Thy children as Thine angels fair;
From vice, oppression, and despair,
God save the people".

—Elliott.

The service at the Murray Street Baptist Church, Sunday morning, was a decided relief from the usual orations heard since the war began. Instead of listening to an effusion of bumptious boasting, we were advised to humble ourselves before God; instead of hearing a speech on the glory and righteousness of England's cause we were admonished to be sober-minded, to invoke the aid of God, to prostrate ourselves at His feet; instead of receiving a lecture on the duty of every loyal Briton, we were counselled as followers of Christ to sanctify ourselves, set ourselves apart, to get ourselves in the right relationship to God.

In the words of Thoms a Kempis: God walks with the humble: He reveals Himself to the lowly; He gives understanding to the little ones; He discloses His meaning to pure minds, but hides His grace from the proud."

"Humility" was the keynote of the sermon with which the Rev. Mr. Webb greeted his flock on the first Sunday morning of the New Year.

A large congregation turned out despite the severity of the weather, and many remained for the Ordinance of the Lord's Supper and reception of new members.

The solemnity of the occasion was deepened by the suggestive reminder, of the war and its terrible significance, which hung to the left of the pulpit. This was in the form of a shield and scroll, upon which are printed, in letters of gold, the names of the young men of Murray Street Church who have volunteered for the service of their country and King. They are: Harold S. Matthews, P. Clifton Kidd, Theodore Quinn, Harold Saunders, George Fry, Charles Adam, Roscoe Kendry, Harold French, Victor Northcote, C. Hardwich, W. Bayley, William Long, W. Cotterill, W. Hughes and Asa Lapp. On the top of the shield are the words "Lest We Forget" followed by the inscription "Though sundered far, by Faith we meet." Over the whole is draped a large Canadian ensign. A photograph of this beautiful memorial, the work of Mr. Moule, is being sent to each of these brave volunteers.

Mr. Webb took as his text the fifth verse of thee third Chapter of Joshua: "And Joshua said unto the people, sanctify yourselves: for to-morrow the Lord will do wonders among you," and in a brief, dispassionate discourse exhorted us to humble ourselves before God and ask for God's spirit to search us as a nation to see if there be any wickedness lurking in us.

Joshua was the leader of the children of Israel. For many years they had journeyed amid many trials, and had experienced many revelations of God's mercy. Addressing his people, he reminded them that they had not passed this way heretofore; new experiences were to be theirs, but whether these were to be for weal or woe, depended, not on numbers, but on their personal relation to God.

During the great American Civil War, Lincoln was asked if God were on his side. "I am not concerned about that," replied he, "but I am anxious that I shall be found on God's side."

Even so, Joshua, as he beheld a soldier fully armed, cried: "Art thou for us or for our adversaries?" to which the Angel of the Lord replied, "Nay, but as Captain of the host of the Lord am I now come."

The nation has set apart this day as one of intercession for the British people have come to the conclusion that there must be a wandering from God that has caused the present predicament in which we find ourselves; that power is not in our army or in our King, but belongeth to God.

In this connection Mr. Webb referred to the experience of a native of India, a cultured Christian man, who attended a service in St. Paul's Cathedral during the first days of the war. The people seemed as a company gathered together for high thought; indeed the service was most dignified, and created a profound impression upon the Indian; but the sermon was a sore disappointment. It was, from first to last a vindictive challenge to the enemies of Great Britain, in which her glories were lauded to the skies. He regretted that it savoured of paganism.

In like manner we may all have sinned. This, declared Mr. Webb, is no time for vindication, for self justification; instead, we should humble ourselves before God. Let Him vindicate.

Taking the lesson from the experience of the children of Israel, when repulsed by the men of Ai, where Joshua fell upon his face before the Lord, and cried, "O Lord, what shall I say, when Israel turneth their backs before their enemies!" to which the Lord replied: "Israel hath sinned and have transgressed my covenant, neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed thing from among you."

Mr. Webb was of the opinion that it was no lack of loyalty on our part to say, before God, that there is a possibility that the great sin of the British nation may be unjustified self-appraisement It would be unfortunate if victory should come out of it without a chastening that would bring us nearer to God, so that in the future He could use England as an instrument to do His will in the world.

With God on our side we can accomplish wonders, as did Gideon with his few as he went forth to battle: "And the Lord said unto Gideon, the people that are with thee are too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel vaunt themselves against me, saying, mine own hand hath saved me."

—Paul Penman.

NEW YEAR'S DAY AT THE "Y"

The Y.M.C.A. held open house all day New Year's, the aggregate attendance for the day being something more than six hundred men, women and boys.

In the forenoon games and gymnasium work was conducted for the younger boys. In the afternoon the gymnasium programme as announced, was carried out and the parents and friends were also entertained in the parlours by Asa Huycke, pianist, and Charles Seymour, violinist.

The following ladies received in behalf of the Auxiliary and served refreshments to the visitors between the hours of 3 and 5 in the afternoon: Mrs. J. C. Shook, Mrs. G. C. Carruthers, Mrs. W. C. Austin, Mrs. C. N. Meserve, Mrs. Sam Clegg, Miss Nina Davidson.

In the evening a very interesting musical programme was carried out in the gymnasium consisting of the following numbers: Asa Huycke, piano solo, Douglas Carlisle vocal solo, Mr. J. John, recitation, Miss Kemp vocal solo, Miss Gumpricht, piano solo, Mr. J. Brown, vocal solo, and Mr. John, recitation. The programme was opened by the singing of the National Anthem. A vote of thanks was given to all who participated in the musical programme by the audience.

In the afternoon the gymnasium programme consisted of drills, marches and apparatus work, which proved of great interest to the parents and friends who filled the gallery to watch the boys go through their work.

This was not for exhibition purposes, but rather an educational programme to acquaint the parents and the public with the kind of work the boys do. The drills were educational in as much as the commands are given, the class having to first think the movement out and then put it into execution.

The apparatus work created a great deal of interest and proved most entertaining to the spectators.

The group games by the smaller boys were real mirth workers. Some of the relay races creating great excitement.

The basketball games were hotly contested. The Junior Business Boys under Reg. Brown met defeat at the hands of Jack Green's school boys. However, the Intermediate Business Boys under Bert Hamilton succeeded in turning the tables on Geo. Green's Collegiate group by a good margin.

The Evening Performance.

In the evening the big attraction was the Veterans vs. All Stars basketbal game. The Veterans are minus Geo. Robinson, but Fred Cressman, who could well qualify for the Veterans team, took Robinson's place. The other members of the Veterans were Dobbin, Best, Richardson and McCarrell, while the All Stars team was made u pof Peever, Panter, M. Turner, W. Flowers and English. John Laing, one of the old time Association boys was back to referee the game, which he did in his old time style.

The game was in doubt from the start and at all times most exciting, and held the interest of the crowd of spectators. The All Stars were leading at the end of the first half by four points. However, in the second half, the youngsters seemed to get excited, while the old Veterans played their regular cool-headed game.

Flowers succeeded in getting the most baskets for the All Stars, but he was assisted hp his team mates, who kept feeding the basket to him.

Dobbin and Cressman were high men for the Veterans. Bill Richardson succeeded in getting 5 fowls for the Veterans, showing that he has not lost an eye for the basket.

Many of the residents of Peterborough who watched the Veterans play when they were young boys, were out to cheer them to victory last night and it was not only good for the Veterans to see their old friends around again, but the Association was pleased to welcome them and trust that they will be back to see their old friends in future games of the season.

Referee, John Lang. Scorer, A. Theobald.

Are Still Making Good Progress in Alsace

RUSSIANS' STRONG DEFENCE IN EAST

THE FRENCH ARE STILL MAKING GAINS IN THE LOST PROVINCES

Chief Fighting in the Western Theatre is Centred in That Region--In the North the Bad Weather is Preventing any Serious Fighting--Calm Prevailing From the Sea to the Oise.

HEAVY CANNONADING IN THE CENTRE

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, January 4.—(3 p.m. Official.)—The allies continue to make slow but certain gains in Upper Alsace and the chief fighting of the entire campaign in the western theatre is to-day in the "lost provinces"; fighting is in progress all along the line from Cernay, ten miles west of Mulhausen, to a point well to the east of Steinbach. The Germans' attempted counter attack against the French lines west of Cernay, but according to to-day's official announcement, the offensive was checked, and the enemy was repulsed. The church and the cemetery at Steinbach have been taken by the allies, who have also gained a slight advantage in the village itself. To-day's reports emphasize the fact that the elements are preventing any serious fighting in the north. From the sea to the Oise, it is stated that calm prevails because of the heavy rains. There has been heavy cannonading in the Champagne and Aisne districts with the French securing the advantage, the German reserves having been shelled and then forced to retire. The French are also reported to have made distinct gains at Perthes-Le-Chatelet, directly south of Rethel, at Mesmill-En-Hurlus, and in the woods at Pretre. In general, however, the situation hangs fire, while both sides wait for the weather to improve.

TRIESTE, Austria, Jan. 4.—On a train of 800 wounded arriving here to-day from the northern battle ground, 200 of the men had had their feet so badly frozen that amputation was necessary. In most instances both feet were amputated.

LONDON, January 4.—The Daily News' correspondent telegraphs from northern France: "Again violent storms have burst over the dreary desolate area of the Yser. Yesterday on both sides the fighting was a half-hearted amphibian warfare with water-logged guns, water-logged transports and spirits drowned in the trenches. Sixty German prisoners brought in last night were in a desperate state of filth and utterly worn out. I never saw such despondent men in my life. They swallowed hot soup served to them with the greed of starved wolves. They said that they had been living in mud holes that were hardly fit for swine for weeks, and were frozen and soaked turn and turn about."

PETROGRAD, January 4.—An official communication isued on Sunday night by the general staff of the Russian army regarding the fighting in Poland and Galicia says: "A strong artillery combat has been fought all along the front on the left bank of the Vistula; the attempt of the Germans to gain ground in certain places in the region of the Bzura River was without success. On the night of Jan. 2 we discovered the passage of Germans across the Bzura in the vicinity of Kozloff and Biskoupi, having watched the concentration of the enemy's forces, one of our glorious regiments surrounded the Germans. They attacked them with the bayonet, without firing a shot, and in a hand to hand struggle which followed, killed several hundreds of them; the survivors saved their lives by surrendering.

LITTLE INTEREST MANIFESTED IN THE ELECTIONS

"The Quietest Election in Years" is the Opinion of Many Citizen—See Examiner Extra For Final Results

POLLS CLOSE AT 5 P. M.

"The quietest election in years," is the pronouncement of a large number of citizens when questioned regarding the prospects of a large vote being polled. Judging by the inactivity around the various polling booths the opinion given above is well justified. At times there were hardly enough voters coming in to keep the poll clerks busy. Many of the polling sub-divisions are not adapted for the purpose, especially when the thermometer takes a slump, as it has within the last day or so. However, up until noon to-day no deaths from exposure had resulted although the cold Village Idiot in East City was said to be no Garden of Eden.

Will Remain at Home.

East City, apparently had little interest in to-day's elections. They were provided with an Aldermanic representative without the necessity of going to the polls for one. Many of the electors will remain at home, and a few more will write "Socialist" across their ballot. The latter applies to the whole of the City.

The polls will close sharp at five o'clock and the successful mayoralty candidate should be known to the public by 6 o'clock. An Examiner "Election Extra," containing the results, also the latest war news will be on the street as soon as the final returns are in. This should not be later than 7 o'clock.

FAMOUS QUARTETTE IS COMING

Mr. John Allan has great pleasure in announcing to the musical people of Peterborough that he has been successful in engaging the famous Adanac Quartette of Toronto for a high class vocal recital in St. Paul's church on Tuesday evening, 19th January. The quartette consists of the four best male singers in Canada, namely:

1st Tenor— Mr. Redferne Hollinshead.
2nd Tenor—Mr. George Dixon.
Baritone—Mr. Arthur Blight.
Bass—Mr. Ruthven Macdonald.

Mr. Allan had the pleasure of hearing the quartette in Toronto last week, where their splendid work created the utmost enthusiasm, the blend of the voices being well nigh perfect. Among other splendid items the quartette will sing Walford Davis' "Hymn Before Action," and the famous "Pilgrims Chorus" from "Tannhauser." All the members of the quartette will also be heard in solo and duet, and the whole programme is of such a character as to insure its being the finest musical recital ever given in this city. In addition to the quartette Mr. Allan has engaged the famous Russian virtuoso, Edward Hesselberg, as solo pianist.

A Lecture on Persia

An illustrated free lantern lecture on Persia will be given by Mr. Mochaley at the meeting of the Young People's Guild in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church to-night. Fighting between the Russians and Turks is taking place in the northern part of Persia, the southern part of which is under British suzerainty. Mr. Cochaley's address will therefore, be additionally interesting especially as he is a native of Persia and understands the lives and customs of the people thoroughly.

JUDGMENT OBTAINED

For Plaintiff in Case of Miss Alberta Graham vs. Edward Green Estate

SUED FOR $1,000

This morning in the County Court, before His Honour Judge Huycke, judgment was given in favour of Miss Alberta Graham for the amount of $575 and costs, with a set off of $75 (by consent), representing monies already received by the plaintiff. It will be remembered that Miss Graham sued the Edward Green estate for wages amounting to one thousand dollars, alleged to be due for four and one half years' domestic service. The defence was that the plaintiff lived with the defendants as a niece and was not entitled to wages.

Messrs. G. N. Gordon and Widdifield represented the plaintiff, while Messrs. D. O'Connell and E. A. Dixon acted for the Edward Green Estate.

Sunday School To Be Entertained

Through the kindness of the ladies of the congregation of St. John's Anglican church, the scholars of St. John's Sunday school will be entertained at a supper in the St. John's schoolhouse on Friday next at 5.30 p.m. to be followed by an impromptu entertainment.

The teachers and officials of the school are specially invited to attend.

The management will be undertaken by the St. John's Church Women's Association and it is needless to say that the arrangements will be efficiently carried out.

MR. A. B. COLVILLE SAYS COMPANY WANTS THE ARBITRATION ADVANCED

Mr. A. B. Colville of the Seymour Electric Power Company was in Peterborough to-day. At the Empress he told the Examiner that the company is anxious to proceed with the City's expropriation proceedings which are under arbitration. Despite the loss in Peterborough and the decreased demand for power from factories in the Midland district, the company has noticed no net decrease. This is probably explained by the growing use of electricity for new domestic purposes. Mr. Colville expressed the belief that the city may be disappointed if it expects to be let down lightly in the final adjustment.

JANUARY CLEAR-AWAY AT FASHION-CRAFT SHOP

To do his share in making things as happy as possible, A. Laidlaw starts the New Year selling the balance of his stock of suits and overcoats at specially low prices. These suits and overcoats are all "Fashion-Craft" models and make, taken from regular stock, cut and finished by some of the most skilful garment cutters in Canada. They stand for the newest and most accurate ideas in winter fashions. During this January sale, there will be no hold-backs, as every garment in stock must be cleared away. It is a habit of "Fashion-Craft" to have no left-overs to begin a new season. Men should read the advertisement in the first page of to-day's paper and govern themselves accordingly.

THE "CONFEDERATION" CALENDAR

It has been noticed for years that the Calendars of the Confederation Life Association, Toronto, keep in a distinct class by themselves. The size, style, reading and figures conform quite closely one year after the other. In other technical details, such as colouring and lettering there is usually a distinct change — the whole effect being suggestive of the business stability of the Company. The 1915 Calendar will be well received by any one favoured with a copy, as it shows a bright blue and gold combination heading, richly embossed and ornamented, and will make a good office hanger. Ex-Mayor H. Rush is still the Company's local cashier, and Mr. Samuel Taylor, General Agent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The State Department to-day received a complete report of the killing of Walter Smith and the wounding of Chas. Derrich, Americans, by Canadian border patrol on Lake Erie, from Vice Consul Curtiss at Fort Erie. Representative Smith of Buffalo, called on the State Department to again urge immediate action by the Department. He declared the residents of Buffalo were thoroughly aroused over the affair. "I am convinced that the killing of Smith was a plain case of murder and should be punished as such," said Smith.

Was Awarded $25 For Slander

Case of Currie vs. Stares Disposed of Saturday

Samuel Currie was awarded $25.00 in the County Court by His Honour Judge Huycke. Currie was plaintiff in an action instituted against Frederick Stares for alleged slander and false arrest. The case was tried at the General Sessions of the Peace, which were held some weeks ago. The Jury, on that occasion, awarded Currie twenty-five dollars on each count. The twenty-five dollars for false arrest was eliminated in the judgment rendered Saturday by Judge Huycke. Some months ago Currie secured judgment for false arrest against a man named McGregor, who, it is alleged, co-operated with Stares in effecting the arrest of Currie while the latter was attending a funeral. The Court held that Currie was not entitled to damages from two parties and threw out the second award of twenty-five dollars awarded Currie for false arrest, in the second action.

The firm of Gordon and Widdifield acted for the plaintiff.

NOTED SWINDLER GAINS BY WAR IN BELGIUM

Brussels Prison Doors Unlock for Man Who Stole Millions.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Nestor Wilmart, a former banker, railroad man, newspaper proprietor and sportsman, who was serving a sentence in the Saint Gilles prison at Brussels in connection with financial irregularities, has succeeded in escaping, according to a despatch received here to-day from Basle, Switzerland.

Nestor Wilmart in July last was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $800 following his conviction at Brussels on a charge of swindling the public out of $2,400,000 by over-issuing shares in the Ghent-Terneuzen Railroad in 1912.

The Ghent-Terneuzen Railway was privately owned, and the operations of Wilmart placed a number of small banks in difficulties. He disappeared in 1912, and after a world-wide search was arrested at Rheims, France.

RUSSIANS HAVE STRONG DEFENCE

United Press Writer After Eight Days at the Front Says Czar's Forces Are Holding Three Separate Positions of Great Strength---Flanked By Impassable Swamps.

(By Karl Von Wiegard)

At the Headquarters of the Imperial Prussian Guard Division, 37 miles from Warsaw, December 31, by courier via Skierniewicz, Berlin, and The Hague, January 4. — General Von Hindenburg and his fighting army are waiting for real winter weather. The failure of the usual below zero temperature to appear on time has proved an enormous handicap to the German strategic plans. As a result the German offensive against Warsaw is partly checked while the troops wait for the Rawka River and the swamps on their front to freeze up. Whereas the severe winter spelled destruction to Napoleon, it will spell success to the Germans, according to the German generals here. I have been able to spend eight days at the extreme front along the German eastern position. It is a gigantic struggle that is in progress. The present campaign will not only decide the fate of Warsaw but end the present winter campaign, and have a most important bearing on the present war. The Germans are appearing under most tremendous difficulties, which are only possible of being overcome by a superlative military organization which General Von Hindenburg has built up. His strategy, backed by wonderful work on the part of his chief aides, Generals Mackenzen, Litzman, Hans, Vondelow and others, forced the Russian steam roller back with heavy losses, until the swamps which front Warsaw were reached. There the Russians at once came into possession of a distinct advantage, as they had constructed three separate positions of great strength, one behind the other, and all flanked by impassable swamps. The question now confronting Von Hindenburg, is whether he and his aides will be able to devise a plan of breaking through these lines, or through the general flanking movement from the south now in progress will be able to force the Russians to abandon them and leave Warsaw as a prize to the Germans. If the weather turns bitterly cold and freezes the swamps so that the transport can be of use, the German commanders are certain this will be the result. If not then the situation must of necessity resolve itself into a ceaseless long artillery duel similar to that now in progress on the western front.

Seen through long range glasses the Russians can be discerned strengthening their trenches at every point. They are bringing up many enormous bags of sand which are put in position along the entire front line. All day long and far into the night the Germans pour shell and shrapnel into the Russian trenches. All sorts of guns are being used, ranging from the light field artillery to the heavy Austrian 12-inchers mounted on motor carriages. The roar of the exploding shells and of the discharging guns is terrific. The Germans are now utilizing along the front here a new and improved mine thrower which operates with the most deadly effect. I was permitted to witness a night attack with the heavy artillery on Skierniwicz. It was a wonderful spectacle. The ground trembled under the ceaseless detonations. The sky was streaked with light from the exploding shells and from the timber set on fire by the explosions. Twice the German infantry got across the river under cover of the guns, only to be forced to withdraw again in the face of vastly superior forces. The Russians had a material advantage of position. They were on high and dry ground with both of their flanks protected by impassable swamps, and finally the attempt to take the position had to be abandoned. There has been no apparent attempt on the part of the Russians again to take the offensive. Along the immediate front, with Skierniwicz as a centre, there are probably 800,000 men engaged. Only a very few case of cholera are reported among the German troops, these cases being confined to those men not previously vaccinated with anti-cholera serum."

POPULAR INDIFFERENCE.

Peterborough is not the only place where the indifference of the electors to their duty in electing civic representatives is apparent. In Toronto this indifference has been demonstrated by a large number of electors refraining from voting. This results in the election of indifferent men. The candidate who can make some special appeal to the personal interests of electors, who can appeal to partisan or other interests, is naturally bound to have his supporters look to their own advantage by voting for the candidate or candidates that will serve their selfish personal or other purposes. In this way the undesirable element asserts itself and the result is not what is best for the civic government of the municipality concerned. Voting is a duty as incumbent upon a good citizen as paying his taxes; and a good deal easier, and if rightly done, will mean less taxation, or what amounts to the same thing, greater value for the taxes paid. The man who refrains from voting has his mouth closed to protest if the management of civic affairs is ineffective or bad.

WEEK OF PRAYER.

To Peterborough, to Canada and to the world, the "Week of Prayer," at this time in the world's stress and need, comes with especial appeal. To the worldly minded and the unthinking it means nothing; and it is because such an attitude, so much obtains that it is incumbent upon all those who regard religion and Christianity as the highest and noblest reality to think on these things. If we believe in God at all, as revealed to man in his Scriptures, we must believe in prayer. If we do not our religion, our hope is in vain. In another part of this issue of The Examiner is found the programme of the services of the week of prayer. It will be noted that there is a fine subordination, of the spirit of denomination. The ministers of the several churches are united in a great series of services of intercession, and it is hoped that the congregations will follow their spiritual leaders in uniting to realize the promise made to "two or three gathered together in My name." Such an unity will be complementary to the unity that obtains throughout all the Empire in prosecuting to a favourable conclusion a war of righteousness—in the interests of a peace, which in relation to the past history of the world, will be in the widest sense, a "peace that passeth all understanding." Praying and fighting for such a peace will in a national sense include all the rest. The day of universal intercession observed yesterday struck the keynote of the succeeding week of prayer—national recognition of the divine leadership and faith in the Fatherhood of God, in human affairs.

PAY UP.

"Business as usual" is a difficult motto to live up to. The war has disjointed things so extensively that it is a little hard to find ourselves. Money as the lubricant of business is the prime necessity, and its importance as ready-money is as great as if it were given the high-sounding title of "capital." In the splendid "Financial survey" of the Globe, issued on Saturday, Mr. Hirst, the eminent editor of the London Economist, says that one of the results of the war will be that it must be some years "before Britain will be able to contribute on the scale of the last few years to the provision of new capital for Canada." In this event we must seek to develop our own capital; and aside from the national aspect of the question, we can do much in our local sphere to help finance the situation. This year, much more than any other year, our merchants need the money that is due them. They have been putting up a brave front, and it is said, have been generous, if not imprudent, in extending credit to our citizens. It is therefore the duty of the beneficiaries of the liberality of the merchants in extending cridit, to do all in their power to pay their bills as promptly as possible. This will help merchants to meet their financial obligations to other citizens, and the round of benefit will be incalculably important in our community. We may thus help to keep business going as usual. No one who has not had a similar experience can appreciate how great a boon, how great a relief, can come to a business man, in a temporary tight place, from the ready payment of even a few small bills. The act of as ready payment as possible of indebtedness, apart from the financial aspect of the matter, has a high moral value, heading us in the right direction for our year's discharge of duty. The beginning of a new year is a time for readjusting our relations to our fellowmen. We make good resolutions, we forgive our enemies, and they forgive us, and we thus put ourselves on the high plane of harmonious relationship that the duties and obligations of good citizenship demand. Not only good morals, but good citizenship lay upon us the obligation to pay our little debts—to not only pay them, but to pay them promptly; the way that will insure the most resultant good—help our business neighbour and show that we have some practical regard for the spirit as well as the title of one of the things upon which our "eternal life" is conditional—"love thy neighbour as thyself."

NECESSITY OF VIGILANCE.

To many the matter of searching ships for contraband, is not a matter of capital importance. It is, however, a matter of very great importance; one of the means of defeating Germany is the cutting off of her source of supplies—foodstuffs and munitions of war. Great Britain has spent millions on her navy to protect her commerce, and incidentally the commerce of the world; and the greater interest should not be subordinate to the petty individual interests of commercial bucaneers. In the interests of the world's commerce, Germany should be weakened. She has shown herself the enemy of the world in theory and action. She has sown neutral waters with mines, and the United States would perhaps do better to protest against this and other foul means of playing the war game, than to make its chief point of pin-pricking objections to the search of suspected ships. In thus insisting she is showing that she attaches more importance to a little petty trade advantage, than to her obvious duty to refrain from assisting in prolonging a war that, in the final analysis, if Germany wins, will imperil more than United States trade interests. World domination is the German ambition; and that does not admit the idea of any great power dividing the supremacy of Germany. Great Britain has plenty of justification for her vigilance; her anxiety to prevent contraband cargoes reaching the country of her enemy. No trick, subterfuge nor device, will fail to be employed by German agencies. Inspection of cargoes at the port of shipment in the United States will not serve. An United States oil-tanker, the Brindilla, was held up off New York some time ago on suspicion of having a cargo of oil destined for Germany. She was taken to Halifax; and on the strength of her claim that the destination of her cargo was Egypt, she was released. She presumably pursued her voyage, but not to Alexandria. It is now stated that this oil-tanker, has been caught off the coast of Scotland and taken to Aberdeen. If this is correct, there is more than suspicion that the cargo is trying to reach German ports; that the Brindilla, instead of being regarded as a neutral ship is a blockade runner. A ship bound for Egypt would find the sea of Japan as much on her route as the east coast of Scotland. These incidents if true show that Britain is well justified in showing vigilance in seeing that neutral shipping should not be deceptively employed to strengthen the resources of her enemy, and thus help prolong the war that is bringing so much death, destruction and disturbance of the activities of civilization. An extra gallon of petrol may help a German Zeppelin to the success of a baby-killing raid. If lax patrolling of the sea is permitted to get petrol to the enemy, it may also get Canadian nickel and other aids to the manufacture of munitions of war to the enemy. If the United States wants to be strictly neutral, she cannot be so by taking an attitude that means effective "aid and comfort" to one set of combatants at the expense of another, and at the expense of the highest interests of humanity.

CONQUEST AND PURCHASE.

The Reverend Newman Dwight Hillis says that all the land in Belgium could be bought for less money than has been spent in conquering it. The Springfield Republican says: "The area of Belgium is 727,872 acres. If we suppose that Germany, France, and England together are spending some $10,000,000 a day in the western war arena, in 150 days the cost would come to something like $2,000 an acre; certainly at that price Germans could buy up a good share of the world if their money held out."

But the Republican is doubtful about the idea of subscituting purchase for conquest, and its doubt is justifiable. The question is one not of ownership, but of government. The Belgians would be quite right in refusing to sell, for any price, their right to govern themselves.

It is true, however, that any substantial benefit that Germany sought could have been obtained without either conquest or purchase. If Germany wanted more outlets for her trade Antwerp and the rest of Belgium were available. Not only so, but the whole of Great Britain, being under free trade, was open to German commercial enterprise. Germany was also doing a large trade even with countries under protective tariffs.

But Germany became a source of danger to the world the moment that it entered the German mind that glory was to be sought in extending the field of German government. The motive was then, not to benefit the individual German, but to add glory and prestige to the governing classes of Germany. All that was essential to the interests and ambitions of Germans could have been obtained by intelligent co-operation with Belgium and other countries. But those who have led Germany into this war were not satisfied with co-operation. They were eager for domination.—Toronto Star.

THE BABY KILLING AT SCARBOROUGH.

Even when war is conducted with punctilious observance of the agreed rules there must occur incidents that revolt the sensibilities of humanity. When every precaution is taken it is inevitable that some of the innocent non-combatants must suffer. To add to such horrors gratuitously, merely to give vent to incurable passion or in a demoniacal love of spectacular carnage, is something the world can never pardon. No principle of strategy, no necessity of tactics, prompted the attack of the German fleet upon Scarborough, an exposed seashore resort as unessential to the defence of England as Atlantic City would be to the defence of America. Indeed, so far from being a useful element in the German campaign, a moment's thought should have convinced the German naval authorities that it would immeasurably add to England's strength. If all the military authorities of Great Britain had been praying for something to stimualte recruiting, Germany could not have provided a more satisfactory answer. Every shell fired was worth a thousand men to Lord Kitchener.

But the raid was wanton, and in a sense cowardly. If Germany wanted to prove that her fast cruisers could elude the British fleet and slaughter babies, women and invalids alike, the exploit was a brilliant success. But it was not what men call war and it has earned not admiration, but reprobation. If German ships can cruise at will they can engage the British ships when, where and under whatsoever conditions they care to choose. Better a thousand times for German militarism; yes, better a thousand times for civilization, that Germany should lose every single ship of her fleet in a fair fight with her peers than that such gratuitous slaughter should be perpetuated. The Scarborough incident is simply carnage devoid of a redeeming feature. Winston Churchill has voiced the conviction of the world in saying: "Whatever feats of arms the German navy may hereafter perform, the stigma of the 'baby killers of Scarborough' will brand its officers and men while sailors sail the seas."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Record of Canadian Conservation Commission—Its Justification

The wide activities of the Dominion Commission of Conservation are called to mind by the announcement of the sixth annual meeting of that body, which is to be held this month. This organization was established by the Laurier Government in 1909, and its value has been abundantly demonstrated. For one thing it has produced a little library of literature relating to Canada's natural resources—a library that already has become simply invaluable. This library includes authoritative treatises on such things as the water powers, coal, minerals, fisheries, agriculture, and forests of the Dominion. There are also treatises on oyster cultivation and preservation, on fur farming, and on unsanitary housing. In addition there are the bound volumes of papers and reports presented at the various annual meetings, covering an astonishing variety of subjects relating to the development and prosperity of the country and the physical well-being of its inhabitants.

But greater perhaps than the production of this authoritative literature has been the educational work of the Commission. By public meetings, by the information it has scattered broadcast through the press, and by the recommendations it has made to Parliament, it has aroused the whole country to the value of conservation. Among the more important legislation to be placed to its credit is that relating to water powers. The Commission has given much thought to this subject, and was laid down the principles relating to the granting of water powers which must be observed if the public is to get its share of the unearned increment of these powers.

In regard to the forest wealth of the Dominion, the Commission has induced the Dominion Government so to amend the Railway Act as to give to the Railway Commission important powers for compelling railway companies to safeguard from fire the forests through which their trains run. As a result, railways are held responsible for damages inflicted by fires caused by their locomotives and are required to patrol dangerous portions of their lines during the dry season. Millions of dollars' worth of lumber have already been saved by these precautions. The Commission has also induced the Government to set aside an area of 17,000 square miles on the Eastern slope of the Rockies as a forest reserve—a result that of itself would justify the Commission's appointment.

Important recommendations making for the public health, notably those relating to the pollution of streams, the prevention of tuberculosis, the consolidation of the public health services, have also been placed before the Government for legislation, while the compilation of exhaustive information relating to technical education in this and other countries, has provided a splendid manual for future action on this subject.

The work of this Commission has been a work for the Canadian people. At the inaugural meeting, the Chairman, the Hon. Clifford Sifton said:

It is certain that there will be a large influx of capital into this country. This capital will come with the idea of acquiring whatever revenue-producing assets Canada possesses. It will not come for philanthropic purposes. It will come to acquire and monopolize. . . . . It does not take a very profound observer to see that, within ten years, United States capital will be on the spot to acquire nearly every one of our great natural sources of wealth, except our farm lands and fisheries, which in the nature of things, cannot be monopolized though they may be heavily tolled by monopolists. If, then, we are desirous that Canada shall remain Canadian, a good place for Canadians to live in, and a good place for our children to make their homes, it is in the highest degree important that we should endeavour to promote such improvements in the organic laws of the country as will prevent the monopolization of the sources of wealth, and, at least, ensure to the people their full share of the wealth which is produced therefrom.

This is part of the great task which the Commission—a purely investigating and advisory body — has addressed itself to, and its record is its justification.—Montreal Herald and Telegraph.

Powerful Stuff.

A young man noticed that the case of his watch seemed to be brass, and he hastened to the jeweler from whom he had bought the watch to demand a new case because he was protected by a twenty year guarantee.

The jeweler looked at the case, brushed it a little, then replied:

"Are you taking any medicine containing iron? If you are the iron probably has come out with perspiration and has tarnished the case."

The young man remembered he was taking medicine containing iron. With a few minutes' work the watch case was polished until it looked like new.—Indianapolis News.

Beards and Barristers.

In England barristers were at one time strictly prohibited from wearing beards. In the "Black Books" of Lincoln's Inn there is an order, dated "All Saints' day, 1542," which enacts that "Mr. Germyn, son of the Feiawship, shall before the xiith day of the instant moneth of November shave off his beards and afterwards to kepe the same in like sorte, upon the payne to be exiled from the Feiawship." A few years later, in 1557, the order was somewhat relaxed: "Item, that none under the degre of a knight or bencher ware any beards above iij weekes' growinge, upon payne of XLs. for every weeke after monycion."—London Graphic.

The American "Cottage."

Professors Greenough and Kittredge of Harvard in their book on the ways of English words point out that "cottage," in the strict sense of a laborer's dwelling, has never been adopted into popular American use because America has never really had the thing. The word in America has always had literary and sentimental associations and finally has come to be used for the most magnificent summer residences. This has gone much further than the use of the word in England to mean a villa. In America a "cottager" definitely signifies a person who is above staying at a boarding house or hotel and has his own summer home.—London Globe.

Small Duties.

Don't object that your duties are so insignificant that they are to be reckoned of infinite significance and alone important to you. Were it but the more perfect regulation of your apartments, the sorting aright of your clothes and trinkets, the arranging of your papers—"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might and all thy worth and constancy." Much more of your duties are of evidently higher, wider scope. If you have brothers, sisters, a father, a mother, weigh earnestly what claim does lie upon you, one-half of each, and consider if as the one thing needful to pay them honestly and nobly what you owe.—Thomas Carlyle.

A hard worked man is William Lurch
He is a busy slob.
He hustles round each day in search
Of some nice easy job.
—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"What kind of a husband will he make?"

"One that is perfectly safe for a woman to drive."—Puck.

A frog's front legs are short and slow,
His hind legs can't be beaten.
And yet his chief legs get away,
While the swift are caught and eaten.
—New York Mail.

An Elephant Bridge.

In ancient times in India a famous general used elephants to bridge a stream. He possessed a battalion of over 500 elephants, and, approaching a river where the stream was too rapid for his troops to cross, he ordered the elephants in and had them placed side by side, facing up and down the stream. Then planks were brought and laid from the back of one elephant to that of another, and over them the troops passed in safety, the only trouble experienced being the showers of water which the elephants kept up by sucking up the refreshing liquid in their trunks and tossing it over their bodies.

Modest Dan Hayes.

An old playbill of the Kilkenny Theater Royal for May 14, 1793, was a few years ago reprinted in the Western (England) Mail, and the following is an extract from it:

"The tragedy of 'Hamlet,' originally written and composed by the celebrated Dan Hayes of Limerick and inserted in Shakespeare's works."

The playbill concludes with the interesting notice that "no person whatsoever will be admitted into the boxes without shoes or stockings." It is probable that this claimant to the honor of the authorship of "Hamlet" is not so well known as his astounding claim might warrant.

A Queer Animal.

There is a queer animal in Central and South America which is so disguised that when hanging from the branch of a tree it looks for all the world like a part of the tree. It is called the sloth. Its feet are curved and armed with long, powerful, hook-like claws with which it hangs to the branches of trees, generally back downward. It has a green growth upon its back which makes it closely resemble the foliage of the trees. It feeds upon the leaves and fruits and seldom comes down to the ground.

Bathing the Eyes.

The daily "eye bath" is an excellent means of preserving the sight and beauty of the eyes and is particularly valuable for persons who motor a good deal, for nothing is more injurious to eyes than frequent contact with dust. Dissolve one teaspoonful of boracic acid powder in one pint of rosewater. Every night pour some of the lotion into a glass eye bath, add enough hot water to render it tepid and bathe each eye in turn by opening and shutting it in the lotion.

Port Hope Here Against Local Juniors

Ontaries Fresh From Their Easy Victory Over Lindsay Will Battle the Peterboro Youngsters at Brock St. Rink To-night—Opening Junior Game Should Be a Lively Attraction

The first junior battle of the season will be staged at the Brock street rink to-night when the Port Hope Ontarios will clash with the local O.H.A. team. With a fast sheet of ice ready and both of the teams in good condition it should be a real live struggle throughout the three periods. The Ontarios with a win over Bowmanville in an exhibition game and an O. H. A. victory over Lindsay, are decidedly confident, and they will undoubtedly trot out a pretty classy junior aggregation. The Petes have been practicing faithfully and their game with the Old Boys on Thursday night showed them in pretty fair condition. They are determined to give the Hopers a battle to the finish.

Four of the Petes are making their initial bow in O.H.A. hockey to-night, Legros and O'Connell of last year's Alert team and Jackson and Smyth of the Y.M.C.A. Junior City League team. The latter was spare for the juniors last season. The following line-up will represent the Petes to-night:

Goal, Legros.
R. defence, Long.
L. defence, Smyth.
Rover, Knapman.
Centre, Jackson.
R. wing, O'Connell.
L. wing, Richardson.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The Toronto News has the following comment on the Peterborough win in Toronto:

Peterborough looks like a good intermediate team, and would be right at home in senior company. "Ack" Hunter, the popular local player, is on the defence, and is going just as well as ever.

In Park, the centre player, Peterborough have a man good enough for any company. He is a clever stick handler, a good shot and has the size to carry him through.

Peterborough were without the services of Peter Spratt and Kelly, the good wing player. With Spratt on the defence with Hunter they will have a great septette and one that should be near the top in the intermediate.

The fans who like fast hockey with action all the way, cannot afford to miss the junior battle at Brock Street Rink to-night.

The Port Hope—Peterborough clash is called for 8.15, sharp. Lots of time to see the game after the election returns are in.

Of the team which defeated the Toronto Rowing Club Seniors in Toronto, New Year's night, two, Halpin and Dwyer, were graduates from last year's Juniors, and two others, Knapman and Cavanah, are still eligible in the Junior series.

The Port Hope win over Lindsay makes the Ontarios look like a classy aggregation. The Lake Shore gang and the young Petes should have a memorable battle at Brock Street Rink to-night.

The Peterborough Intermediates play in Picton tomorrow night. A win over the Canning Town representatives would give the Petes an edge in the district race and the boys are determined to make the double victors over Belleville go the full distance.

OLDHAM STILL HEADS THE FIRST DIVISION

Manchester City Is Only One Point Behind—Everton May Have a Say in the Final Issue—Saturday's Results.

There is a suggestion of things festive about several of the week-end soccer games in the Old Country. Glasgow Rangers came out of their hole unexpectedly and after walloping Celtic fell away to the "Jags." A good job the Tynecastle supporters will think, because Hearts dropped a point. With a game more played, Celtic are now three points behind the leaders, and being beggars to stick close when there is anything stiff to accomplish, Hearts must make sure that they do not throw away any more points, otherwise the league championship will slip from their grasp. At the moment they have a pretty good hold on the honours. Victory at last came the way of Dundee, but it was at the expense of the Hampden amateurs, a pretty easy bunch to circumvent this season.

On the English side it was a bad time for the league leaders. Oldham and Manchester City fought a drawn game before Oldham knuckled under to the "Trotters" at Bolton. It was a day of local "Derbies." The two Manchester clubs came together at Hyde Road, and there was the usual riot of partisan feeling. Neither faction had the pull at the end, as the battle was drawn. The same was the case at Sheffield, where the odds were laid on Wednesday. Oldham still tops the table, but Manchester City is only a point behind. Everton is creeping up, and may have a big say in the final issue.

RULES OF THE SENIOR CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE

The following are the rules that will govern the Senior Church Hockey League during this season:

1.—This League shall be known as the Senior Church Hockey League of the City of Peterborough.

2.—The object of this League is to promote the game among the young men of Church organizations for the love of the sport and promotion of clean play and upbuild of Christian manhood.

3.—Only men who belong to an organization connected with their Church can play for that Church. Each member of every team will bring a certificate to the Secretary certifying that he is a member of same organization in connection with that Church, on or before Dec. 1st, 1914.

4.—Any player who has played in the O.H.A. this season will not be eligible to play in this League.

5.—O. H. A. rules, with the exception of the time of play, will govern all of the games. Two twenty-minute periods will be played.

6.—A referee, or referees, will be appointed to look after all games, and for this they will be paid what the League deems a sufficient sum for service rendered.

7.—All protests must be handed into the Secretary of the League, in writing, within twenty-four hours of the game, accompanied by one dollar. This sum will be returned if the protest is granted; otherwise it will go into the League Treasury.

8.—Games shall not be postponed unless the postponment is granted by the Executive.

9.—The number of men on each team shall be limited to twelve.

10.—Each organization must pay an equal amount of League expenses. The money for the use of the Rink must be in the hands of the Treasurer before the first game is played.

11.—Every man must have his certificate in the hands of the Secretary one week before the first game.

12.—Once a man's certificate is in he will not be able to play for another team.

13.—The profits of the League, if any, will be distributed according to the discretion of the Executive.

Scheduled Games Commence To-night

The scheduled games begin at the Curling Rink to-night with all the ices in action. This morning several scratch games were played by the ladies who have returned to the sport with renewed enthusiasm. The scheduled games will run along for weeks, a process of elimination with the fittest surviving.

HOCKEY

Cobourg Sentinel-Star — About twenty are out practicing every evening for a place on the Cobourg O.H.A. Junior team. There are a number of good prospects in the lot and Manager Lavis should manage to get a good team to face Peterborough in their first game here on January 2. Cobourg's team are all youngsters, but they are fast and hard workers.

There will be a meeting of the Senior Church Hockey League executive at the Y.M.C.A. to-morrow, Tuesday night, at 7:30 o'clock. All certificates must be handed in before that time.

There will be a practice of the Charlotte St. Church senior Hockey team to-morrow night from 6 to 7. The following are asked to be out: Muthern, Sodes, R. Smyth, E. Smith, H. Austin, A. Suycke, F. Jobbitt, H. Grey, R. Neill, J. Murray, W. Heaslip, R. Cherrit, N. Staples, H. Skuce.

Hard Knock.

Dumpsbury and his wife do not get along very well together. As a general thing, Mrs. Dumpsbury gets the better of her husband. This was notably the case a few mornings ago, when, speaking of his father's family, he said:

"There were no girls in my father's family. All the children were boys. My mother was very much disappointed. She would rather have had them all girls."

"Your mother isn't the only woman that feels that way about it," was the significant reply.—New York World.

The Russian Peasant.

In "The Russian Army From Within" the author, Mr. Stevens, thus describes the appearance of the Russian peasant:

"The ordinary peasant, the man who has built up the Russian empire with his blood and his toil, is not a big man. He is of medium stature, broad shouldered and sturdy, with square forehead, square jaw, regular Aryan features and a flowing beard, unless he comes of Tartar or Finnish extraction. In short, the pure Russian is an Aryan, with a considerable admixture of Scandinavian blood in his veins, especially in the northern government, where the finest Russ or Russian types are found."

The Fools' Tower.

Vienna's "Fools' tower" was remarkable for its extraordinary collection of strange instruments and fetters used in the treatment of the insane of past ages. There was a curious machine in which unruly maniacs were swung until they were in a state of stupefaction and therefore quiet. And the same idea caused the invention of a wheel that revolved like that in a modern squirrel cage. There was a narrow upright box called an "English coffin," from which the patient could look out, but could not move. When it was built in 1784 the "Fools' tower" marked a great change for the better in the housing of the insane. From 200 to 250 patients occupied the 120 cells.

STUCK TO HIS SHIP.

Captain Loxley Who Went Down With Formidable Praised.

BRIXHAM, Devon., Jan. 4.—Survivors of the British battleship Formidable, which went down in the English Channel Friday, after having struck a mine or been torpedoed by a German submarine, have been brought ashore here. They relate that the ship was struck abaft the magazine. The explosion was terrific, but the magazine was not reached. Had this also blown up, the ship would have foundered without there being time to save anybody.

As the water rushed in the men on the Formidable hurried to the decks. They found that the vessel already had a heavy list to the starboard. The small boats were sent out. A cutter foundered and the men in her were drowned. A launch and a pinnace succeeded in getting away. Almost all the oars were broken in trying to prevent the small boats from being dashed to pieces against the side of the ship by the tremendous sea running. Captain Loxley and his signal men were still on the bridge when the battleship keeled over and went to the bottom.

TO COMPEL SERVICE?

Britain's Military Young Men May Not Enjoy Freedom Long.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A hint that the British Government contemplated the introduction of conscription for increasing the army and navy was dropped by Thomas J. Macnamara, Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, while speaking at the Browning Settlement yesterday afternoon.

Referring to the fact that there were many thousands of young men in the United Kingdom without dependents who had not answered the call to the colors, Mr. Macnamara said:—

"If they think they are going to enjoy a life of freedom at the other fellow's expense they won't enjoy it much longer."

The recruiting boom which commenced after the holidays continues. As the result of six open air meetings at Cardiff, addressed by wounded soldiers, there was an extraordinary rush to the recruiting offices Saturday evening and the recruiting officers were kept busy until an early hour Sunday morning.

PRAYERS FOR VICTORY.

Special Intercession Is Observed In Churches of Great Britain.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Large congregations crowded the London churches yesterday for the observance of intercession day and offered a special prayer for the success of the allied arms and in remembrance of those who have fallen on the battlefield.

Four services were held at St. Paul's Cathedral, the first beginning at eight o'clock in the morning and being conducted by the Rt. Rev. Arthur Ingram, the Bishop of London. The great cathedral was thronged throughout the day. Westminster Abbey also had a large attendance, the sermon being preached by Archdeacon Wilberforce.

At all the Church of England's places of worship a special form of service sanctioned by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York was used. At Westminster Cathedral, a large congregation assembled to take part in the special mass provided by the Missal to be used in time of war.

Similar services were held throughout the British Isles and in the overseas dominion.

Chief Libera. Whip Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Percy Holden Illingworth, chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons, and Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury, died yesterday of typhoid fever. He was born at Bradford in 1869.

In August, 1912, Mr. Illingworth was appointed chief Liberal whip, succeeding Lord Murray of Elibank, whose purchase of Marconi shares as an investment of the funds of the Liberal party was the subject of much discussion when a Parliamentary committee in June, 1913, investigated the scandals connected with Government wireless contracts.

Instead of resting it he went about his duties as usual, with the result that sinovitis set in.

Amicable Settlement Likely.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Publication in London of the text of the note concerning British interference with American shipping has allayed irritation there, which arose from false impressions of the tone in which the communication was phrased. It is believed there that, in view of the British Government's avowed intention of treating the question in the same friendly spirit as is shown by the American Government, an amicable adjustment will be arranged speedily.

Ellis, her captain. The ship sailed from Baltimore loaded with horses for the allies, but was forced to turn back into Newport News because of the fire.

HOUSE OPENS ON FEB. 4.

No New Speaker Likely at Coming Federal Session.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4. — The second war session of Parliament has been called for Thursday, Feb. 4th.

This date has frequently been forecasted unofficially but the formal proclamation was issued at a Cabinet council at noon Saturday.

The Prime Minister, in announcing this date, said there was no announcement to be made in regard to the by-elections.

The program as outlined previously, will consist almost exclusively of business connected with the war, the provision of supply for the forces, and tariff changes to overcome revenue deficiencies.

The fact that the House is to meet on a Thursday, disposes of the rumor that there is to be a new Speaker. Otherwise it would assemble on Wednesday, with the formal opening a day later.

Literacy Test Bill Passes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The immigration bill containing the restrictive literacy test for admission of aliens, which has been the obstacle in immigration reform legislation for the greater part of two national administrations, passed the Senate late Saturday by a vote of 50 to 7. The overwhelming majority was recorded despite the fact that President Wilson had indicated he would veto the measure, as did former President Taft, if it should come to him with the educational test included.

The vote in the Senate indicated that the bill could be repassed by more than the required two-thirds majority should the President reject the measure.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—There was a fair demand from overseas buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and the prices bid in some cases showed an advance of 3c per bushel, but as exporters were not disposed to sell, business was quiet. The local market for coarse grains continues quiet with a firm undertone. Flour is very firm, but the trade for it is small and export account was quiet. Demand for millfeed is fair at firm prices. Butter is strong and prices have an upward tendency, owing to the small receipts and the fact that stocks on spot last month decreased 27,870 packages to 3144. Cheese is quiet but the undertone of the market is strong. The stocks on store in spot at the end of last month were 19,441 boxes, as against 22,286 a year ago. The exports for the week were 16,248 boxes, as compared with 8023 for the same week a year ago. Receipts for the week were 510 boxes as against 1446 a year ago.

Eggs strong, as receipts are small and stocks on spot at the end of last month were reduced to 23,239 cases.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

$11,400,000 Levy on Goods Stirs Belgian Minister to Protest

Seizure in Violation of Fourth Hague Convention, He Tells State Department at Washington, Adding That German Policy Means "Ruin of Industry in Belgium"

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 31. — The Belgian Minister to-day filed with the State Department a protest against the requisitioning by German military authorities in Belgium of merchandise worth about 57,060,000f. ($11,400,000). He asserted that the policy of the Germans meant 'the ruin of industry in Belgium."

The protest set forth that the goods were not taken for the use of the German army and that consequently the seizure was in violation of the fourth Hague convention. The merchandise included cotton, rubber, tool machines, canned goods and metal.

The Belgian Legation issued this statement in connection with the protest:

According to the instructions of this government the Belgian Minister went to-day to the State Department and filed a protest against the following acts committed by the German authorities in Belgium:

"'The German authorities have put into requisition, against a single receipt and without mentioning the value of same, the following merchandise to be forwarded to Germany, and which belonged to private parties:

"'In Antwerp—Cotton of the value of 13,000,000f. ($2,600,000); rubber, 2,500,000f. ($500,000; woollens, 6,000,000f. ($1,200,000); leather, 10,000,000f. ($2,400,000.)

"'In Ghent—Cotton nets, flax and other raw materials, 8,500,000f. $1,700,000).

"'In Charleroi—Copper, 1,500,000f. ($300,000); tool machines, 12,000,000f. 92,400,000).

"'In Duffield — Nickel, 1,000,000f. ($200,000).

"'In Mechlin—Canned goods, 2,500,000f. ($500,000.)

"'These measures are in opposition with the articles 46 and 52 of the fourth convention of The Hague, in accordance with which private property must be respected, and requisition cannot be claimed otherwise than for the needs of the army of occupation. These measures involve the ruin of the industry in Belgium.'

"The Belgian Minister wishes to recall the attention to the fact that it has been said that the Belgian labouring people had refused to go back to work. One can easily notice the value of such an accusation. How could the labouring class work if all possibilities are taken away from them? No excuse can be given for this spoliation of private properties, which is expressly forbidden by the above mentioned article of the fourth convention of The Hague.

G. N. GORDON'S REPLY TO DR. MORRISON

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Dr. Morrison tries by 1913 figures to prove that the Board of Education rate of 9.75 for 1914 is not high. This is 1915. The communications from various town and city clerks, which I have, show Peterborough school rate for 1914 to be extraordinarily high and nearly the highest in Ontario.

I repeat that the Board meets in an inner room behind three sets of doors in the Toronto Loan & Savings Co.'s office. There is no accommodation for the public there—except standing room and very little of that. There is no accommodation for the Press except a discarded desk large enough for one man to use—chucked off into a corner. Not five per cent. of the public know how to work a passage into this little back room.

Dr. Morrison says that the Board does not meet for gallery play. It certainly does not. The Board apparently does not look for a place in the sun. The Board should not accept free, from any such wealthy and influential corporation, any concessions. Let its meetings be announced to be held in its own buildings and let the ratepayers know what is going on.

Re deputations—Dr. Morrison says the cost was small. Why should public men who desire to fit themselves for office, charge the obtaining of such information to the ratepayers? If these deputations were for obtaining some material benefit directly for the ratepayers there would be no objection, but it is for the trustees' own benefit to improve their positions.

Re supplies—My dictionary states the meaning of supply is "the act of supplying; that which is supplied or supplies a want," so I presume that is a fair meaning to attach to the word. Dr. Morrison says all supplies were bought by tender. Will he state that the blinds for the East and West Ward schools were bought by tender? Will he deny that local merchants tried to submit prices and could not because a favourite was to get the supplying? Will he state that the same blinds could not have been purchased from one local merchant for at least $50.00 less than the Board paid? Will he say no member of the Board was directly or indirectly interested in this contract?

Will he say that tenders were asked for the insurance supplied the Board for its buildings and that no member has profited by it?

Will he say that at committee meetings reporters have not been told, time and again, to wait outside this inner room and that they would be admitted later? Did he not go to the Review to try to stifle the reporter's report of a recent meeting when the reporter told the truth? Will he say that a certain teacher was not invited to state her case and before the same meeting a typewritten resolution had already been prepared to put through and which went through?

Have not Trustee Smith and a couple of other members done their best to prevent such things, but were overcome by the "regular" majority?

In conclusion, this time, let me say that if Dr. Morrison desired to vindicate the action of his friends he should have stayed in the fight, and not sought shelter by retirement. He slings a little mud at me as a politician—well Dr. Morrison, I never tried to railroad a political resolution past a Church Board under the guise of religious conviction, as was at one time attempted at the Charlotte Street Methodist Church by a gentleman with whom you are very intimately acquainted

Yours truly,

G. N. GORDON.

The Exportation of War Munitions

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.— The two largest German-American and Irish-American societies in the United States joined before the House for Committee to-day to fight for Volmor Bartholdt's resolution to prohibit the exportation of war munitions to Europe. The Ancient Order of Hiberians was represented by Joseph McLaughlin of Philadelphia, the national president, and Francis C. Clark, of Philadelphia.

A General Reduction In Wages

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—Fourteen thousand employees of the Grand Trunk Railway and several thousand of the Grand Trunk Pacific have been notified that there will be a general reduction in wages from April first, owing to the falling off of business. Labour leaders of the men have notified the company they will on no account accept such reduction and a strike or lockout is in prospect.

THE KAISER

Dear Editor:

January first, fifty-two years ago, I fought as a heavy artillery soldier at the Battle of Galveston, which was the most decisive battle fought during the United States Civil War. I was a conscript of the Southern Confederacy. JOHN BELL.

The Kaiser is the devil's imp,
He made the Belgians to limp,
He is the very devil's pimp,
In this European war.

His grandmother, Victoria,
How would she feel if here to-day?
Her agony she would display
In this European war.

The Kaiser's work at Scarborough,
Bombarding children, you know;
His warfare is so very low,
In this European war.

Were Victoria on earth, now,
The sweat would be upon her brow,
To see the Kaiser and his frau,
In this European war.

A scrap of paper is not much
In the eyes of the German Dutch,
The devil gives his little touch,
In this European war.

Our Empire's history has been good,
On scraps of paper she has stood,
Her honour is well understood,
In this European war.

God made the devil and made hell
So that all men would fear Him well,
Kaiser and company did rebel,
In this European war.

For peace, King George stood to the last,
A scrap of paper seemed a vast,
The Kaiser's plans were made and past
In this European war.

The Kaiser would be in great glee,
To be supreme upon the sea,
The whole wide world would sorry be,
In this European war.

The Kaiser will have to give in,
We're in the war and we must win;
Our Allies will go to Berlin,
In this European war.

The Kaiser did begin the war,
He wants to whip the Empire's tar,
The Kaiser sets the world ajar,
In this European war.

The German fleet is like a fat
That hides away from the old cat,—
The Kiel Canal was built for that,
In this European war.

Some clergymen in Germany,
Who pray to God for victory,
In spite of all their treachery
In this European war.

Our Father which art in Heaven,
Who gave us Thy good Commandments, Ten,
Now help our allied soldier men,
In this European war.

Our Empire is for lasting peace,
That war on earth may ever cease,
God grant her power may increase
In this European war.

Send Thou, O Lord, to every place,
Swift messengers before Thy face,
The heralds of Thy wondrous grace
In this European war.

Senatorship For Lindsay

The Lindsay Warder says:

It is currently reported around town that Lindsay stands a fair chance of having a senator appointed from the ranks of the Conservative party, and one of our prominent Conservatives is now making a canvass for the position.

In pasing those very highly prized bouquets around there is no reason why this town should not be favoured with some of the beautiful things which are presented to the loyal supporters of the cause of Conservatism as we can boast of having in our midst the most staunch supporters of the Liberal-Conservative cause to be found in Ontario.

There are many vacancies in the Senate caused by the death of a few of the aged legislators during the year 1914, which will in all probability be filled in the near future.

What about Peterborough? Are there no Conservatives here who are worthy of a senatorship?

German Prisoners Make Friends With Their Guards In France

They Work Cheerily on Road Repairs in Region of Saint-Pol, Captors Sharing Cigarettes With Them and Whiffs From Pipes

SAINT POL, via Paris, Jan. 1. — German prisoners of war work cheerfully at the side of their armed French guardians in repairing the much damaged national highways in this region, just to the rear of the colossal battle front. The prisoners are on the best of terms with their captors, who good naturedly share cigarettes, whiffs from their pipes and other luxuries with their old-time foes.

The prisoners remain only a short time in this neighbourhood. As soon as a sufficient number is taken to fill a train the captives are despatched to some town on the coast or in the interior, or embarked for Algeria.

In this region there is much activity from morning to night on account of the passage of great supply convoys, interspersed with columns of troops proceeding gaily to the front to take their turns in the trenches. The soldiers march at a swinging gait toward the firing line. Without exception they express a preference to the trenches rather than remaining idle. While the men are held in reserve, a short distance to the rear, they have nothing to occupy their time, which drags wearily. They say that aside from the time when they are sleeping off fatigue each minute seems like an hour. The postal service is very uncertain, and they rarely receive news.

While the men are in the trenches, sometimes only fifteen yards from the Germans, they are always kept on the keen edge, with every faculty alert.

Almost every day there is a change in the weather. To-day is marked by a hard frost, turning the roads into long skating rinks on which the heavy motor trucks are almost useless. Persons afoot are obliged to take to the fields beside the roads. Thousands of men are engaged in throwing earth over the glassy surfaces in order to avoid interruption of the transportation of supplies. Before the frost set in the roads were like quagmires, owing to the frequent rains.

Under the extremely trying conditions which prevail the men and their commanders are remarkably cheerful and confident, and never utter a word of complaint.

Along the battle front in the region of Arras and St. Eloy, the position of the troops has scarcely varied a foot from the zigzag lines which have been occupied for three months. The portance to the Allies, who are holding portance to the Allies, whoare holding it with remarkabde tenacity although opposed by great forces of Germans under the command of General Count von Arnim, commander of the Fourth army corps, and the Crown Prince of Bavaria.

Every moment is a perilous one when Arras is approached, since the Germans have marked accurately the ranges along the highways. Any movement along these roads brings a salvo of artillery fire.

France To Have 1,800 New War Aeroplanes By Spring

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.— By spring France will have at least eighteen hundred new aeroplanes with which to carry on her aerial warfare against Germany according to Pedro Chapa, a Mexican aviator, who arrived in New York on board the Carpathia, of the Cunard line. Mr. Chapa, who has been abroad for four years perfecting himself in all phases of aerial navigation, is returning to his home in Monterey, where he will engage in building aeroplanes for the Mexican government and instructing aviators.

"I have talked with French aviators who have been at the front," said Mr. Chapa, "and of course they cannot tell very much about the work of their corps, but I think them the greatest in the world and I think that few of the accounts of their exploits and bravery are exaggerated.

"Voisin, one of the largest manufacturers of aeroplanes in France, has been given carte blanche by the French government and has enlarged his plants at Paris and Lyons so that he will be able to turn out more than one thousand war aeroplanes by spring. These will be biplanes, armoured and equipped with an extremely heavy quick firing gun.

"Besides these heavy machines Voisin has orders for about eight hundred fast monoplanes capable of a speed of more than one hundred and twenty miles an hour. These machines will not carry rapid firing guns, but are to be equipped with a device for liberating steel darts which have been found so effective. All of the aeroplanes will have carriers with a capacity of ten bombs. These scout craft are of the Caudron and Moran-Saulnier types. Besides Voisin numerous other manufacturers are busy building the greatest aerial fleet ever brought together."

Improvements in The Oriental Hotel

The main hallways on the first floor of the Oriental Hotel have just been finished with new hardwood flooring, which gives a pleasing and fresh-looking appearance to the halls. The hardwood floors of a number of the bedrooms off the main hall have also been renewed and polished. A hundred yards of special rich Wilton runner carpet has been laid down in the centre of the two main halls of the first storey. This carpet is of a fine, durable quality, Bokhardt design, with terra cotta round, and was supplied by Messrs. Richard Hall & Son, who had it specially made for the Oriental by a Canadian manufasturer.

SPECIAL PRAYERS IN THE CATHOLIC CHURCHES OF CITY

And Throughout The Diocese Under Bishop O'Brien's Administration—Sharing in Nation's Petition

A letter from Bishop O'Brien was read in the three Catholic churches of the city yesterday announcing the Governor-General's request to all the churches of the Dominion for special prayers for peace and success. A similar letter was sent to every church in the diocese of Peterborough, with instructions that the Litany of the Saints be offered for this intention. At the Sacred Heart church, Rev. J. J. O'Brien dispensed with the customary sermon on the Gospel for the Sunday and spoke instead on the subject of of the Bishop's letter. He stated that prayers for peace on the Bishop's direction were included in the intentions of the mass every day in the week when their rubrics permitted. Father O'Brien asserted that there would certainly be no more fervent response to the Governor-General's request than from the Catholic subjects in Canada. The freedom of worship found under the Union Jack was not equalled under any other flag. And in no part of the British Empire did Catholics enjoy more freedom and security than in Canada. Father O'Brien said he had no patience with the individual who would attempt to open old sores which had healed over and were forgotten. Mutual confidence and understanding had been re-established by years of living and striving together. The Catholic church taught obedience and lawful authority, and every Sunday in the prayers before mass Catholics prayed for the protection and guidance of our rulers and those entrusted with the governing of the country. Father O'Brien remarked that it was gratifying to know that the Catholic province of Quebec had responded to the call for men in a manner worthy of its best traditions and that elsewhere there had been a generous answer to the call for recruits. In the same manner would the Duke of Connaught's request to Canadians for special prayers be met by the Catholic people throughout the Dominion.

MORE SURVIVORS OF FORMIDABLE

Cutter With 50 Men Reaches Dorset Village—Second Explosion Killed Many.

LONDON, Jan. 3.— Another cutter from the British battleship Formidable, which was sunk in the English Channel Friday, has reached Lyme-Regis, Dorsetshire, with fifty men, making ga total of 201 survivors out of a crew of 780.

When the cutter left the Formidable she had sixty or more men aboard, but all but fifty succumbed to exposure, having been in an open boat for some twenty hours in a violent storm.

All the survivors were in a state of exhaustion owing to exposure.

Bath Trains For Russian Soldiers

LONDON, Dec. 16.—H. Hamilton Fyfe, the Daily Mail's correspondent at Petrograd, sends the following:

It stood on a railway siding, light green and mysterious, steaming like a kettle on the boil. Soldiers buzzed around and in and out of it. They looked at it with wonder, with reverent affection in their gaze. There was a difference between those who cam out and those who went in. They went in grimy, seamed with the squalor of campaigning. They emerged shining with cleanliness. Their uniforms, too, had lost the depressing look which comes to clothes that have been worn and slept in day and night for many days and nights on end. They carried themselves with conscious pride.

Have you been unable to wash or take your clothes off for a week? If so, you can appreciate the acute luxury of bathing again and putting on clean linen. Five days is the longest I have endured. At the end of those five days I wallowed in hot water for an hour. Imagine what it means to these Russian soldiers, who have gone without a bath for months, to have brought to them in the field a bathing establishment fitted with every convenience. That is what this long train of twenty green vans is—a bath train.

It surprises you perhaps that Russian peasant soldiers should want to bathe. You have never been in a Russian village, then? Never seen little wooden houses steaming (just as the train steams) on Saturday afternoon? Never been in to see the villagers, men and women together, stark naked, and thinking no harm, enjoying their weekly vapour bath? Upon great stones, heated till they glow, water is thrown. The steam fills the little wooden house. It opens all the pores of the skin. The damp heat will make your head or my head feel like bursting. We are not used to it as the peasants are. This is the chief enjoyment of their lives.

They beat one another with handfuls of twigs. They jump and roll about in an ecstacy of pleasure. Sometimes it is said they run out and then throw themselves in the snow so as to put a keener edge to their pleasure when they dash back again into the steam. They soap themselves and scrub themselves until they have scoured every particle of dirt out of their skins. And then too often they spoil the effect by putting on the same dirty clothes which they took off!

Orillia Among Sufferers From Fire

Poultry Show Was Being Held in the Building at the Time.

ORILLIA, Jan. 2.—A fire at the Orillia Armoury on Wednesday morning leaves as its result the serious burning of Mr. Percy Bacon, son of William Bacon, South Orillia, damage of about $500 to the building, and also the destruction of money and papers belonging to the Orillia Poultry Association, whose annual Show is in progress.

Mr. Bacon is the secretary of the Poultry Association and yesterday morning was just entering the room in the west of the Armoury building when the fire broke out. It is supposed that the room, shut up as it was, became overheated, thus creating combustible gases, which exploded when the door was open and a draft caused. Mr. Bocan, when he opened the door, was confronted by a mass of flames. No smoke or other sign of fire had been in evidence before. He, however, made a dash for a satchel which contained papers and entrance fees belonging to the Association. He was badly burned on both hands and the hair was completely burned from his head and the scalp scorched. His condition fortunately is not dangerous. It is impossible to say how much of the money has been destroyed completely, but a large number of bank bills are partly burned.

The room in which the fire started is badly burned, but the damages will not be more than about $800.

None of the birds on exhibit were damaged in the slightest.

The judges were at work, when Mr. Jas. Baptie, of Springville, discovered smoke issuing from underneath the office doors. He at once summoned the caretaker, who coupled up the hose which is in the building and opened up the door to find the place all in flames. The stream was effective in subduing the blaze, but not before considerable damage had been done.

Stars For The Week

Mercury is now very close to the sun behind which it will pass on Tuesday.

On Thursday Venus will be at "perihelion," her nearest to the sun in her orbit. On Friday the moon will be at last quarter.

Venus, if viewed through the telescope at this time will appear very much like a crescent moon a few days old.

Mars is now about 225,000,000 miles from the earth, but is still too close to the sun, which it passed to the west a few days ago, to be readily seen.

Saturn is very brilliant just now almost directly overhead, and Jupiter will linger for a few weeks before going down in the early evening western sky.

Sirius.

The bright star Sirius, which now appears rather low down in the south-east in the early evening, is the chief star of the constellation Canis Major or the Great Dog, which has been considered from earliest times to be one of the dogs the giant Orion took with him when he went hunting. Because of the fact that Sirius is so situated in the heavens as to be visible from all parts of the habitable globe, its rising and setting was regularly tabulated by the Chaldeans centuries before our era, and the Egyptian records show this star to have figured prominently in the events of that nation's history, it's sign frequently appearing on the monuments and temple walls of the Nile country.

Sirius was worshipped in the valley of the Nile long before Rome was heard of. The astronomer Lockyer found seven of the Egyptian temples so arranged that the light from this brilliant star in its rising or setting was made to fall directly on the inner altar. Victor Hugo, in "The Vanished City," thus alluded to the might of this kingly star:

"When like an Emir of cosmic power
Sirius appears and on the the horizon black
Bids countless stars persue their mighty track."

R. Snoggs is Critical

Sir,—What is the use of all this talk? You Canadians only find it when you are charged with anything. You "take on" the loftiness of innocence. Well, only cheap guys, as we say at home, are flicked with that kind of bluff. Not that Canadians are cheap. No! But no one ever has an opinion here that I can see, but his own money interest. Anything bigger than the grab bag is almost unknown. That is the curse of new countries, where the natives are a bit unwashed yet, don't you know. Time will cut that away.

FIFTY SURVIVORS FROM THE FORMIDABLE COME ASHORE

After Twenty Hours in an Open Warship's Cutter 50 Sailors Reach Lyme-Regis on the Dorset Coast in a Terribly Exhausted Condition

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Another cutter from the British battleship Formidable, which was sunk in the English Channel Friday, has reached Lyme-Regis, Dorsetshire, with 50 men, making a total of 201 survivors out of a crew of 780.

When the cutter left the Formidable she had 80 or more men aboard, all but 50 succumbed to exposure, having been in an open boat for some 24 hours in a violent storm.

All the survivors were in a state of exhaustion after their terrible experience. They declare that there is little hope of any further survivors, as the tremendous sea which was running at the time would make it impossible for men to live long enough to be picked up by passing vessels, while many of those clinging to the wreckage were undoubtedly killed when the second explosion occurred.

The Admiralty has not issued any statement in reference to the cause of the disaster or where it occurred.

The British Admiralty on Saturday issued a list containing the names of Captain Arthur N. Loxley and thirty-four other officers of the Formidable, who, it says, must be presumed to have been lost in the disaster, as they have not been reported among the saved. The list includes nine midshipmen.

Gunner Horrigan and Boatswain Taylor are among the surviving officers.

GENERALS ARE TO BLAME

German Outrages Proven By Official Document Of Commanders.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Recent findings of the Belgian commission investigating alleged violations of the usages of war by the German army have been presented to Secretary Bryan and were made public here last night by Emmanuel Havenith, the Belgian Minister. The report asserts: "That Belgian civilians have been wantonly shot and Belgian towns ruthlessly destroyed, systematically, and by order of the German commanding officers."

Proclamations issued by high officers of the German army are quoted in support of the findings. One of those reproduced, said to have been issued at Liege by Gen. von Bualow, after stating that the inhabitants of Ardenne had made a surprise attack upon German troops, announced:

"It is with my consent that the commander-in-chief has ordered the whole town to be burned, and that about 100 people have been shot. I bring this fact to the knowledge of the city of Liege, so that the citizens may realise the fate with which they are menaced if they adopt a similar resistance."

Summing up its report, the commission says:

"After such proclamations, who will be surprised at the murders, arson, pillage and destruction committed by the German army wherever they met with resistance?

"If a German army corps or patrolling party is received at the entrance to a village by a volley from soldiers of the enemy troops who are afterwards forced to retire, the whole population is held responsible. The civilians are accused of having fired or having co-operated with the defence, and without authority the place is given over to pillage and flames, a part of the inhabitants are massacred.

"The odious acts which have been committed in all parts of the country have a general character, throwing the responsibility upon the whole German army. It is simply the application of a preconceived system, the carrying out of instructions, which have made the enemy's troops in Belgium a 'horde of barbarians and a band of incendiaries'."

India has trained runners who can cover more than 300 miles a day.

He Knows Better Now

Experience of a Clergyman Who Thought He Could Run a Newspaper

The other man's job always looks easy. Ministers believe they could run the newspapers far more successfully than they are conducted at present. Once in a while one of them tries it. A Pasadena clergyman who was given an opportunity to put his ideas into practice and worked at the task a week on the last day wrote:

"My time is almost up as I pen this last line; my hand is almost paralyzed; by brain is befuddled and I am free to confess that I am right glad to vacate the holy spot. Such rush and riot and disarray! Such a jumble of potpouri; it strikes me as the effort to bring order out of chaos, and to do it lightning quick.

"I am reminded of the memorable words, 'The earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the waters.' Never shall I criticise newspaper men more. I shall pray for them. They will have my heart's forbearance henceforth and forever. They are the hardest worked, shortest lived, poorest paid brain workers on this weary old world of ours."

NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS

St. Andrew's Sunday Evening Service

The New Year is the most opportune time in which to make new resolutions.

"Resolution," says John Foster, "is all powerful. He that resolves upon any great and good end, has, by that very resolution, scaled the chief barrier to it. He will find such resolution removing difficulties, searching out or making means, giving courage for despondency, and strength for weakness, and like the star to the wise men of old, ever guiding him nearer and nearer to perfection."

With some such thought in his mind, the Rev. Mr. Rollins took the first opportunity that presented itself of impressing upon his congregation the importance of making suitable resolutions to guide them during the year upon which we have entered. Experience teaches that a good resolution is a great help in time of need, and, during his discourse, he never failed to emphasize the fact that the year 1915 will be the most momentous in the world's history, and, therefore, we must resolve every day of this year to fortify our souls by prayer to God.

He took as his text Luke 16:4—"I am resolved what to do"; but before ennumerating what should be done he cautioned his hearers against foolish resolutions, such as that of the rich man in the parable, who said: "This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry." But God said unto him: "Thou fool."

This man ignored God, and his blunder was so great that God was constrained to call him a fool.

In preparing this sermon Mr. Rollins fully realized the responsibility of his task, that of guiding his people aright. We should make resolutions of such a kind that we will receive no condemnation from God for having made them.

First resolution: I will seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness. This he characterized as altogether safe and wise to make. This year we should give our souls a chance to let God within us live. God is in every man. The Kingdom of God is within us. We should see that the things of the inner life make for righteousness. Give Him first place.

Second: I will make, during 1915, no provision for the flesh to fulfil the lust thereof. It is necessary that we make provision for the flesh, for the condition of the body reacts on the soul, but we should make no provision for the flesh to fulfil the lust thereof. This year is going to be one of high chivalry with us. Wherever we go all interests of life will be savoured with it.

Third: I will keep my heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life. In this land there are soldiers at the present time scattered throughout the country, guarding water works, bridges, canals, railways. Why? Because of the importance of these things to the life of the people. If this is necessary in connection with public works, how much more important that we as individuals should resolve to guard our hearts, to see that things are not given place that are enemies of our society, our homes and our churches. Things which spoil the life of the individual are a detriment to the life of the community.

Fourth: With all our getting, get understanding. Humility is a treasure to be sought. When we judge a man wrongly; when we attribute to the actions of others understanding, we fall short of the fine interpretations of life. To be able to rightly interpret the actions of men is indeed a great blessing, but it rewires a patient heart, and an understanding heart, a mind like unto Christ. If this spirit flows into our lives it will surely flow out in blessings.

Fifth: As members of the Christian Church would we not do well to be resolved that we will try very sincerely to make the membership of the church tell in introducing religion into society, instead of worldiness into the church. Fully seventy-five per cent. of his hearers, Mr. Rollins affirmed, were known as members of Christian churches. We should take that seriously, and make the connection an influence for the betterment of society. We owe that to our profession. It would be a good thing for the cause of Christ in our homes and in our city.

Then, if we are wise, there are a number of minor resolutions which we might make because of weaknesses in ourselves. For example, bad habits, such as the use of strong drink, exhibitions of temper, hurting the feelings of others. Any of these are fraught with danger, therefore, we should face them, so that at the end of the year they may be eradicated altogether.

In concluding, Mr. Rollins referred to the condition in which we find ourselves, that of war. Sorrow is flooding the world. What resolutions are we going to form because of these new Conditions? Are we going to shirk, surely not? So far as we are concerned we should carry ourselves as becometh a people at war. We should not fritter away our resources. We should not be indifferent to what our Nation is doing. We should seek to cultivate the sentiments our soldiers are living out in the trenches. We should be prepared for sacrifice, even "All we Possess."

"O God of love, O King of peace!
Make wars throughout the world to cease;
The wrath of sinful men restrain,
Give peace O God, give peace again!

A Carload of Horses Shipped

From Lindsay on New Year's Day —For Army Purposes.

LINDSAY, Jan. 2.—A carload of horses for army purposes, comprising nineteen in number, was shipped via C.P.R. to Toronto on New Year's Day.

Major-General Hughes chanced to be in town and made an inspection of the animals, congratualting Purchasing Officer Mr. B. L. McLean on the selection of such choice animals. Without one exception they all passed the Minister's close scrutiny.

Mr. McLean will be in Picton on Tuesday next, Cobourg on Wednesday and Fenelon Falls on Thursday, taking in Kinmount on Friday.

Many purchases were made by Mr. McLean last week in Belleville, Hastings, Campbellford and Peterborough.

Speculation As To The Result

To the Editor:

Sir,—The battle of Jan. 4th will be over by the time your paper comes out this evening, and what will the electors have done? Will they vote into power men who produce nothing but interest on their own money and possessions, or will they elect men who work and produce or practice professions. The day of the man who manages the municipality for the "interest" he takes in it and gets out of it, is gone by. We want the man who takes an interest in the good of the people and not in their own pockets.

Yours truly,
Worker.

THE NOVEMBER LABOUR REPORT

As Contained in the Last Issue of the Labour Gazette

The November report of labour conditions in Peterborough, as taken from the Labour Gazette, is given below. It summarizes what has appeared in these columns from time to time:

Labour conditions during November were very quiet in most lines of business, with large numbers of skilled and unskilled workers out of employment. There was very little building going on, the only large work being the Barrie building, where some 30 to 40 men were working, and the Methodist Church, where about fifty men were employed. There was considerable repair work being done on old buildings.

The Canadian General Electric Company proposes to expend $150,000 on a plant and equipment to manufacture electric locomotives. The Company has secured several large contracts for the manufacture of electric locomotives, including a big order for the London and Port Stanley electric line.

The only civic work going on was the construction of the outfall sewer. About eighteen men were engaged on the work, these being changed every two weeks. The scale of wages averaged about $1.90 a day. The Board of Works will start some sewer construction, and this will give employment to about fifty men.

Farmers were very busy with their fall work and getting their produce to market. Potatoes were a good crop. Poultry was very plentiful, owing to the high prices of feed. Eggs were rather scarce and continued to advance in price.

Lumbering was quiet. There have not been so many men sent to the camps as there were last year. Most of the mills have shut down for this season, although they had plenty of logs to keep them going for some time.

In the iron industries there was very little doing, but the woollen mills are running night and day, also the harness factory. This activity was caused by contracts for the militia department.

The Grand Trunk Railway, which has been laying eighty-pound rails between Belleville and Lindsay, has been forced to cease operations on account of having exhausted the supply of rails available when the work had been carried about half way. It was expected, however, that an additional supply of rails would be obtained next month and the work continued.

Schools Opened This Morning

After Holiday Festivities Young People Revert to Studies.

After two weeks' holidays, which included Christmas and New Year's Day, the pupils and teachers of the various educational institutions of this city returned to their studies today. The Public schools, Separate schools, Collegiate Institute and Normal school all opened their doors for another term this morning, and the pupils were seen again flocking to their respective schools. A large number of both teachers and scholars who spent the holidays out of the city returned Saturday, yesterday or this morning to town in order to be present at the first session of the school. A large number of College students who have spent the past couple of weeks in the city have either returned or will be leaving to-day to resume their studies.

PLOT WAS FRUSTRATED

Germans in United States Had Hoped to Get Fraudulent Passports

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Through a series of arrests in this city and one in Philadelphia on Saturday, there has been brought to light what the Department of Justice alleges was a well organized conspiracy to enable German army officers and reservists to return to Germany on fraudulently obtained American passports.

Most important of the arrests, in the belief of Government officials, is the one made in Philadelphia, the prisoner there being Maurice Deiches, prominent as a lawyer and politician in this city.

That still more important developments might follow, however, was intimated by Government authorities, as it was said that others in high positions were associated with the attorney, in his alleged activities in behalf of Germans anxious to return to their native land to join the army of the empire.

Four of the men made prisoners were Germans taken off the outgoing steamer Bergenafjord, bound for Norway, and alleged to have had fraudulent passports in their possession. One of them was an army officer, Lieut. Wilhelm Arthur Sachse. He was paroled. The other three were German reservists who were held under bond. Others arrested were Carl Ruroede, a former steamship agent, charged with the others with conspiracy to defraud the Government through the use of American passports. Ruroede's 17-year-old son, John Arthur, alleged associate of Ruroede, and four men are detained as material witnesses.

HOLD IS WEAKENING

The Germans Are Being Forced From the Belgian Sand dunes

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 4.—The latest news from the operations in the vicinity of Ostend clearly indicates that, although the Germans are making terrific efforts to retain the last of the sand dunes and the rougher land in the immediate vicinity of Westende and Lombaertsyde, there is every reason to believe that their hold is weakening owing to the tremendous attack on their strong positions in the dunes. Also a threatening advance is being steadily but slowly carried out by the allies.

The German position in the dunes has been made tremendously strong, the enemy fully realising that they must hold on at all costs or be compelled to fight in the lower lying land that stretches eastward to Ostend itself, or beat a hasty retreat to Ostend.

They have been fighting with wonderful energy and courage to prevent the definite abandonment of their attempt to reach Calais.

It is fairly evident, then, that the evacuation of St. Georges is recognised as final on their part, as they are now concentrating a very heavy fire on that place to prevent its occupation, as that would very seriously threaten their position on the coast.

The allies, however, are taking a firm hold and are advancing on Lombaertsyde.

WEDDING BELLS

MELITA, Man., Dec. 30—The home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Thompson was the scene of a very pretty wedding to-day, when their daughter, Nellie Asenath, was united in marriage to James Payson Elliott, of this place. Promptly on time and accompanied by the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Maude Rooks, cousin of the bride, the bride entered the room on the arm of her father, looking lovely in her wedding gown of white satin, trimmed with embroidered net and carrying a large bouquet of white carnations. Little Miss Myrtle Thompson was flower girl and carried a basket of lovely carnations.

The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Forbes Robertson of Melita Presbyterian Church, and after the happy couple had received the congratulations of their friends all partook of a daintily prepared luncheon.

The bride, who is one of the popular young ladies of the district, and formerly of the teaching staff of the Melita Public School, was the recipient of many beautiful gifts from her hosts of friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a brooch set with pearls, to the pianist, a gold pin set with amythest, and to the flower girl a string of pearl beads.

The happy couple left for a short honeymoon trip, via the Canadian Pacific Railway, to points East, as far as Winnipeg. For the journey, the bride donned a travelling costume of brown velvet, with picture hat trimmed with large white plume. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Elliott will make their home on their farm, south of Melita.

The groom was formerly a resident of Cavan Township, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Elliott and brother of Mr. Bruce Elliott of Cavan.

Great Work of Coldstreams

Peterborough Policeman With the Famous Regiment

120 Cooper's Terrace, Abbey Mills, Stratford. London, England.

Dear Sirs,—I am sending you a cutting from "The Daily Telegraph," which I think may be of some interest to your readers. P. C. Downes is a sergeant in the regiment referred to, and is no doubt with them on active service. I met him towards the latter part of September and he informed me he expected to go to the front at any moment.

I myself lived in Peterborough two years and was well acquainted with him when I left in July, hence I take the liberty of sending you this.

Yours faithfully,
W. H. Brown.

The clipping follows:

"Hardships and Strain."

The following letter has been received by the Colonel Commanding the Coldstream Guards from Brigadier-General the Earl of Cavan, Commanding 4th (Guards) Brigade, British Expeditionary Force:

"The Officer Commanding,
"Coldstream Guards—

"The two battalions of the regiment, 2nd and 3rd, with the 1st temporarily attached to the 3rd Battalion, move back to-night to rest and refit in an area free from shell fire.

"I should like to put on record the fact that, for these last four weeks, Oct. 20 to Nov. 20, they have held their line intact under hardships and strain that it is impossible to describe. Since Oct. 31, when I was ordered off to protect the right of the British line with the Grenadier and Irish Guards, the two battalions have been under Colonel Pereira, as Colonel Fielding was wounded. It is not too much to say that the whole safety of the line has depended on their staunchness, and truly worthily have they held it.

"Their trenches, dug on a hill full of natural springs have been undrainable and constantly full of water above the knee for twenth-three days. The gale of about Nov. 2 cleared the wood in which they were of every particle of cover, the trees having been all pieced through by shrapnel and bullets. Hand grenades thrown at them were, on one occasions when they did not explode, picked up and hurled back again, and they finally rejoined the brigade on the right flank of the part of the British line on Nov. 17 in as good heart as the day they left England.

"I am more proud to be their brigadier than any words could possibly express, and I owe to them undoubtedly, with their comrades of the Grenadier and Irish Guards, the satisfaction of handing over our line to the French intact and unconquered.

OVER 1200 BIRDS EXPECTED AT THE ANNUAL POULTRY SHOW

The annual show of the Peterborough Poultry Association, which begins in the Market Hall to-morrow, Tuesday, at 1 o'clock, promises to be the banner show in the history of the Association. At least 1,200 birds are expected and the entries have been coming in fast. The splendid display of over 20 silver cups, gold pieces, prize medals, etc., in R. Denne's window, gives an indication of the growth and development of the Association. The exhibition has created considerable attention and there will undoubtedly be an influx of visitors at the different sessions. Miss Yates, of the Ontario Agricultural College, will give lectures and demonstrations each afternoon and evening. The judges will be Messrs. J. Bennett, Toronto, and J. H. Minshall, Brantford.

A Costly Funeral.

The most costly state funeral which has ever taken place was perhaps that of Alexander the Great. A round million was spent in laying Alexander to his rest. The body was placed in a coffin of gold filled with costly aromatics, and a diadem was placed on the head. The funeral car was embellished with ornaments of pure gold, and its weight was so great that it took eighty-four mules more than a year to convey it from Babylon to Syria.

A Curiosity in Duels.

In the history of dueling it has seldom happened that neither adversary would fire upon the other. Such a case occurred at Moscow, where, after an altercation in a tramway car, a young staff lieutenant challenged a retired general of over sixty to a duel.

The challenge was accepted, and an encounter with pistols was arranged in a wood. When the signal to fire was given, to the great surprise of the seconds, neither duelist fired.

The former explained afterward that he could not risk destroying a young life over a triviality, while the lieutenant said that it was impossible to fire upon an opponent who had not raised his arm.

A Homemade Barometer.

Take one-quarter ounce of pulverized camphor, sixty-two grains of pulverized nitrate of potassium and thirty-one grains of nitrate of ammonia and dissolve in two ounces of alcohol. Put the solution in a long, slender bottle, closed at the top with a piece of bladder containing a pin hole to admit air. When rain is coming the solid particles will tend gradually to mount, little crystals forming in the liquid, which otherwise remains clear. If high winds are approaching the liquid will become as if fermenting, while a film of solid particles forms on the surface. During fair weather the liquid will remain clear and the solid particles will rest at the bottom of the bottle.—Exchange.

Pie Crust Recipe.

One quart of flour and a cupful each of butter and lard. With a fork work the lard into the flour with a little salt and tepid water, enough to make a stiff dough. Flour the board, turn the dough onto it, dredge with flour and dot one-third of the butter over the dough. Roll out, fold like a towel, roll and repeat the process with the dots of butter three times. This will make enough crust for four small pies. Wet the crust with beaten white of egg before putting in the mixture to prevent soaking into the crust, and the top crust moistened with the egg gives a beautiful brown.—Mother's Magazine.

The Logarithm Man.

The first to make use of logarithms in solving mathematical problems was John Napier, a Scotch mathematician, who died in 1617. It was in 1614 that Napier announced his invention. "Logarithm" is a mathematical term, the logarithm of a number being the exponent of the power to which it is necessary to raise a fixed number, called the base, to produce the given number. Napier's system was of immense value in trigonometrical problems, since its use reduced what had previously been the labor of months to a few days. The publication of Napier's work in 1614 created a sensation in the scientific world.

Picking Them Out.

The governor of a southern State came to his office with a friend one morning to find a number of men waiting in the anteroom. Pausing an instant, he told a story that was a decided "chestnut." When they got inside the private office the friend said: "That was a horribly old one you sprung on those fellows."

"I know it," chuckled the governor. "But did you notice the ones that laughed?"

"Well, I noticed that three or four did."

"There," said the governor, "are the fellows who won't get in to see me. They are the ones who have known it all."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Our Tiny Solar System.

There was a time when men thought the earth greater than the sun. Then there was a time when they thought the sun greater than any star. But long ago astronomy began to teach that the earth is a speck beside the sun, that the sun is only a member of an inferior rank of stars and that the solar system, which consists of the sun and its planets, is so insignificant a part of the starry "universe" that its destruction would be as important in the great scheme of things as the annihilation of a single tiny cruller in the combined baking of an International chef.—Joseph F. Barnes in New York Journal.

WM. BULLER RE-ELECTED MAYOR OF PETERBORO WITH A MAJORITY OF 556 VOTES

First Return Indicated the Final Totals—Ex-Ald. Duncan Made a Good Showing, but the Citizens Decided for a Second Term for Mayor Buller—Few Polls Showed a Majority for Duncan, Although a Number of them were Close

MAYOR BULLER RETAINS THE RED PLUSH CHAIR

Mayor Buller gets a second term. A majority of 556 was the citizens' testimonial to his personality and his administration during the year 1914. The total figures were 1,722 to 1,166. His Worship continues his occupancy of the red plush chair at the City Hall with the assurance that the citizens are satisfied with his conduct of the City's business. Although the vote was not a large one, it was expressive of the wishes of the people. Mayor Buller had not made a great effort to be returned, and in fact until the last week it seemed that no election would be held. Even up to the last day the interest was not of the exciting character.

This is explained by the fact that the nation is at war, and civic politics are a minor consideration. Mayor Buller has a few new men around his board, and in the retirement of George Duncan this City loses his years of experience, his readiness to accept civic work and his knowledge of the City's requisements. However such are the fortunes of elections.

From the very first figures it was apparent that it was only a question as to how great Mayor Buller's majority would be. Every poll showed Buller majorities, and only a few were to be heard from when Freeburn's scored first for ex-Alderman Duncan.

North Monaghan

NORTH MONAGHAN, Jan. 4—The first returns from the Township to the south west indicated that the farmers from the distant concessions were still in possession of their own Township. The Town Hall and Grady's store gave a majority for McIntosh, and left Dobbin top man for Deputy Reeve. In the Council elections the Exhibition Grounds district went solid for Rye, and the Town Hall helped its own men, Robson and Bell. They left Byersville to help themselves.

Final returns gave McIntosh a decisive majority, with Herb. Foster as Deputy. The farmers have the upper hand. The Byersville candidates brought up the rear and McIntosh, is from the far sections of the township. Harold Rye is the only near City representative.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

(Four to be elected)

As a new aspirant for the Board of Mr. G. N. Gordon furnished the surprise of the day. He headed the polls with the grand total of 1,189, which was 59 votes ahead of his nearest competitor, Vincent Eastwood. Another new member, in the person of R. Denne, ran third, and ahead of B. F. Ackerman, who filled out the fourth place. There was probably more interest taken in the Board of Education election than in either the Mayoralty or the Aldermanic contests. Mr. G. N. Gordon was in Toronto by the time the results were all in. He was called away on business.

Ald. Green Re-Elected And Langford Defeated

In the West Ward, Ald. Green [illegible] away from the barrier and with the next two returns had settled down to lead the way home.

In the North Ward ex-Alderman Archie McIntyre opened with a lead, but Lee's shop came through with a big vote for Mr. Langford which cut down the distance to a narrow margin. The final returns from this Ward gave McIntyre a majority of 34, with the figures 360 and 326 in his favour.

In the West Ward, Ald. Green's lead increased as the last polls were recorded. Somebody remarked that the firemen's cane was some talisman for the Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee. At that Mr. Morgan made a good showing.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

The preacher, who from the spur of necessity was something of a doctor, too, scowled on her, as he always scowled when something was tearing his breast which he wished to hide, but the scowl softened when ten minutes later she was riding beside him. The rain had already become a lashing downpour, and the twilight was rent by gariah sheets of lightning. At last Good Anse said slowly: "I don't hardly feel fitten ter try ter do nuthin'. Ye see—" He broke off and when he looked round at her again the face under his dripping hat brim was whiter even than the lightning should have limned it, as his voice rose in contention with the thunder. "Calloway's wife hain't much ter look at now. She's plumb broke, but wunst she war ther purtiest gal on Meetin' House Fork. In them days they called me Hell-cat Talbott—an' hit war God's will thet she wouldn't marry me."

The girl never forgot that night of thunder and squalor and suspense. The night long she watched beside the wretched, pain-racked woman and fought for two lives by the light of a fire into which the rain sputtered down the low, wide chimney. At the hearth sat two men. One clutched his face and combed nervously at his unkempt beard with talon-like fingers. He rocked from side to side and groaned, deep in his throat. The other sat unmoving and stared, wide-eyed, at the smoke-blackened stones of the fireplace. Often, too, he knelt and the fire shone on spasmodic lips moving in prayer. So they waited; the husband and the discarded lover.

The rain drove and rattled like shot against the slab roof, and some of it dripped through. The storm went shrieking and volleying through the hills where the timber bent to its savage buffeting. Over it all rolled the artillery of the thunder and now and again came the death crash of some forest patriarch that had given way after centuries.

Juanita kept vigil and thanked God for her little knowledge of medicine and the use of chloroform.

When day came at last and a tiny bundle of humanity lay beside its wasted, but faintly smiling mother, she carried away, in reward for the night-long watch an incoherent "God bless ye," from bearded lips.

She sometimes rode over to the cabin of Fletch McNash and brought little Dawn back with her to spend a day or two. Then foreign girl and mountain girl wandered together in the woods, and Dawn's diffidence gave way and her adoration grew. Twice Juanita found another visitor at the McNash cabin—Bad Anse Havey. He recognized her only with a haughty nod like that of an Indian chief and she gave him in return a slight inclination of her head, accompanied by a glance of starry contempt from her violet eyes. Yet in the attitude of the mountaineers toward the man, she saw such heroworship as might have been accorded to some democratic young monarch walking freely among his subjects.

As he talked they hung on his words. Jeb listened as to a prophet and even Dawn sat with her chin in her hands and her gaze fixed upon his deep grey eyes.

Sometimes Juanita felt the grey pupils focused on her, and under their scrutiny, back of which gleamed mingled anger and a sort of amused scorn that galled her, she grew strangely uneasy.

Once Fletch said, "Ma'am, how's yore school a-comin' on Air ye gittin' things started ter suit ye?"

Juanita flushed. "Not yet," she answered. "I'm trying to get acquainted first. When I do start I hope to make up for lost time.'"

"I reckon that school will be a right-good thing over thar, don't ye 'low so, Anse?" inquired Fletch, whose good-natured density had not sensed the tacit hostility between his two guests.

Anse laughed quietly. "I reckon," he non-cimmitally replied, "so long as the lady just keeps on sayin' 'not yet' thar won't be no harm done."

The lady flushed and a hot retort rose to her lips, but she only turned to Fletch and smiled.

"I'm biding my time, Fletch," she assured him. "My dream will come true."

As the days went by she charged up to Anse Havey's heavy scroll of offence something more concrete. Juanita Holland was building a structure of dreams; and as she sat alone in the woods or looked out of the single window of her room she she liked to imagine its fulfilment out there between the bases of the hills. For her dream's fulfilment she must have land. Her site must be large enough not only for the first log school-house or two, but for the larger institution, into which it was to grow. There must be dormitories for boys and girls and playgrounds where muscles and brains grown slow from heavy-harness could be quickened. She fancied herself listening to the laughter of children who had not before learned to laugh.

That should be the first thing taught, but even above that rose another dream. On some green hillside should stand her tiny, but model hospital, with a "fotched-on" trained nurse in attendance and white cots ranged in clean rows to which the sick might come. From comfortless beds in musty cabins women might be brought to have God's sun and air and cleanliness attend upon the birth of their children. As she made inquiries of landholders whom a price might tempt to sell she was met with a reserve which puzzled her until a bare-footed and slouching farmer gave her a hint.

This man rubbed his brown toe in the dust and spoke in a lowered voice.

"I don't mind a-tellin' ye thet I'd be plumb willin' ter sell out an' move ——" his eyes shone greedily as he added, "fer a fair figger, but I moutn't live ter move ef I sold out."

"What do you mean?" she asked, much puzzled.

"Wall, I wouldn't hardly like ter hev this travel back ter Bad Anse, but I've done been admonished not ter make no trades with strangers."

"Oh!" she exclaimed, in a low voice as her face flushed wrathfully. "Whom does your land belong to?" she demanded after a moment's indignant silence. "Are you a bondman to Bad Anse Havey? Isn't your property your own?"

He looked away and rummaged in his pockets for a few crumbs of leaf tobacco, then he commented with the dreary philosophy of hopelessness, "Hit's a God's blessed truth thet a feller hyarabouts is plumb lucky as long as his life's his own."

So, she told herself, Bad Anse had begun his war with boycott! She could not even buy a foothold on which to begin her fight. Back there in the Philadelphia banks lay enough money, she bitterly reflected, to buy the County at an inflated price; to bribe its Courts; to hire assassins and snuff out human lives, yet, since the edict of one man carried the force of terror, she could not buy a few acres to teach little children and care for the sick. At least it was a confusion that, for all his fine pretence of scorn, the man recognized and feared the potentiality of her efforts.

CHAPTER XII.

As the bright greens of June were scorched into dustier hues of July, and the little spears of corn grew taller, she began to feel conscious of a certain drawing back, even of those who had been her warm admirers and to notice scowls on strange faces as they eyed her.

Somewhere a poison squad was at work. Of that she felt sure, and her eyes flashed militant anger as she thought of its authorship. Each day brought her new warnings, offered under the semblance of kindness and friendship.

"Folks hereabout liked her powerful well, but hit warn't hardly thet Bad Anse, ner Milt McBriar would suffer her ter go forward with her projecks. They'd done been holdin' off 'cause she war a woman, an' she'd better quit of her own behest." So they were willing to let her surrender with the honours of war! Her lips tightened.

In answer to detailed questioning, her informant would invariably shake his head vaguely and suspect that "hit warn't rightly none of his business nohow, he just 'lowed hit war a kindly act ter give her timely warnin'."

Old Bob McGreegor had a water mill a half-mile from the Widow Everson's house, and had there been competition in his neighbourhood, his trade would have died, for the tongue in old Bob's head was a member given to truculent bitterness, and his temper was the channel through which the dyspepsia that racked him, found torrential outlet. It was intimated that the spring which crept down through the laurel thickets above his house, often brought on its surface floating grains of yellow corn. As to the significance of these kernels, mountain etiquette remained silent. Yet the floating particles were prima facie evidence of the proximity of a moonshine still and distilling under such circumstances engenders a steadfast distaste for innovations hinting at a change of order.

Be that as it may, Old Bob was, in word of mouth, the most violent man in the hills. In his code of honour the one unforgivable sin was forgiveness, and peace was the one contemptible weakness. His body was knife-slashed, bullet-pitted, and marked of fist and human tooth, and out of no battle had he ever emerged victorious.

"Nobody kain't nuver l'arn ol' Bob nuthin'," Jerry Everson told Juanita one day. "Some fellers fight 'cause they kin fight, an' some fellers gets persuaded by-and-by that they kain't fight an' quits tryin', but Ol' Bob kain't fight an' hain't quit. He's an ther h——l of a sorry fix, Ol' Bob is."

And so despite his troublesome proclivities, the mountain folk regarded him rather humorously and made allowances for his idiosyncrasies.

One Sunday afternoon the girl was standing at the stile of the Widow's house with Jerry at her elbow when Old Bob came "jest broguein' down the road." He was a strange sight in his bare feet, his ragged trousers, and the faded Prince Albert coat, which had drifted into his ownership a quarter of a century ago and been donned every Sabbath since. He completed his anomalous costume with a battered straw hat and a much spotted red necktie at his collarless throat. He rapped the road as he came with a long hickory staff, and his face, masked in ragged iron grey whiskers, worked like a rabbit's with his mutterings.

But he paused at the gate and stood there scowling villainously at the girl.

"Is thet her?" he exploded at the end of his scrutiny.

"Thet," said Jerry, who was now the girl's dumb admirer, "is Miss Holland: Miss Juanita Holland."

"Hit's ther h——l of a name fer any gal," observed the old man, still boring into her face with hostile eyes. "How much longer do she 'low ter tarry in these parts?"

The girl flushed scarlet, and then telling herself that this was one of the deficients whom the hill people call "fitty," she turned away and looked down the road.

"Folks round hyar," said Jerry slowly and an ominously quiet voice, "hopes thet she stays a long spell."

"Like h——l they does!" ripped out the grey-bearded moonshiner fiercely. "Ther only folks thet wishes thet air them thet eats with the McBriars an' drinks with ther Haveys an' tells lies ter both on 'em. Shore-'nough folks hain't honin' ter hev no fotched-on women spreadin' newfangled notions of corruption through ther country. What's more they hain't a-goin' ter suffer hit much longer. Bad Anse is gittin' d——n tired of puttin' up with sich, jest because hits a woman."

Juanita Holland wheeled, stung into speech at last.

"I reckon," she said quietly, falling unconsciously into the idiom, while her cheeks blazed, "there isn't much danger)."

"No, by God," flared the man, "hit hain't danger, hit's a plumb sartainty."

Then Jerry Everson crossed the stile.

"Uncle Bob," he said slowly, 'I reckon ye've done talked plenty. Begone now whilst ye've got a chanst."

Bob McGreegor broke into a volley of fiery oaths, but the young mountaineer silenced him with a vice-like grip on his shoulder.

"Folks," he said, "hev been makin' hit a practice ter take a heap offen ye, because ye've got grey ha'r an' a weak mind. In p'int of fact one more lickin' wouldn't harm ye none, an' ef ye hain't plumb heedful ye're a-goin' ter git hit right now."

The girl, genuinely anxious for the old man, started across the stile to intercede, but with a sudden change of mood her heckler turned and started ambling up the road, rumbling as he went. Jerry, whose anger had died as suddenly as it had flared, sung after him tauntingly. "Uncle Bob, ye hadn't oughter go round seekin' fights. Some day ye're liable ter meet up with a right-puny feller thet ye kin lick, an' then yore reputation'll be plumb eternally gone ter h——l."

But the girl that night thought long and gloomily over the outbreak of the drunken miller.

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy is Home-Made
Easily Prepared in a Few Minutes. Cheap but Unequaled

Some people are constantly annoyed from one year's end to the other with a persistent bronchial cough, which is wholly unnecessary. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make you wonder what became of it.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist, pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflammation in a painful cough with remarkable rapidity. Ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, winter coughs and bronchial asthma.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup mixture makes 16 ounces—enough to last a family a long time—at a cost of only 54 cents. Keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant. Easily prepared. Full directions with Pinex.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its ease, certainty and promptness in overcoming bad coughs, chest and throat colds.

Get the genuine. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

WHY YOU FEEL LIKE COUGHING WHEN OTHERS DO

All that is necessary to set a whole audience into a violent fit of coughing is for one of its members to give just a little cough. Such coughing spells are of frequent occurrence where numbers of people are gathered together, and they interfere seriously with the enjoyment of plays, concerts and lectures.

But why should this be so? Why should the sound of a cough at once make those who hear it feel an irresistible tickling in their own throats? That is what Professor William S. Sadler, of the Chicago Post Graduate Medical School, has been trying to find out, and the result of his investigations as given in his "Physiology of Faith and Fear" are of great interest and value.

After a careful study of the psychic element in various coughs Professor Sadler finds little doubt of the powerful influence and ability of the mind both to cause and cure certain forms of coughing. In fact, he comes to the conclusion that a very large percentage of common, chronic, hawking coughs are largely perpetuated by the mental state, coupled with the force of habit. What he calls fear-attention is, he believes, certainly able to generate and maintain a formidable cough.

To determine the effect of suggestion on the tendency to cough Professor Sadler experimented with a lecture room in which there were 160 students, all of them ignorant of what was being done. The room was divided into four sections, and there was an observer in each section to note the number of students who coughed.

The professor proceeded to deliver his regular lecture, and during the first thirty minutes only three students in the room were heard to cough. During the second period of thirty minutes—the last half of the lecture—Professor Sadler purposely coughed at intervals of three to five minutes. The remarkable influence of this "suggestive coughing" was clearly shown by the number of students who promptly began to cough.

During the first five minutes of the second period 11 coughs were heard; during the second five minutes, 15 coughs; third five minutes, 19 coughs; fourth five minutes, 17 coughs; fifth five minutes, 27 coughs; sixth five minutes, 16 coughs.

These results are quite typical of those secured from a large number of similar experiments. It was found that audiences differ greatly in their degree of suggestibility. The maximum response was sometimes secured immediately, but not usually until the end of ten or fifteen minutes.

It was also found that the mere mention of coughing in the course of a lecture would often produce as marked an effect as the actual sound of a cough.

Dr. Sadler was once called to see a man who had been coughing continuously for three and one-half hours, and was almost prostrated with exhaustion. During the physician's examination a neighbour's child was run over by a passing automobile, and in the excitement which followed the patient had his mind so distracted that he forgot to cough.

It was over half an hour before he discovered that he had fully recovered; whereupon he at once began to cough frantically and violently again. But this half hour of freedom from his affliction was sufficient to prove to him that his mind had figured largely in producing the cough; and so, by summoning all his will power, he began to control and suppress his coughing impulse and made a speedy recovery.

There can be little doubt that many persons have the cough habit. Others have the very disagreeable and nervous habit of invariably clearing the throat—a sort of hawking—before they begin to speak.

Whooping cough can undoubtedly be made worse by fear and concentration of the attention. It can also often be cured, or at least greatly alleviated, by nothing more or less than a good, sound thrashing.

Of course, all coughs are not psychic in origin; but even in those cases where the cause is wholly physical it is quite likely that the mind sooner or later comes to play an important part in the severity and persistency of the coughing.

Sneezing is less easily influenced by the mind. While suggestion has some power in this direction, the most important influences are the stimulation of the eye, as by a powerful light, and the irritation of the mucous membrane of the nose. By will power we can produce a cough, but not a sneeze.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia, or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

Corset Ancient Armor.

A French historian of women's dress states that the corset was worn by the ancient Egyptians. This assertion is borne out by the figures carved on the tombs of women, who are invariably represented as wearing a garment strongly resembling the modern corset. There does not appear to be any representation extant of Cleopatra VI., the beloved of Antony, but in one of the temples there is a figure of her predecessor, Cleopatra II., in which the sculptor has endowed her with a corset cut on the lines of those worn today. Whalebone was probably unknown to the Egyptians, but a nation capable of constructing pyramids without steam cranes would probably find no difficulty in making stays without busks.—London Standard.

If It Had a Voice.

George Bernard Shaw is a vegetarian who has remained true to the faith, and in a letter to a Chicago woman, reproaching her for her fight against the edict when she still ate meat, Mr. Shaw said:

"The lack of logic prevailing everywhere! We call the tiger a ferocious and ravening beast, but what would you Chicago ladies be called if, for example, the lamb chop had a voice?"

Foresight.

She—Johnnie needs a new pair of shoes. He—Why, saints alive! I brought home a pair for him last night! She—Yes, you did. But as it took you fully six weeks to remember to get them it might be well to start in now on the next pair.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Easy.

"Tell me, old man," said the perennial seeker after useless knowledge, "why is your hair gray and your beard brown?"

"Easy," answered the facetious old man. "My hair is twenty years older than my beard."—Michigan Gargoyle.

On His Guard.

"I'm going to learn the deaf and dumb language."

"What for?"

"So's the next time I go after a bride no meddling little dictograph can catch me."—Detroit Free Press.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Headache.

An American physician recently addressed a congress of doctors, in which meeting he condemned the use of medicine to quiet headaches without attempting to discover their cause.

Many forms of headache are susceptible of prompt relief or entire cure by timely and sensible regulation of the life of the patient, his habits, surroundings, influence of occupation and by the correction of diseases and disorders on which the headache depends. In these various ways may be influenced the headaches of indigestion, biliousness and constipation, of cerebral overwork and emotional excitement, of tonsilitis and eye strain, of many cases of debility, of bad ventilation, malaria and over-stimulation of various sorts, of uterine and ovarian disease and of chronic blood diseases.

A Kipling Anecdote.

The old postman at Westward Ho, near Bideford, in Devon, and the scene of "Stalky & Co.," is reported in T. P.'s London Weekly as telling an interesting anecdote of Rudyard Kipling, dating from the time when Kipling himself was a boy at school at Westward Ho. It appears that Beaksmith, the aquatic expert, came to Westward Ho to give an exhibition from the pier, which was crowded with the usual summer sightseers and a fair sprinkling of boys from the school. After some evolutions in the water the swimmer commenced a series of diving performances, and it was after a sensational dive from the top of the pier that the spectators were amazed to see a chubby, stocky boy run to the edge of the pier and repeat the dive with all the mannerisms of the expert. Inquiry elicited the fact that the boy was named Kipling, and it is by this incident more than any other that the Bideford people remember the now famous author.

Size of the Sea.

An officer of a liner once remarked that most men seemed to be as ignorant about the size of the sea as they are of the distance between the heavenly planets. Here are a few facts: The Pacific covers 68,000,000 miles; the Atlantic 30,000,000 and the Indian ocean, Arctic and Antarctic 42,000,000. To stow away the contents of the Pacific it would be necessary to fill a tank one mile long, one mile wide and one mile deep every day for 440 years. Put in figures the Pacific holds in weight 948,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons. The Atlantic averages a depth of not quite three miles. Its waters weigh 325,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons, and a tank to contain it would have each of its sides forty-three miles long. The figures of the other oceans are in the same startling proportions. It would take all the sea water in the world 2,000,000 years to flow over Niagara.

The Man or the Gun?

The man rather than the gun is a nation's military asset, asserts H. G. Wells, whose essay on "The Common Sense of Warfare" is included in his book, "Social Forces in England and America." "Every penny," he says, "we divert from national wealth making to national weapons means so much less in resources, so much more strain in the years ahead. But a great system of laboratories and experimental stations, a systematic industrious increase of men of the officer-aviator type, of the research student type, of the engineer type, of the naval officer type, of the skilled sergeant instructor type, a methodical development of a common sentiment and a common zeal among such a body of men, is an added strength that grows greater from the moment you call it into being."

The Hunter and the Wind.

In hunting against the wind in open forests more game is passed than many hunters would suppose. The animals see the men, note that he will pass them and hide by getting as near to the ground as possible. If they scent him after he has passed they evidently realise that the danger is over, though some, mostly the younger, inexperienced animals, then sneak off. Where game is very wild it is often in such localities as I have mentioned only possible to approach them with the wind by outdistancing the latter, because a big game animal at rest depends on its nose to save it from danger in the direction from which the wind comes and on its eyes to watch the side from which it can get no other warning.—"Track and Tracking," by Josef Brunner.

Worth of Icelandic Ponies.

Icelandic ponies aroused the admiration of the great traveler, Mme. Ida Pfeiffer. "In spite of scanty food," she wrote, "they have marvelous powers of endurance. They can travel from thirty-five to forty miles per diem for several consecutive days. They know by instinct the dangerous spots in the stormy wastes and in the mosses and swamps. On approaching these places they bend their heads toward the earth and look sharply around on all sides. If they cannot discover a firm resting place for their feet they stop at once and cannot be urged forward without many blows."

First Titled Doctor.

The title of doctor was invented for the especial benefit of the learned Isernius of the twelfth century. The title was conferred by the University of Bologna. The first doctor of medicine was William Gordonio, who received the title from the college at Asti in 1329.

Not Particular as to Weapons.

The waiter girl knew a thing or two about table etiquette, so she sniffed scornfully as she said, "It's not our custom to serve a knife with pie."

"No?" remarked the patron in surprise. "Then bring me an ax, please."

AN UNLUCKY BRIG.

Once Abandoned, the Marie Celeste Came to a Bad End.

There are few people who have not heard of the case of the American brig Marie Celeste, which in 1872 was inexplicably abandoned in calm weather off the Azores by a crew never after heard from. Few, however, know that it ended its career many years later at the hands of the barrator.

On its last voyage it cleared from Boston for Port au Prince, Haiti, ostensibly with a cargo of valuable general merchandise, insured for $30,000. When within a few miles of its destination it went ashore near Miragoane and became a total wreck. The captain, Parker, promptly sold the cargo, eight wagons, to American Consul Mitchell for $900. Mitchell saved it at some trouble, but lived to wish he hadn't.

When the underwriters' agent arrived on the scene to investigate, he found several funny things about the cargo. One case shipped as cutlery and insured for $1,000 contained dog collars worth $30. Barrels supposed to contain expensive liquors were full of worthless drugs, a consignment of salt fish insured for $6,000 was rotten, and other articles mentioned in the bill of lading proved to be in keeping.

Consul Mitchell, not only duped, but outwitted, stood not on the order of his going, but cleared out for tall timber. The captain of the brig was tried in the United States district court in Boston, convicted and sentenced to a long term in prison, where he died three months later.—David A. Wasson in Outing Magazine.

PRIDE OF THE UGLY CLUB.

He Was the Prize Member of an Old New York Organization.

In the New York Evening Post of May 11, 1914, appeared the following notice:

UGLY CLUB.

Ugly brothers, hither fly.
With you bring the varying eye—
Bring here cock eyes and eyes askance
That cannot pass one tender glance.
Bring goggle eyes and piercers, too;
Eyes green, white, red, black and blue.
Bring with you the eagle's sight
To see your heart and keep it right.
But being shortsighted eyes to spy
The mote that's in your brother's eye.

The members of the Ugly club are directed to attend a special meeting at Ugly hall, 4 Wall street, on Thursday evening, the 12th inst., at 7 o'clock, to take into consideration the propriety of bestowing some suitable mark of distinction on a member who lately while viewing himself in the secretary's ugly mirror was so much pleased with his own ugly phiz that he involuntarily let fall the glass, which was dashed to pieces, and exclaimed, "I shall yet be president of the club!" The astonishing fortitude of this ugly member, in the frequent and public acknowledgment of his natural deformities, deserves the highest commendation.

The members are requested to be punctual in their attendance, as the new members elected at the last meeting and six of the ugly beauties are expected to appear.

The propriety of admitting ladies into the club will be discussed.

By order of His Ugliness.

A Round Trip.

The attorney for a street railroad company in a Kentucky town was examining a skinny sixteen-year-old negro boy who had sued for injuries ostensibly incurred in a collision on the highway.

"You say," he asked, "that when this street car hit that wagon you were sitting on the front seat of the wagon?"

"Dat's what I said," answered the little darky.

"And you say the force of the blow knocked you up in the air?"

"Yas, suh—'way up in de sin."

"Well, how long did you stay up there?" demanded the attorney.

"Not no longer dan it took me to get down!" answered the truthful complainant promptly.—Saturday Evening Post.

Rays From a Searchlight.

The paths traversed by rays from a searchlight depend on the form of curvature of the mirror. If flat, the paths of reflected rays would be the same as those of the rays received; if the arc of a circle, the rays will be reflected in one bright focus. To have a band of parallel rays leave the mirror it must be the arc of a parabola. Then straight rays will be reflected all parallel to each other. In air, the intensity of the beam of light would diminish, but in absolute vacuum would be as intense at any distance.—New York American.

The Right Word.

"Why do you speak of him as a finished artist?"

MOTORCAR PROGRESS.

Standardization of the Parts and What That Means.

Ask any engineer what feature of modern motorcar construction represents the greatest improvement and advancement in design, and he will say not the automatic engine starter, the six cylinder engine, but standardization.

That may be a word which means but little to the car owner, but he unconsciously derives untold benefit from it every day that he runs his automobile. By reason of it he has only to ask for a certain kind of spark plug and he knows it will fit the cylinder. he has only a dozen or so different sizes of tires from which to select the one adapted to his car, and even the carburetor may be replaced by one of a different make without any change whatsoever in the bolt holes or attaching flange.

A vital part of the motor or running gear may be replaced by a blacksmith or local machine shop from the ordinary sizes of stock carried on hand, and the screw thread sizes as now used conform to a certain standard that renders replacements exceedingly simple. Grease cups, nuts or bolts that may have been lost may be replaced at the nearest supply store or garage, for no longer does each manufacturer work only to his own specifications on these minor parts.—H. W. Simmons, M. E., in Leslie's.

LOST HIS BAROMETER.

Count Zeppelin Says General Butterfield Sneaked It Away.

Count Zeppelin, the inventor of the dirigible balloon, is not a stranger to the United States, for he saw service with the Union army in the war between the states. In his recently published reminiscences he tells this amusing story of General Butterfield, who was chief of staff in the Army of the Potomac:

In planning operations General Butterfield attached special significance to knowledge of the probable weather conditions, and for this reason he became especially fond of an excellent aneroid barometer that I had obtained from London and paid a lot of money for.

He saw this instrument in my tent, borrowed it from me, then found it impossible to give it up. He kept it a longer time each time he borrowed it until at last he failed to return it at all. When I was about to leave the army I asked him again and again to return it, and I finally became so pressing that he said he would go to his tent and fetch it out.

After waiting outside a long time I followed him into the tent. It was empty. With my barometer in his hand he had crawled under the canvas and disappeared.

LOOK OUTSIDE.

If you want to make the best of your life don't spend much time in looking within and wondering if your feelings are all right. Look outside instead and see what you are doing for others, what you are saying about other people, how you are behaving to those around you. If you are behaving kindly and truly to your neighbor you will not go far wrong.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" STRAIGHTEN YOU UP

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and End Headaches, Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and bad colds—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels, or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken.

Ostrich as Steed.

"A strange sight, in the form of an Indian riding down the main street on an ostrich, has been witnessed several times lately," says the East London (South Africa) Standard. "By keeping his legs over the bird's wings he prevents it from using them, and guides the bird by a rein round the neck. The whip end is also used as a whip when the bird begins to slow up. The rider appears to have complete control of the mount."

TRAPPING ELEPHANTS.

In India Tame Animals Aid in Capturing the Wild Ones.

In view of the vast strength possessed by full grown elephants, it seems at first sight almost impossible that they can be captured in herds and quickly subdued to the will of their masters.

At the present time, in Mysore, the regular method of capturing wild elephants is for a large number of natives to go into the jungle, some mounted on tamed elephants and many on foot, and to make a great noise and hullabaloo, which results in driving herds of the wild elephants into stockades, or often into ponds of water, which have previously been surrounded on all sides, except at the approaches, by immensely strong palisades. As soon as the herd is cornered the passages that had been left open are securely closed, and then the trained elephants are brought into play to cajole and subdue the perplexed prisoners.

In India elephants are no longer captured, as they still are in Africa, by means of huge pitfalls in the ground. In these traps they are often seriously injured or killed. The Indian elephant is somewhat smaller than the African and differs from it in other ways—as, for instance, in the fact that tusks are possessed only by the males, while both sexes are provided with them in Africa. In general, also, the tusks of African elephants are nearly twice as large as those of their Indian relatives, a single pair sometimes weighing as much as 250 or 300 pounds.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

WAGNER'S "PARSIFAL."

Its Cold Reception at First Moved Hans Sachs to Fury.

When Wagner's "Parsifal" was first performed in Baireuth, the critic Hans Sachs was almost the only one of all the writing fraternity to welcome it as a great work of genius. To the ears of the others its rude realism sounded unmusical. They wanted melody like that Verdi was turning out in Italy, Bizet in Paris and a few minor composers in their own Berlin.

But Sachs was a man of broader mold. He heard the great music of "Parsifal" with unprejudiced ears and recognised the genius of the man. He shouted it abroad in his writings and became furious at a world that would not, perhaps could not, find pleasure in the dramatic voices of the orchestra, its vivid emotionalism and marvelous appeal to the aesthetical nature that is in every man and woman. He knew that the Germans were merely refusing to listen, save for melody, and finally he told them that even in the melodic field Wagner was the greatest of them all.

Sachs has written eloquently of Wagner's melody, beside which the melody of the Italians is pallid, anaemic, insignificant. Only now and then, he said, were the Italian melodists other than artificial. Wagner's melody was the spontaneous song of a musical heart. The "Good Friday Spell" was the most exquisite song of praise ever written by any man, no less a song because it was wordless, sung only by the violin and woodwinds.—Detroit Free Press.

The Trained Voice.

Lawyers, clergymen and doctors all fail to secure the influence with the people with whom they come in contact because of inability to express their thoughts in an impressive way. Had the voice been trained the same as the eye and the intellect, had the exterior qualities been trained to express like the voice the best and the clearest facts, they would all have been successes. The melodious voice of Henry Clay always charmed his audience everywhere. Wherever he went people flocked to hear him, while the heavy bass tones of Daniel Webster failed to attract and actually drove people away. They preferred to read what he had to say, but wanted personally to hear Clay's pleasing voice.—Medical Record.

Fuller's Great Memory.

Thomas Fuller, the author of "The Worthies of England," possessed the useful accomplishment for a clergyman of being able to repeat a sermon verbatim after hearing it only once. Fuller once succeeded in naming backward and forward and without a single omission every shop sign on both sides of the way from Temple Bar to the eastern extremity of Cheapside. This appears a remarkable feat when it is remembered that Fuller lived before the practice of numbering houses was adopted, so that every shop he passed bore a sign.—London Chronicle.

By the Rules of the Game.

Little Mary Lou was eager to get back to her new doll and didn't know there was going to be any dessert. She slipped quietly from her chair, hoping she would not be observed.

Out in the hall she met the cook with the ice cream, and as quietly as she had left it she slipped back to her accustomed place at the table.

"Mary Lou," said her mother reprovingly, "I thought you had finished your dinner. It isn't polite to come back."

"But I didn't excuse myself, mother," the little girl said quickly.—New York Post.

Why They Worshiped Cats.

W. J. Showalter explains in the National Geographic Magazine why the ancient Egyptians worshiped cats. They noticed that where there were cats there was no bubonic plague. They did not know, of course, that it was the fleas on rats that spread the disease.

David McNicoll

WEIGHTY in counsel, reticent but observant, David McNicoll is one of those "men of vision" whose name will always be associated with the fortunes of the C.P.R. The announcement of his retirement from active executive work was not altogether a surprise. He had rendered long and signal service; he had advanced from one dignity to another; he had seen the system grow from the proverbial grain of mustard seed until it had covered a continent; he had a large share in the shaping of those high policies which gave character and prestige to the company, and it was only fair that after forty years hard work he should have a holiday.

"There is," writes one who knows him well, "a strong individuality in the manner of Mr. McNicoll. He might seem to bluff you; but as the pomegranate cut in the middle shows the red vein of life and vitality, so if you could get beneath the surface you always found in Mr. McNicoll no small share of humanities. He does not wear his heart on his sleeve. He never utters the thoughtless word. He goes over plans and diagrams and details with a wonderful mastery. He grasps things, not with exuberance but with steadiness.

"He has the Scotch seriousness; but also the Scotch humor—dry, pawky, cropping out spontaneously and unexpectedly. It scorched sometimes, but mostly it is playful. Though of serious bearing and quiet dignity, the good story with a point in it finds him eager. He gave to his duties undivided attention, working early and late. From step to step he rose until he was associated with the system in its most influential period and policies, and through it all Mr. McNicoll remained the incarnation of simplicity. Even in his younger days he gave himself to the cultivation of simplicity of life and habit, speech and manner. One recalls him in his shirt sleeves, in the old offices opposite Place D'Armes Square busy and eager at the moment when the company was commencing its career. If he could make a coup he would not announce it in any startling way; he loved to work on, unnoticed by the public. If a moment of confidence were given in respect of any large policy, there must not be a word said about it.

"From Place D'Armes Square Mr. McNicoll went down to the old Albert Buildings on Victoria Square as passenger agent. In the Windsor Street offices the system began to show life and strength; and larger honors were awarded. The vision extended; a nebulous system took form and coherency; all the young men set themselves with zest in the saddle and the C.P.R. went forward by leaps and bounds. Mr. McNicoll has the coolest of temperaments. No one ever saw him excited. In the debates which took place in the various passenger associations, which he attended as representing the C.P.R., he spoke with a sort of grim quietness, but he gained his point. The officers of the C.P.R. will recall his keenness; the Board of Directors his quiet attentiveness to which the pointed remark gave emphasis; while the general public will always associate the growth and influence of the system with the name of David McNicoll."

MANY WITH SINEWS CUT.

Toronto Man Corroborates Stories of German Brutality.

Private T. M. Galbraith of the Royal Engineers, late of Toronto and now an instructor of infantry at Point Paul Battery, Yorkshire, writes to his brother on Ravensden avenue, Toronto, as follows:

"Have just arrived here from Chatham. From where we are stationed we are able to see the North Sea squadron. At night we can see the bright searchlights flashing across the sky and sea.

"There are a lot of our lads lying wounded in Chatham hospitals. Some of them are in pretty bad shape, the brutal Germans having cut the sinews of their wrists; so it is possible they will be good for nothing in future. We have many German prisoners in Chatham, and we are using them good."

A British soldier has written home as follows:

"The Germans expected to envelop the British and French armies on the anniversary of Sedan. From several sources it is made clear that the men who swept forward to attack the British line had been made aware of their mission. They were told that if they would smash the British force, England would ask for peace and desert her ally.

"A soldier told me that he found himself mixed up with a French regiment on the right. He wanted to fall in with his French comrades but the officers in charge smilingly shook his head.

"They will spot you in your khaki and put you out in no time," he said in English.

INDIAN HOSPITALITY.

A Brand of Their Own, Not "Stingy Like the White Man."

The early experiences of the white practitioner among reservation Indians make a chapter of encounters with aboriginal prejudice not wholly finished. Even his own life was not safe if the doctor ventured too near the borderland of prejudice, and if a death occurred at the beginning of his practice he was likely to be avoided for the rest of his sojourn. Many an Indian came for the first dose and was never seen or heard of afterward—whether death or distaste was the result of his visit the doctor might never know. Or an entire bottle of cough sirup would be consumed at once, on the theory that if a teaspoonful was good a bottleful would be better.

The constant hospitality practiced by Indians, and the custom of sharing the last crumb, is a phase of the food question difficult to be appreciated by whites. As long as an Indian has any subsistence, his neighbors and friends come a-visiting, to remain as long as the food holds out. To be inhospitable or "stingy like the white man" is an opprobrium which only the hardiest Indian can socially survive. This Indian virtue bars the way to an equalization of any distribution of food, and is the cause of many of those cases of "Indians starving."

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Their Coast Line is Longer Than That of the United States.

"It is not generally known perhaps that the coast line of the Philippine Islands is longer than that of the United States," said a man who has spent more than fifteen years in that country. "The Philippines are numerous islands," he continued. "It would take one many months to tour all of the islands. Of course the climate varies, but in most parts it is delightful. The average temperature is lower than in many parts of the United States and the humidity is not nearly so great. Records of temperature in the Philippines have been kept since 1865 and in that time the maximum recorded was 103 degrees. The mean temperature is from 70 to 80 degrees.

"If the humidity were great there are times when it would be almost unbearable, but ordinarily I would rather live in the Philippines than in most sections of this country. It is fortunate that in the month of greatest humidity, September, the temperature falls lower than at any other time of the year, which makes it possible to endure the conditions.

"I have frequently been asked if there is much drinking among the Filipinos. There is comparatively very little. The Filipinos have discovered even if some of our own countrymen have not, that alcoholic drinks and the tropics do not mix. It is seldom you see a Filipino intoxicated. There are native brewed drinks in different islands, but the people do not overindulge."

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.

More Liable to Generate in Powdered Than in Solid Substances.

The scientific phrase for combustion is oxidation, or the combining of some substance with the oxygen of the air. Some substances have greater affinity for oxygen than others, and whenever the combustion reaches a certain point of rapidity fire results.

Anything that increases the facility of combination with oxygen increases the danger of spontaneous combustion or explosion, and for that reason a substance is more dangerous when pulverized than when solid, because the separated particles of matter are brought more directly in contact with the oxygen of the air. There is no danger of spontaneous combustion or explosion in a mass of unground wheat, but mills have been destroyed by explosions of flour dust.

Fixed oils absorb oxygen and give out carbon and hydrogen, causing a rise of temperature that may reach the burning point, as has often occurred in heaps of rags, tow, sawdust and similar bodies soaked with oil, paint, varnish, turpentine and sometimes grease.

Bituminous coal is liable to spontaneous combustion when moistened with water, and the coal dust in mines is a common cause of explosions. Moisture aids spontaneous combustion in piles of damp hay or freshly mown grass, and barns have been burned from that cause.

The Deciding Voice.

In a business men's club in a western town there sprang up two factions, one which criticised the steward because he did not provide the members with good meals and one which defended him hotly.

The dispute got fiercer and fiercer. Half the club wanted to fire the steward at once. The other half said he was efficient.

Then without warning the steward himself decided the momentous question.

One day at lunch time a member of the club asked the waiter:

"Where's the steward?"

"He ain't here," replied the waiter. "He said he was going down the street to get something good to eat."—Popular Magazine.

Alfred the Great of England has few equals in history, for he was in advance of his times in everything. After thirty years of wise rule Alfred died in 901 A. D.

DIED FOR HIS IDOL.

Heroism That Led to Napoleon's Title of "The Little Corporal."

It is related that Napoleon was once badly defeated at Coblentz by the Cossacks. After the battle, he was surrounded by enemies and would have lost his life had he not been saved by the presence of mind of one of his soldiers, Corporal Spohn.

Realizing that Napoleon's only chance for life was in getting off the battle field unrecognized, the corporal bought the emperor to change hats and horses with him. The change was made as the smoke of battle had cleared away, and Napoleon, with his corporal's hat and mounted on a poor steed, rode away unnoticed, the Cossacks crowding around the corporal. Taking him prisoner, they led him in triumph to the Russian general. There the mistake was soon discovered, and the corporal's brave act cost him his life.

According to the Coblentz legend, Napoleon, in remembrance of Spohn's self sacrifice, always after this preferred a corporal's uniform to any other and wore it so often that his men came to speak of him familiarly as "Le Petit Caporal."—From "The Rhine," Translated by G. C. T. Bartley.

Mastery of Music.

The mastery of music never just "came naturally" to any human being. The world has never known a more industrious worker than the illustrious Franz Schubert. Yet, if to any one in the world music "came naturally," it seemed to come so to him. When the school principal asked his harmony teacher how young Franz Schubert was progressing, the teacher said: "He is a wonder. Whenever I explain anything new to him, he always seems already to know it. He must have received his knowledge straight from heaven." Yet, in spite of such superb gifts, there was never a harder worker than he. And don't you think that we with our lesser gifts, should follow his example? If he with all his heaven sent genius could not succeed without strenuous daily labor, how can we hope to accomplish anything worth while without ceaseless, patient and conscientious toil?—Woman's World.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

STILL CARRY BOAR'S HEAD AT XMAS

The mediaeval Yuletide custom of carrying a boar's head in procession to the Christmas banquet was once common in England. To-day it is confined to Queen's College, Oxford, and one or two baronial houses.

The reason for the custom surviving at Queen's is, according to tradition, an account of a valorous deed performed centuries ago by a Queen's scholar. He was walking in the fields studying his Aristotle when a wild boar rushed at him open-mouthed. With great presence of mind the student crammed the book down the animal's throat, and it was thus choked to death with philosophy—hence the survival of the boar's head at the college of which this bold scholar was a member.

No fitter setting for a ceremony that links up the twentieth century with the past could be provided than the cloisters and dining hall of Queen's College. Queen's whose foundation dates back to 1340, was the college of the Black Prince, Henry V., Cardinal Beaufort, Addison, Wycherley and many other famous men.

The procession of the boar's head is formed up at the buttery. At its head walks the soloist, a former scholar of the College. Next comes the boar's head. This is borne on a silver salver upon the shoulders of two stalwart servitors. The great head presents a quaint and handsome appearance, being surmounted by a glittering and bejeweled crown and decked with frills of gilded bay and rosemary. Between the tusks is placed a golden orange. Flags bearing the college arms and devices are fixed in the head.

Immediately behind the great dish comes the college organist, wearing the brilliant robes of an Oxford doctor of music, and followed by his surpliced choir of men and boys.

Meanwhile the provost of the college standing on the dias at the end of the hall in the midst of the principal guests says a Latin grace, after which the dinner call is sounded in the cloisters upon a trumpet. Then with stately pomp the procession slowly advances from the buttery, through the cloisters and into the great dining hall, and the soloist sings the proclamation:

The boar's head in hand bear I,
Bedecked with bays and rosemary.
And I pray tell you, my masters, be merry.

Then the choir sings in harmonious chorus the curious old Latin carol:

Quot estis in convivio.
Caput apri defero,
Reddens laudes Domino.

By the time the carol is finished the procession has reached the dias, and the boar's head is deposited on the high table. Then the provost or, in his absence, the senior official of the College who is present, removes the flags, which are used year after year and are of considerable antiquity, and presents to each of the principal guests a portion of the gilded evergreens. The remainder is scarcely scrambled for by the other guests.

After this prelude the dinner is served as ordinarily save that the most valuable and antique silver plate and pewter are used, special sauces are served with meals, and home brewed ale and Queen's own special beer, a liquor of great potency, are served in the valuable old tankards.

Her Seven Sons.

A mother who had only one child, a son, lost him through an accident by drowning when he was seventeen. His body was washed out to sea and never recovered. She very much wanted a portrait of him, and she called a famous artist who was a friend of the family. He asked for every photograph she had of her son from babyhood onward. When the painting arrived it represented a glade in a wood. Playing about were five little children of various ages, but all the same boy as his mother had known him. Coming down the center, joyous, gay, was the seventeen-year-old lad leading his baby self of one year by the hand. The mother looked at the picture and burst into tears. "I have lost seven sons!" she said.

"You had lost six of them before your son died," the artist replied.

LEAVE THE JAPS ALONE.

Californian Politicians Afraid Agitation Would Hurt Big Show.

Washington, Jan. —In an unofficial but convincing way, the State Department has learned that there is no intention on the part of the leaders in control of the Californian Legislation to bring in any new anti-Japanese legislation during the present session. It has been made plain that the leaders cannot prevent members from broaching measures of their own, but it is understood that such measures will not receive support of the dominant party.

A disposition not to do anything that might jeopardize the success of the Panama-Pacific Exposition by curtailing Oriental exhibits is understood here to have been a factor in bringing about the determination to avoid further agitation of the Japanese question.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irriration or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every hom, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Ruskin and War.

Ruskin might have welcomed the prospect of a European war. For he had little sympathy with the ideals and aims of the pacifists. "All the pure and noble arts of peace are founded on war," he told the members of the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, Eng., in 1865. "No great art ever yet rose on earth, but among a nation of soldiers. There is no art among a shepherd people, if it remains at peace. There is no art among an agricultural people, if it remains at peace. Commerce is barely consistent with fine art, but cannot produce it. Manufacture not only is unable to produce it, but invariably destroys whatever seeds of it exist. There is no great art possible to a nation but that which is based on battle."

Somalis Seek Peace.

The rebellious Somali: who were concerned in the recent fighting near Berbera, have agreed to the terms of peace offered by the Government, and have brought in a peace-offering of 20 horses and 60 rifles. The amount of the fine said to have been fixed by the Government is 1,000 head of live stock and all the rifles in the possession of the tribe. This does not include a separate fine inflicted on that section of the Marehan which was concerned in the action in which Lt. Bentinck was wounded and some of the rank and file of the King's African Rifles were killed and wounded.

Fate and Fans.

The ordinary folding fan was invented in the seventh century by a Japanese artist, who derived the idea from watching a bat closing its wings.

How a Moose Eats.

Of all peculiar sights I think that that of a moose eating grass is the most extraordinary. The neck is so short and the legs are so long that the animal usually kneels in eating grass. True, it does not attempt it very often, for grass is by no means a staple with it, but even a moose likes a change of diet. The appearance of this huge and awkward creature in this devotional attitude is not only interesting, but really laughable.

"Oh, no, you won't," replied the tramp, "because he ain't home."

"Because," answered the man, as he sidled toward the gate, "a man who marries a woman like you is only home at meal times."

HYMN BEFORE ACTION.

(By Rudyard Kipling.)

The earth is full of anger,
The seas are dark with wrath,
The Nations in their harness
Go up against our path:
Ere yet we loose the legions—
Ere yet we draw the blade,
Jehovah of the Thunders,
Lord God of Battles, aid!

High lust and froward bearing,
Proud heart, rebellious brow—
Deaf ear and soul uncaring,
We seek Thy mercy now!
The sinner that forswore Thee,
The fool that passed Thee by,
Our times are known before Thee—
Lord, grant us strength to die!

From panic, pride, and terror,
Revenge that knows no rein,
Light haste and lawless error,
Protect us yet again.
Cloak Thou our undeserving,
Make firm the shuddering breath,
In silence and unswerving
To taste Thy lesser death!

Ah! Mary, pierced with sorrow,
Remember, reach and save
The soul that comes to-morrow
Before the God that gave;
Since each was born of woman,
For each at utter need—
True comrade and true foeman—
Madonna, intercede!

E'en now the vanguard gathers,
E'en now we face the fray—
As Thou didst help our fathers,
Help Thou our host to-day!
Fulfilled of signs and wonders,
In life, in death made clear—
Jehovah of the Thunders,
Lord God of Battles, hear!

Making Shot.

Even among sportsmen there are probably many people who are not acquainted with the manner in which shot is made. The process is carried out at what is known as a shot tower. This a tall tower of metal or stone with a tank at the top filled with molten lead. The bottom of this tank is perforated with holes, and there is a slide underneath it, also perforated. This slide is pulled from side to side, and every time two holes come opposite each other a small quantity of molten lead falls through. As these drops fall through the air they assume a globular shape, and if the tower is of sufficient length they solidify before reaching the bottom. Here they fall into a tank of cold water and are cooled. When the shot has to be small the slide is worked more quickly than when it has to be larger.—Pearson's Weekly.

MAKING AN EXPLORER.

Shackleton Discusses the Qualities Needed In His Business.

In an interesting article in Pearson's Magazine Sir Ernest Shackleton states that the five qualities essential to an explorer in the order of their relative importance are—optimism, patience, physical endurance, idealism, and courage.

"The life of an explorer is full of disappointments," he writes, "but optimism nullifies disappointment and makes one more ready than ever to go on.

"I had sent a party of three men to explore the western mountains of Victorialand. They camped one night on the sea-ice, and awoke the next morning to find themselves sailing north on a lump of ice. The main pack had broken up during the night, and they were en route for New Zealand, 2,000 miles away, with provisions for only ten days.

"Instead of moaning about what was likely to be the inevitable end, they set to work; packed up their sledge, and all day long kept a look-out in case the ice should drift close to a larger piece, or a current take it in towards the shore. About six o'clock at night the currents suddenly changed, and the ice started south again. They dragged their sledge towards the edge of their ice-raft. At midnight a little fringe of their ice touched the solid ice; they jumped ashore, and two minutes afterwards the ice went north for good. When I returned from the Southern journey I asked the leader of that party what his feelings were, and he answered: 'Oh, we thought that while there was life there was hope, so we packed everything and looked for a chance to jump.'

"Now, really, these men were in about as hopeless a position as one could possibly imagine; but, being endowed with optimism, they did not give way to despair."

Prisoners of War.

York Castle, Eng., which is being used as a place of detention for prisoners of war, is one of the finest of the British nation's old buildings. It is well situated for its present purpose, being between the rivers Foss and Ouse. Its walls enclose no fewer than four acres, with space to contain 40,000 persons. The castle dates back certainly from Roman times; possibly from the days of the ancient Britons.

Clifford's Tower, the chief of the existing buildings, was reduced almost to a shell by fire in 1645, but was surrounded by a strong projecting wall, erected in 1836. This tower was the scene of a massacre of Jews in the reign of Richard I., the number put to death being chronicled as 500. The Yorkshire Assizes are held in an outbuilding which dates back to 1777, and the prison, which is not yet a century old, is also within the castle space.

Money Takes Wings.

One of the many fanciers at Haverfordwest bought a pigeon for a shilling, but somehow it got away from its cot and didn't seem likely to enter it again. So the disconsolate owner ran to his brother and, pointing upward to a distant speck of something circling in the sky, exclaimed, "Look at my shilling!"—Cardiff Western Mail.

Stevenson's Retort.

An interesting letter is Stevenson's in reply to an autograph hunter who had spelled his name with a "ph" instead of a "v."

"The few lines with which you have found time to honor me," he replied, "contain certain indications of your character on which I take pleasure in dwelling. They show you so illiterate that I cannot judge your admiration flattering, they show you so careless of giving trouble to me that I am myself careless how much offense I may convey to you, and they are so ill penned that I am tempted to hope you will discover a difficulty in perusing my answer and place it unread in your collection. The next time it shall occur to you to trouble an author as you have troubled me find out—I do not say what he has written; far less would I suggest that you should read it—but find out how he is in the habit of spelling his unpretentious name and give him upon that point the flattery of imitation."—Chicago Herald.

Operation Decided On As Only Means of Relief

But the Writer of This Letter Resolved to Try Dr. Chase's Ointment First and Was Cured.

This is not an isolated case, for we frequently hear from people who have been cured of piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment after physicians had told them nothing short of an operation could bring relief and cure.

MR. BEAUVAIS.

If you could read these letters, coming as they do, day after day and year after year, you would realize what a wonderful curative agent Dr. Chase's Ointment really is. Few ailments are more annoying or more persistently torturing than piles, and when this suffering is promptly relieved by the application of Dr. Chase's Ointment there can be no doubt as to where credit is due. Friends and neighbors are told of the results and so the good word spreads, and Dr. Chase's Ointment is becoming known far and wide as the only actual cure for piles or hemorrhoids.

Mr. Charles Beauvais, a respected citizen of St. John's, Que., writes:—"For 14 years I suffered from chronic piles or hemorrhoids and considered my case very serious. I was treated by a well-known physician who could not help me, and my doctor decided on an operation as the only means of relief. However, I resolved to try Dr. Chase's Ointment first. The first box brought me great relief, and by the time I had used three boxes I was completely cured. This is why it gives me such great pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to everybody suffering from hemorrhoids as a preparation of the greatest value."

French Make Further Gains In Alsace

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 4, 9 a.m.—Continued fighting took place in Alsace this afternoon, with further gains made by the French. In Flanders the weather has turned bitterly cold, and there are prospects of night attacks from both sides.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 4 — Austrian aeroplanes have been active in various Russian border cities. The situation is unchanged at Warsaw.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Speaking in the Congress Committee to-day, Representative Gardener said the United States Army was not sufficiently strong to garrison Paris and her guns are practically negligible.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The fashionable guimpe for this jumper frock is closed at the front and has a square or round collar, often finished off with a ribbon tie. To fasten this guimpe at the back in the old style would be to make a serious error so far as juvenile fashions are concerned. The dress pictured illustrates this type and is a one-piece design, with two box plaits in front and back and a broad belt at the line. The material is serge, with guimpe of batiste. The pattern, No. 6,970, allows for two styles of sleeve, one having a turn-back cuff, the other a wristband. The sizes are 6, 8, 10 and 12 years.

Another design on this order has a deep square opening in front and none at all in back. The guimpe is plaited in chemisette style and has a turnover collar and turn-back cuffs stylishly finished with hemstitching. There are a black satin tie and black belt. On the whole, the skirt of this little check wool frock is rather scant, and many of the children's dresses are likewise, but with grown-ups' fashions becoming full skirted again it is more than likely that flaring skirts for children will be the thing once more.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

Grand Trunk Notifies Employees Wage Reduction is Necessary

Will Go Into Effect on April 1st—Grand Trunk Pacific Employees to Have Theirs Cut at Once

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—Over 14,000 employes of the Grand Trunk have been notified by Howard G. Kelley, First Vice-President of the road, that on account of the falling off in business, owing to the war, they will be asked to accept a reduction in wages dating from April 1st next.

Thousands of employes on the Grand Trunk Pacific have likewise been informed by Merely Donaldson, the General Manager, that they will receive a cut in pay dating from the first of the year. In both cases the reduction is to be based on the results of operations for the half year ending Dec. 31st last.

Men Will Refuse.

These notices have been forwarded to the men through the chief officers of the respective labour unions to which they belong. The men, through their representatives, have notified Mr. Kelley and Mr. Donaldson that on no account will they accept a cut in pay. They have been advised by their international presidents to oppose the proposed action of the companies to the last ditch. Failing a satisfactorily agreement through conciliation, a strike or lock-out will probably follow.

Letter of Notification.

Mr. Kelley's letter reads: "In view of the serious contraction in business and the consequent alarming decrease in earnings this company is confronted with a situation which must be relieved as quickly as possible.

"The general downward tendency of rates, both passenger and freight, without any compensating reduction in the cost of operation, has narrowed the margin of receipts over expenses to such an extent that with any further continuation of the present conditions this company will be confronted with a deficit.

Extent Not Yet Known.

"It therefore becomes necessary much to the regret of the management to notify you that the company will ask for a reduction in the rates of pay beginning with April 1st, 1915.

"The extent of the reduction required will be determined by the results of operation for the half year ending Dec. 31, 1914, and will be communicated to you after January 1, 1915."

The G. T. P. letter is the same, save that the date of cut is the beginning of the year.

Employees Affected.

On the Grand Trunk there are approximately 1,500 engineers, 1,500 firemen, 1,500 conductors, 1500 brakemen and baggagemen, 1,500 telegraphers, and 4,500 sectionmen, makin ga total of 14,000, all of whom are members of the International Union.

On the Grand Trunk Pacific it is understood only the engineers, firemen, conductors, and brakemen are embraced in the proposed reduction.

AUSTRIANS ARE DOWN-HEARTED

Hungarians However Continue to Wage Relentless War

WARSAW, Jan. 4.—The news obtainable here of operations in the vicinity of Cracow indicates that the Austrians are fighting half-heartedly and surrendering in large numbers on the slightest provocation.

One Russian soldier with a cavalry patrol got separated from his comrades in a fog and rode up to the Austrian trenches. The Russian soldier called upon the Austrians to surrender. Forty instantly threw down their arms. But an Austrian seeing that the Russian was single handed, called upon his men to shoot and the scout was killed by a volley as he endeavoured to escape.

There are many such stories indicative of the little heart with which the Austrians are fighting. It is reported that the Hungarians on the contrary continue to conduct fierce and relentless war.

The Austrian artillery which lacks the support of highly efficient infantry, is stated to maintain remarkably accurate fire, though inferior to that of the Russians.

Austrians as well as Germans, beyond all doubt use explosive bullets, but personally I am inclined to believe they are used as markers for getting the range. It is stated that ten such bullets are issued to each Austrian soldier daily for this purpose and are used freely at night when the flash as they burst indicates where they strike.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save your hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now

Thin, brittle, colourless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which, if not remedied, causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen, and die —then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—anytime— will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

SECOND CONTINGENT MAY GO IN MARCH

A Portion of the Contingent May be Sent to Egypt, Says Despatch From Ottawa

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—It is understood in militia circles here that the Second Canadian Expeditionary Force will leave for England early in March. It is expected that all necessary equipment, rifles, etc., will be available by next month, and the force will be ready to embark by the last week in February or the first week in March.

Although no official information is given out here as to the plans of the War Office in connection with the Canadian troops, there is reason to believe that a brigade at least of Canadians will be sent to Egypt to assist the Australian, British and Indian troops there in the offensive operations against Turkey.

Just what use is to be made of the nine regiments of mounted rifles now being raised throughout the Dominion is not ascertainable at present, though it is believed that some of them will go to Egypt, since the nature of operations now proceeding in Europe in the western war arena renders cavalry of little use. It is, of course, probable that a portion of the mounted troops being raised will be retained in Canada for home defence purposes.

GERMANS ARE AFTER LINDSAY

LINDSAY, Jan. 4.—Another thrill of an exciting nature went through the hearts of the general public when it was made known that an air-craft was seen hovering over Lindsay on Sunday morning.

The first persons to discover its position in the heavens was Messrs. H. Baker and W. J. Lyons, two G. T. R. despatchers who work at night from the hours of 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. in the morning. The aeroplane came from the east and directed its course southwesterly, steering as it were, according to the opinion of those who saw it, towards Toronto. The height of the machine could not be guessed at as the time was about 4 o'clock p.m., and an inky darkness prevailed, not yet could anything be said about the speed at which the craft was travelling. About all that was visible were three lights, one white light in front and two red lights on either sides.

Lieut.-Col. Fee was called up, who also witnessed the aeroplane going in the direction above stated and carrying lights. Various theories are advanced accounting for the nocturnal visit of the bird man. One report is that it was a machine gotten up by a Peterborough inventor who was giving it a try-out. From other sources it is learned that certain Canadians are practicing aeroplaning with the express intention of going to the seat of war in the service of the Empire. Lindsay being the home of the Minister of Militia it is thought that spies are endeavouring to locate the minister's residence and the armouries; also that the bridges along the C. P. R. might be the object of their attack and thus cut off the communication with the elevators at Midland.

MUST ARBITRATE WAGE CUT.

G.T.R. Employees Can't Strike First —Changes in Train Service.

Montreal, Jan. .—An official statement issued by the Grank Trunk confirms the Ottawa announcement that the employees have been asked to accept a decrease in wages beginning April 1, 1915.

The statement says that it had heard nothing of the likelihood of a strike as a result of the reductions and pointed out that if the men were not satisfied, the wage question would come under the Lemieux arbitration act.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company also announced this afternoon that some cuts in the train services in various sections of the system were now under consideration.

WAR NEWS IN BRIEF

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NAIROBI, British East Africa, Jan. 4.—The British battleship Goliath and light cruiser Fox carried out successful operations against Dar-es-Salaam, capital of German East Africa. The warships bombarded the town, inflicting considerable damage. All the German vessels in the harbour were disabled. Fourteen Europeans and twenty natives were taken prisoners.

The British loss was one killed and twelve wounded.

Dar-es-Salaam, the best built town on the coast of German East Africa, is a miltary station, with an excellent harbour, situated forty miles south of Zanzibar. It is the terminus of an important caravan route, the residence of a Governor and has large commercial interests. The white population in 1909 was estimated at one thousand, and the total population at more than twenty thousand.

FINE MEETING AT MAY'S

Monaghan Ratepayers Gathered After the Elections Last Night

Monaghan made a sweeping change in its Council yesterday. Reeve Howden sustained a pronounced defeat, and Herb. Foster slipped in by a narrow margin. Robert Dobbin made a big bid for the deputy seat, and it is believed he would have won in a steaight contest with Foster. Jos. H. Bell, a new man, headed the polls for Council, with Harold Rye, another new man, behind, and Wm. Robson safely returned.

The vote tells its own story of dissatisfaction with the Council's operations during the past two years. It is also a lesson to the new men. The chief complaints were with road work and the alleged extravagance of the old Council. The new body would be wise to present all their cards face up on the table. Pay sheets which only passed the Reeve scarcely suit the ratepayers who would be entirely disarmed by the presentation of such sheets in Council. The township wants progress, but, above all, it demands full value for every dollar expended.

At May's School last night there was a lively meeting after the totals were compiled. Mr. Kenneth Duncan was chairman.

Mr. Howden thanked his supporters. It was his first defeat in eight years, and he took it smilingly. He was glad to know that no ill-feeling had been aroused in the township. He held none towards any of the ratepayers, and to Reeve McIntosh and the Council he extended his wishes for a successful year.

Reeve McIntosh was pleased with the support he had received, and regarded it as a strong demand for economical and careful legislation.

Mr. Foster, Mr. Dobbin, Mr. Bell, Mr. Robson, Mr. Rye and Mr. Vass all spoke. The latter was not discomfited by his defeat. Mr. Vass wore a smile as broad as Mr. Howden's. He said he knew he was a young man, and had a lot to learn, and one was to come up smiling after defeat. He thanked those who voted for him, and said he was not "sore" at those who voted against him. He learned that if all those who promised support had voted for him he would have headed the polls. This was one feature of campaign he had learned. It was a friendly meeting with all the ratepayers burying differences and desiring only to keep the township in the onward and satisfactory condition they feel it should occupy.

Trenches Like The Catacombs

Guides Are Necessary to Lead Troops From One Point to Another

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. — A London cable to the Herald says:

An officer who has just returned from the front says that it is quite easy to lose one's self in the trenches, which now extend from the north of Belgium to Alsace in almost an unbroken line. Thus there are two hundred miles of intrenchments, and in many parts line after line of trenches, one behind the other. One could walk most of the distance under cover, for the English, French, and Belgian trenches all communicate with one another, and all have the same zig-zag underground passages leading to other intrenchments in the rear.

This officer declares that there has been nothing like it since the Catacombs were built, and he adds that guides are necessary in this semi-subterranean life at the front. Indeed, the trench guides' profession is now recognised, and guides regularly conduct troops from one part of the line to another.

HUGHES IS IN THE HOSPITAL.

OTTAWA, Jan. 5 — Major-General Sam Hughes is in St. Luke's Hospital suffering from sinovitis (inflamed veins) in his knee, and he will be there for probably a week or so. General Hughes when on his way home to Lindsay for Christmas met with an accident, slipping on the sidewalk in the train and injured his knee. Instead of getting off at the usual station he went along to Lindsay as usual, with the result that sinovitis has set in.

STEINBACH TAKEN BY GENERAL PAU

Victory Follows Fierce House to House Fighting — Mulhausen Threatened From Two Different Quarters

PARIS, Jan. 4—Steinbach has fallen.

The Alsatian town to which the French laid violent siege a week ago and which they later invested and forced their way into, fighting from house to house, and gaining ground only foot by foot, was carried to-day by the French, according to the official statement issued at midnight.

Carnay (called Sennheim by the Germans), is being violently attacked by the French. This town is but three miles from Steinbach, and the general offensive is directed against these two points in the advance on Muelhausen, which is only eight miles away. The fall of Carnay is expected to follow shortly.

Muelhausen Threatened.

French guns massed before Altkirch continue their bombardment of that important railway centre, which also is but about eight miles from Muelhausen, but slightly west of south. Steinbach, Carnay, Thann and Aspach are grouped just north of west of Meulhausen. Thus Meulhausen is threatened from two quarters, its front on the west and its left flank on the south.

So important is the success of the French in these operations that staff officers of the French army have applied to their attainment that word which has been treasured by even the most radical spirits for use only in decided triumphs—"Victory."

But defeat did not come to the German defenders of the town without the most desperately gallant defence.

German Guns Silenced.

Steinbach is situated on a low plateau about which there reach to great heights rugged cliffs traversed by narrow mountain paths and cut by passes of great natural defensive value. Originally the Germans held all the important passes and heights of strategical importance but by persistent battering with mountain guns and a few pieces of heavy artillery which the French were able to place to advantage the German batteries were silenced, wiped out or forced to withdraw.

Advancing around a hill to the northwest of the town, the French were able several days ago to occupy and install a battery in the ruins of a chateau, from which they poured a flanking fire into the remaining German works before the town. Forced finally to withdraw from these positions, the Germans retired to their last defensive positions on the edge of the town itself. Here they were reinforced by considerable bodies of troops brought up from Uffholz, to the east.

House-to-house Battle.

The French, undaunted by the new show of force, carried the fighting up to the German's last trenches, and the fighting in the streets began.

First the official accounts related the taking of "a few houses" by the French troops. This later was denied by the Germans. But the furious house-to-house fighting continued, and the French official statement recorded the capture of "another row of houses." To-day the afternoon statement told of the taking of the environs of the Church and the cemetery. The night official statement made this announcement: "At Steinbach this morning we carried the whole village."

Occupy All of Steinbach.

Paris, Jan. 4.—The following official communication was issued by the War Office to-night:

"The only reports which have been received up to the present have reference to upper Alsace, where engagements of a very violent nature continue in the region of Carnay.

"Last night our troops lost, then regained, the territory around the Church at Steinbach. This morning they occupied the entire village.

"The German works to the west of Carnay captured by us yesterday were lost for a brief period following a very violent counter-attack, but the Germans were not able to maintain it, and this position remains in our hands."

Gains Around Perthes.

The French War Office gave out the following official statement this afternoon:

"From the sea to the Oise the day passed in almost complete calm. The weather was rainy. There were artillery exchanges at some points of the front. In front of Nauleties our heavy artillery reduced the German batteries to silence.

"On the Aisne and in Champagne the cannonading was particularly violent. Our batteries showed their superiority and brought under their fire reserve forces of the enemy. We became possessed of several points of support held by the Germans in the region of Perthes and of Mesnil-les-Hurlus.

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse, as well as on the heights of the Meuse, there was intermittent cannonading. An effort made yesterday morning by our troops to occupy Bourreuilles did not succeed.

"Our advance continued in the forest of Le Pretre, which is to the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson.

"In upper Alsace we occupied an important height to the west of Carnay. A counter-attackk by the enemy was repulsed.

"In Steinbach we have taken possession of the vicinity of the Church and of the cemetery."

Germans Admit Steinbach Lost.

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—The official communication issued to-day by the German Army Headquarters says:

"On the western theatre of the war, except for a more or less heavy artillery combat along the front, it was generally quiet.

"[illegible] Thann (Alsace) and the [illegible] great success. After an overwhelming bombardment of the heights to the west of Steinbach the enemy succeeded during the evening in capturing gun emplacement trenches on these heights and in connection therewith the village of Steinbach, which we stubbornly defended and which has been frequently mentioned in our reports during the last few days. The heights were retaken during the night after a bayonet attack. Fighting for the village of Steinbach continues.

"In the eastern theatre of the war the situation is unchanged. Our attacks in Poland to the east of the Rawka River continue."

INSURANCE CO. MUST PAY MONEY

Debt of Insured to Company At Time of Death Does Not Cancel Bond

The following is an interesting judgment that was given yesterday:

In the case of Devitt vs. The Mutual Life Insurance Company, judgment in which was handed down at Osgoode Hall this morning, a point is involved of interests to policy holders. Ernest F. Carlson, of Edmonton, Alberta, was insured in 1910 in the defendant company for $2,000. He died in Los Angeles in 1914. The plaintiff, Devitt, obtained letters of administration of this estate and sought payment of the insurance held in the Mutual Life which was refused on the ground that no proofs of Devitt's death had been forthcoming. It was contended by the plaintiffs, however, that the company had repudiated the obligation, and denial of liability was a waiver of forward submission of proofs of death. The main cause of the defendants' denial of liability was that at the time of his death Devitt was in the company's debt for a loan on his policy, and that a part of the premium due on April, 1913, was unpaid. By reason of these debts the policy became void, it was contended. The point was also taken that the debt so created was equal to the surrender value of the policy at the time it was incurred. His Lordship said that the issue of the case depended on the interpretation of the "non-forfeitable" clause of the policy. There had been no voluntary surrender for value by the insured. He found that the loan with interest, and the balance due on the premium, amounting in all to $75.89, should be deducted from the face value of the policy, and the company should pay the sum of $1,924.11 to Devitts estate. Judgment was thus given.

MAKE BIG GAINS ALONG THE COAST

Allies Take Advantage of Unpreparedness of the Germans and Make Important Advances Near Nieuport and East of St. Georges--Belgian Artillery Has Been Re-organized.

Special to the Examiner.

PARIS, Noon, Tuesday.—The occupation of a new position in Alsace and important gains of territory in the north by taking advantage of the unpreparedness of the Germans, who were not expecting any offensive movement while the weather continued bad, were announced here this afternoon. At the same time it became known that the Belgian artillery, which has recently been reorganized, was again in action. The gains in the north by the British were important; they range from 200 to 500 yards on the dunes of Nieuport and east of St. George's. The Belgian artillery has been used to silence the German guns in this vicinity. Determined attempts on the part of the German sappers to mine the French positons to the west of Lens were prevented by shelling the German positions with short range mortars which literally blew their trenches to pieces. The Germans were more successful near Lille, destroying a long line of trenches along the main highway there. The French however shelled the victorious Germans with their three inch pieces and finally charged them, retaking the positions at the point of the bayonet. In the Rheims-Craonne region the long range artillery duels continue without any material change in the situation resulting. The French to-day entered Creux d' Argent, west of Orbey, in Alsace. The fighting is reported to be increasing in violence in Alsace, and the slogan "On to the Rhine!" is again being voiced here in Paris. Despite whatever happens at other points on the battle line nothing like the enthusiasm can be created as follows an announcement of gains, even though they be only inches and feet, in the "lost provinces."

PETROGRAD, January 5.—Naval battles on the Vistula are now certain. The Germans, apparently taking a leaf out of the Russian book, have armoured and armed river steamers and are utilizing them on the river in the Vyshegrad region. The Russians already have some steamers in action here, having used them to prevent the Germans forcing a crossing from the island which is in the middle of the river at this point.

It is believed here that the Germans are hopeful of forcing a crossing under the protection of the guns of their steamers, and the Russians have sent additional craft to attack them and prevent this.

A Russian success is reported from the south of Plock on the Gorlice Road. The Germans attacked in force but were trapped in a wood and forced to retreat with the loss of many prisoners and a machine gun.

The fighting in the Caucasus continues with the Russians regaining the advantage. Following an all-day fight yesterday at Ardagan, the Turkish positions were carried at the point of the bayonet, and are now in the possession of the Russians who are strongly fortifying them. The battle of Sarykamysh continues with slight gain for the Russians. It is not likely however that a decisive result will be obtained for several days.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—German airmen it is officially announced to-day, have dropped bombs on the British ammunition bases at Coudekerque and Rosendael, suburbs of Dunkirk. According to the announcement, the aviators destroyed a large quantity of ammunition at both places and set fire to Coudekerque, partly destroying the village and killing and wounding 100.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Advices from Las Palmas, Canary Islands, say that the German cruiser Karlsruhe has sunk four more merchant vessels owned by British and French concerns, and sent their crews into port on a German convoy steamer.

ENDS LIFE IN RIVER

Wearing Apparel Found on Bank of Otonabee Leaves Little Doubt of Fate of Wm. A. Whittaker

CLOTHING IDENTIFIED

Wearing apparel found on the bank of the Otonabee below the Hunter Street bridge about 8.30 a.m. to-day, identified as belonging to William A. Whittaker, and fresh tracks in the snow leading to the water's edge, point to a suicide at some time last evening.

Coats on Bank.

When Mr. T. W. Whalley was coming to business this morning from his residence on Engleburn Avenue, he noticed some clothes on the bank a short distance below Hunter Street bridge on the west side of the river. The attention of two members of the local fire department, who were proceeding towards East City, was drawn, and after investigation, Chief Howard was notified, with a view to using grappling irons in a search for the body of the victim. It was found that owing to the swift current at that place and the amount of ice in the river at the present time, any attempt at a search for the body would be useless.

Clothing Identified.

The wearing apparel found, which consisted of a blue coat, dark grey overcoat and brown cap, were then taken to the police station, where they were later identified by a son of W. A. Whittaker, as belonging to his father. A small book in a pocket, on the fly leaf of which was was plainly written, "W. A. Whittaker, Peterborough, Ont., leaves no doubt as to the owner of the goods. There was also in the pockets a miscellaneous collection, consisting of a tobacco pouch, watch case, box of matches, roll of tape, two pipes, and an old knife.

Track in Snow.

The place in front of which the clothes were found was an open space in the ice where the current was too swift for the water to freeze. There was only a single track leading down the bank and none returning. Had the fatality occurred before last evening it would have hardly been possible that the clothes would escape discovery yesterday with so many pedestrians crossing the bridge.

Had Been Drinking.

Whittaker has been boarding at 346 Aylmer Street since July last and he was last seen there on Saturday moning. He had not put in an appearance there from Monday last, when some of his friends believe he went to Port Hope for a couple of days. He was known to have been drinking heavily of late, and was on the blacklist for a number of months until November 27. He has been before Magistrate Dumble a few times during the past three years, but was always considered quite harmless when out of liquor. He was also a good workman and has had fairly steady work with the city.

Seemed in Trouble.

At Mr. Heads' temperance house, corner Aylmer and King Streets, where Whittaker boarded from May 6 to July 2, 1914, he was described as a quiet man, who seemed to have a trouble, but never appeared like a man who would end his life in such a manner. He was well known in the city, having been a resident of East City for a number of years.

Striking Coincidence.

Older residents will remember the drowning of Mr. George Rogers in the Otonabee about thirty years ago, when he gave his life to save that of two companions. There is a window to the memory of the late Mr. Rogers in St. Luke's church and one of the men he saved was William A. Whittaker.

At that time the late Mr. Rogers, accompanied by Whittaker and another companion, the late Robert Sheridan, went in a boat to break a log jam at the old dam nearly opposite where the Quaker Oats plant now stands, and the water being rather rough the boat capsised. In securing the safety of the other two Mr. Rogers was drowned. It is quite a coincidence that the Otonabee should at last succeed in its claim for William Whittaker.

Leaves Family.

Whittaker leaves a wife and family, who are respectable residents of the City, and they have the sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement.

MAY BE POINTED AT GERMANY TOO

United States Protest in Regard to Searching of American Ships May Involve Germany---Test Case May Be Tried

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The American shipping protest may become a double-edged knife to be aimed at Germany as well as Great Britain. It was reported to-day. Coal shipments, it is declared, may become the subject of complaint to Germany. On excellent authority it was stated to-day that, involved in the shipping discussion with Great Britain, is the question of Germany's having secured coal oil and other contraband from the United States in alleged violation of both navigation and neutrality laws. Shipments of coal which have fallen into German hands, upon clearance papers believed misleading, have been the subject of complaint by Great Britain. To prevent such incidents the British contraband patrol was tightened up, it is believed. Cargoes of coal which were seized by the German warships in both the Pacific and Atlantic after being shipped from United States ports and consigned to neutral ports may become the subject of representations to Germany. The American registry of the Hamburg-American ship Dacia under the emergency act, it is also reported, may be the basis of a test case. It is thought possible that the Dacia will be sent with cotton to Germany and a test case raised to determine how far the allies will go in preventing the sale of the German and Austrian ships interned in United States ports to Americans.

ROME, Jan. 5.—Advices form Vienna brought by mesenger to escape the censor, indicate that the Russian advance into Hungary is gaining strength rapidly. Already more than 200,000 Russians including all classes of troops, have penetrated the Carpathian mountain passes and are now following the railways and highways south toward Budapest. The Hungarian capital is said to be greatly excited over this latest development, and many Hungarians are urging a revolutionary movement to aid the Russians on the ground that the Slavs should protect themselves, and that inasmuch as Germany has been of no real help to the dual empire, the latter should make independent peace terms and thus prevent its entire annihilataion. As a result it is stated that hundreds of arrests have been made of persons with revolutionary leanings.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—A statement by Representative Bartholdt of St. Louis, before the House Foreign Affairs Committee to-day, declared that Canadian troops crossed through Maine en route to England to fight, caused a heated debate. Two members of the committee took him violently to task. Bartholdt retorted by declaring that "the United States is actually waging war under cover of neutrality; our ammunition is being used," he stated, "in killing the kinsmen of 25,000,000 Americans."

Bartholdt was asked whether he had received any protests from American citzens against the violation of "little Belgium's neutrality?" Bartholdt replied by asking if the United tSates protested against the violation of its neutrality by Canadian troops crossing one of the New England states? Bartholdt said it was a matter of common knowledge that Canadian troops had violated the neutrality of the United States. Chairman Flood promised to investigate.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—Although the weather has been improving to-day there has been only minor fighting on the northern battle front. The latest reports indicate that the Germans are concentrating for a new offensive to the east and south east of Ypres and at Labassee. Fresh troops have been brought up, supported by artillery and it is believed that as soon as the inundated district freezes solid that a forward movement will be attempted. Meanwhile the fighting continues in Alsace. In the vicinity of Steinbach positions have been taken and retaken as many as half a dozen times. The latest reports received indicate a small gain for the French troops. However, both sides are being strongly reinforced and there are indications that the fighting in this district has only begun. The cold weather is interfering seriously with the operations; it is almost impossible to move artillery through the mountain passes, and as a result most of the fighting is now confined to infantry encounters.

Along the heights of the Meuse the artillery duel continues without interruption. Both sides are so very strongly entrenched that frontal attacks by infantry are out of the question.

DEPUTATION TO OTTAWA

It Would Seem That Peterborough Has Been Overlooked as a Mobilization Centre

MAYOR WILL GO

From word that has been received in Peterborough, it would seem that the military authorities have temporarily abandoned the idea of making this city a mobilization centre for troops. Yesterday posters were out calling for tenders on food supplies. On instructions received from the authorities, the tenders advertised for will be withheld. It would seem that the militia department proposes to mobilize troops in Ottawa and Belleville.

Will Visit Ottawa.

In connection with this matter, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has notified the Minister of Militia that a deputation from Peterborough will wait upon the authorities in an endeavor to have Peterborough recognized as a logical place for the mobilization of troops. His Worship Mayor Butler will accompany the deputation, which will leave some time this evening.

It had been announced that the troops for the 3rd contingent would be mobilized at Belleville, Peterborough, Port Hope, Cobourg, Lindsay and other eastern towns.

FUNERAL OF LATE MRS. SAM LONG

Took Place Yesterday Afternoon- Had Resided in East City 56 Years

The funeral of the late Mrs. Samuel Long, who passed away at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. O'Rourke, in Toronto, on New Year's Day, took place yesterday afternoon from her late residence, Sophia street, East City, to St. Luke's Church, and thence to the Little Lake cemetery. A large number of friends gathered at the church, to pay their last respect to the memory of the deceased. The late Mrs. Long had been a resident of East City for fifty-six years, and in her years of health and strength was a faithful member of St. Luke's Church. Fitting reference was made to the life of the deceased by the rector, Rev. Mr. Sawers, at the funeral service yesterday afternoon. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Samuel, Fred and Alex Long, sons of the deceased, and Messrs. Samuel, Jr., and Robert Long, of this city, and Geo. Lindsay, of Rochester, N.Y., grandsons.

Relatives from out of town present at the funeral were: Mr. Fred. Long, of Park Rapids, Minn.; Mrs. Eyahs and Mr. and Mrs. O'Rourke, of Toronto; Mrs. Henry Lindsay, and her son, Mr. Geo. Lindsay and daughters, Misses Margaret and Bella, of Rochester, N.Y.

Many beautiful floral tributes bore testimony to the high esteem in which the late Mrs. Long was held.

CANADA HIT HARD.

A Detroit journal says that Canada is hard hit by the war. So is the United States; so is the whole world. But Canada is not yet hit as hard as the United States. A search of the bank returns shows that the people of Canada have bank deposits of $141.49 per head, about double that of the per capita wealth of the people of the United States as represented by bank deposits. The latest returns of the United States banks show deposits of $76.75 per head. We may not have as many moneyed monopolists as our neighbours, but we have more generally distributed wealth than our neighbours. In perhaps no country of the world is there such general prosperity and comfortable living as in Canada, and we are fighting to keep it. We may be hit hard by the war, but we welcome the blow. If we are hit hard we are ourselves to blame. We accept the responsibility of our place in the Empire, and we are trying to do our duty in the fight for the highest interests of humanity. Are our neighbours to the south of us doing the same? Are they answering the call that comes to every democracy to defend and uphold the principle and spirit of democracy, attacked and imperilled by the most thoroughly organized despotism of history—the international Ishmaelite whose hand is against every man and, thank goodness, every man's hand against him, except a few neutral countries which do not show their hand. On principle the United States cannot justify its neutrality; for the assault, the campaign of Germany, is directed against all the conditions under which free people enjoy freedom.

A MODERATOR MILITANT.

Canada and the Empire are in the throes of a struggle that is to be fought without gloves. It has its horrors, but the man that counts the cost is not the one who fights best. If he sees anything but the duty of the moment, he will not be at his best. Rev. Dr. Herridge, of Ottawa, Moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, preached a sermon at Ottawa that had the right ring, that indicated plainly the duty of the hour. He did not draw gruesome pictures of the horrors of war, of bereaved relatives and desolated homes. We don't need to have these things emphasized. He, on the contrary, preached the duty of prosecuting the war with the vigour that will bring it to a close. He spoke no new truth except in form when he said:

"Britain is not responsible for this war. On the contrary, she did everything that could be done to prevent it. We have no quarrel with Germany, viewed in a certain light, but have a quarrel with Germany dominant to-day, and having espoused that quarrel it must be carried through, whatever the cost may be, until that Germany is overthrown."

There be preachers that tell us war is sinful. Of course it is, in the abstract. But this war on the part of Britain and her allies is a righteous war, a war that makes for permanent peace. As Dr. Herridge says: "We fight now that we may never have to fight again. We fight for justice, honour and human liberties. We fight that the gloom of battle may usher in a brighter day." Dr. Herridge did not hold up pictures of gloom and discouragement. The fight is not alone to the soldier in the battle line. we must, as all — men, women and children are doing—do our share in the fighting, whether we knit socks for soldiers, or help alleviate the suffering due to the war. We are all working for peace, in working for our success in war. We accept the responsibility and will best discharge it by doing, not moaning; by using our hands for the duty that presents instead of wringing them in unavailing regret. We cannot even pray a-right for peace unless we work a-right. We must not cry peace when there is no peace. There can be no peace so long as the iniquitous system founded upon the doctrine of force, the elevation of the state over the individual, the subordination of organization for individual freedom, and all the works of despotism, is crushed never to rise again.

THE ELECTIONS ARE OVER.

The elections are over; the electors—that is a part of them—have spoken and we must accept the results, must accept the packet of municipal mixed sweets that has been presented us. There is not much change in the composition of our representative bodies. There are three new members of the Council, and two new members of the Board of Education. The Council may be regarded as relatively weakened by the withdrawal of the long experience of Alderman Duncan, whose place is taken by an untried and inexperienced man. It cannot be said that the Council has been strengthened by the changes. We must, however, make the best of the situation. The Council has its duties, and the ratepayers also have theirs. The ratepayers have shown a considerable degree of indifference in regard to the election of members, but they can to a certain extent repair their neglect of duty, implied in their lack of interest, even now, by taking their representatives in charge and watching their course with active and intelligent interest. It is a recognized fact that the ratepayers as a body confine their chief interest in municipal government to grumbling at high taxes and bewailing the results of ineffective or careless or extravagant administration. It is not "up to them" to complain, when they allow their representatives, or some of them, to virtually elect themselves. They cannot consistently complain if they take no interest in the work of the Council and School Board—if they keep themselves in ignorance of the work of these bodies. The ratepayers might easily and profitably take an interest in the work of their representatives and watch closely what is going on. If a course is taken or a policy is pursued that is not in the public interest, the ratepayers should have their protest ready when it can do some good and not reserve protest till the mischief is done—lock the stable after the horse is stolen. And all our representative bodies, City Council, Board of Education, and Utilities Commission, should take the people more into their confidence than has been the practice in the past. They are theoretically working for the public, and the public is entitled to information as to what is being done. There are many things the people want to know, have a right to know, that are not disclosed in public meetings. These might form the subject of public statements by these bodies from time to time. By having such information in regard to what affects them materially, the public will be in a position to enter protest if protest is necessary, and during the year the ratepayers will have an intelligent knowledge of local affairs, and will be in a far better position to appraise the work of their representatives, and intelligently regard the duty of electing a new council or school board, when the time shall come. If our representatives wish to secure the confidence of their constituents, they must take them into their confidence. They are the servants of the people, and the servant should not be above the master.

GERMANY'S FOREIGN INVESTMENTS.

It is estimated that German holdings of American securities before the war were about $700,000,000. Germany's total foreign investments are put by competent authorities at $5,000,000,000, of which about $800,000,000 are in Russia, about $200,000,000 in Turkey, and $40,000,000 in Roumania. In South America her investments are placed at $600,000,000. Great Britain's foreign investments are estimated at over $15,000,000,000 of which about one-half is employed in her colonies, and less than 5 per cent. in Europe. Approximately, $5,000,000,000 of Britain's investments are in the United States.—New York Journal of Commerce.

OPEN THE SALOONS.

At the national brewers' annual convention at New Orleans, President Edward A. Schmidt of Philadelphia insisted that beer should be considered a harmless beverage and sold as such. The saloon must be stripped of screens, shutters, and fiery liquors, and made a place where mild family refreshment of all sorts can be obtained under decent conditions. The old order of pushing the sale of alcoholic poisons and generally making the saloon a shady place for shady people and transactions must be given up. The change is to be supported and urged along by the brewers themselves. Now, whether one likes beer or not, it is evident that Mr. Schmidt is on the right track and that his method is the only one that can save the beer business from extinction. It will be interesting to see whether his proposals are accepted by the brewing interests generally. In the past the beer men have identified themselves with the whisky makers. They have had their meetings in common and have pooled their funds for fighting temperance. Maybe it isn't yet too late for the beer people to save themselves by a prompt and energetic divorce.—Colliers.

The Limited and Limitless Powers of the German Emperor

President Lowell's volume on "The Governments of France, Italy and Germany," which has just been published by the Harvard University Press, gives an explicit and interesting picture of the powers of the German Emperor: "The title seems to denote an hereditary sovereign of the Empire, but from a strictly legal point of view this is not his position. He is simply the King of Prussia, and he enjoys his imperial prerogatives by virtue of his royal office. There is, in fact, no imperial crown, and the right to have her king bear the title, and exercise the functions of Emperor, is really one of the special privileges of Prussia.

"The power has very little power as such, except in military and foreign matters. . . But as King of Prussia the Emperor has a complete initiative by means of the Prussian delegates to the Bundesrath whom he appoints. As Emperor he has no veto, but as King he has a very extensive veto — for it will be remembered that the negative vote of Prussia in the Bundesrath is sufficient to defeat any amendment to the constitution, or any proposal to change the laws relating to the army, the navy, or the taxes. As Emperor he has supreme command of the army and appoints the highest officers. As King of Prussia he appoints the lower officers, and has the general management of the troops over most of Germany.

"As Emperor he instructs the Chancellor to prepare a bill. As King he instructs him to introduce it into the Bundesrath, and directs how one-third of the votes of that body shall be cast. Then the bill is laid before the Riechstag in his name as Emperor, and as King he directs the Chancellor what amendments to accept on behalf of the Bundesrath, or rather in behalf of the Prussian delegation there. After the bill has been passed and become a law, he promulgates it as Emperor, and in most cases administers it in Prussia as King; and finally as Emperor he supervises his own administration as King."

How German Spy System Is Worked in Poland

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Writing from Petrograd Perceval Gibbon says: A friend of mine, an officer in command of a flying hospital column with the Russian troops, gives me the following account of troubles with spies and other features of the fighting in Poland:

"About spies I could tell you volumes after a month in Poland. It is not only Jews, but swarms also of genuine Germans, whose duty it seems to have been to live in Poland for years and make themselves absolutely at home. Their signalling tricks beggar all imagination. When we discovered their coloured smoke signals they took to arranging codes with chimney pots." Normal meant all right. Gone altogether means guns. Lying on the side meant cavalry.

"One day during a change of positions our troops in hundreds passed by a man in a soldier's uniform lying in a ditch, where he complained of rheumatism, but refused aid, saying he wanted a little rest, and would then manage to get along. The fellow steadily declined help from the passing troops or even to ride in carts, and he would not go on with the field hospital when asked to.

"Finally, along came a Cossack patrol. There are no cuter fellows than our Cossacks. I told them that the man refused to come along, and appeared not to be wounded, but seemed unable to walk. A Cossack said: 'A wounded soldier or tired man crawls along a bit and rests, crawls and rests. This chap has been here for hours, for we passed this way before.' Down came the Cossack's nagaika whip, and up started the rheumatic incapable, and under him was a telephone, over which he had been telephoning news of everything that passed along the road for goodness knows how long.

"What happened? Well, the Germans got no more telephone messages from that scoundrel.

"A suspicious Pole was brought in one day, who understood no German and no Russian. He was a Pole at all points. But still there was something which the examining officer could not quite satisfy himself about. His superior, turning around from his work, suddenly said to the officer in German: 'Of course, the fellow's a German spy. Hang him up.' The supposed Pole, who knew no German, fell into the trap, and a full confession followed, with the usual result.

"It is to the interests of the Germans to foster enmity between the Pole and Russian and they have done it well. Why, the Poles will bring a horse and cart, ten, twenty, even thirty miles back toward the enemy's front, to help our wounded away, and never accept a penny for it.

"Our regular ambulance work is very difficult. We only go by night and dare not show lights, as German artillery fire at everything they see moving. We take advantage of this. When we can, we start a big fire a few hundred yards away and work in peace while the Germans are wasting tons of ammunition.

"Mostly, we creep about the scene of recent battles by night, hunting for the wounded in the bushes, trenches, and in open fields. It's eerie work at best. All day during the fighting we lie low somewhere in the trenches or convenient ditches, wherever we can."

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—For the first time wheat today soared above the high price level that was made Sept. 5 at the most exciting crisis of the German advance on Paris.

On European buying that seemed nearly regardless of cost, wheat today touched $1.34¾ a bushel for May delivery, as against $1.32, which was the Sept. 5 record, and until this morning had been the topmost price since the apex of the famous James A. Corn finished 1⅜c to 1⅞c up, oats at a rise of ⅝c to 1¼c and provisions varying from 5c off to 12½c advance.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 4.—Prices opened unusually strong on the first market day of the year, wheat being 2⅝c to 3¼c, oats ⅞c, and flax 2⅝c, all higher, as compared with Thursday's closing figures. The demand for export wheat was the contributing cause of the advance, and reports of the Russian crops suffering owing to drought during the fall.

There was a good enquiry for all cash grains, but not enough offerings to make a market. Exporting houses were heavy buyers of futures against export sales, and bids from foreigners continue on the up-trend.

Later reports claimed heavy sales to the embroyed [illegible]

Thursday closed today 3⅛c to 4⅛c higher; cash closed 4¼c higher, oats ⅝c higher and flax 1c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 4.—There was considerable enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today at an advance in prices of 6d to 1s per quarter, but even at the higher level they were out of line in most cases, and the volume of business done was small.

There was also a good demand for Manitoba barley, and a sale of 10,000 quarters was made to London of feed grade at 29s. There was an active enquiry for spring wheat flour for export account, and sales of 3000 sacks of export patent were made for shipment to Glasgow at 36s 9d, while 36s 3d was refused for a number of round lots.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 4.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, a feature of the day's trade was the stronger feeling for butchers' cattle, prices for such advancing 25c per cwt. Demand was much better than expected, consequently a fair trade was done, with sales of a few odd loads of good steers at $7.25, and picked lots at $7.50; but, as the supply of this class of stock was limited, the bulk of the business was done in cattle, ranging in prices from $6.75 to $6.75 per cwt.

Small meats were quiet and prices firm. Hogs stronger, and prices show an advance of 25c to 50c per 100 pounds. The trade was fairly active in selected lots at $6.25 to $6.50; cows at $4.25 to $6.50, and stags at $4 to $4.25 per cwt., weighed off cars.

A CANADIAN PRIVATE'S PARODY.

"We are cold Captain Bunkum," the private groans,
"And we slept in wet blankets last night.
Yet we stand on parade till we're chilled to the bones,
Do you think that is treating us right?"

"The Canadian Contingent," the captain replied,
"Is tough—as you'll see in the news,
And will flinch from no hardship, however they're tried.
If you don't believe me, ask Sam Hughes."

"We drill every day in the wet, Captain B.,
And the clothes we put on remain damp.
This tells on one's stock of endurance, you see,
Say, why don't we shift from this camp?"

"The huts are not ready yet," came the reply,
"And we'll miss a parade if we move.
Be patient! Take hardships as soldiers—and I,
By next spring things ought to improve."

"If the cooks, Captain Bunkum, should vary our meals
With Hamburg steak, sausage, and such,
An occasional spud or two—boiled without peels—
Would the Government mind very much?"

"To grumble at rations, with your scale of pay,
Seems to me, my man, quite idiotic.
You can buy extra 'chuck' with your dollar a day.
Besides, Hamburg steak's unpatriotic."

"Just one moment, Captain," the private called out,
"I've one problem more, then I'll quit.
If we're fit for the front, as is rumoured about,
Are our officers equally fit?"

"I've answered three questions, and that is enough,"
The Captain with energy roars.
"Do you think, by the Lord, we are throwing a bluff?
Dis-MISS, or I'll make you form fours."

PORT HOPE JUNIORS SURPRISED THE LOCALS

Peterboro' Youngsters Failed To Show Anything Like Their Real Form and Were Beaten in the Opening Game Of the Season by 9 to 5

The Port Hope Optaries came to town last night and handed the Peterborough Juniors a rude jolt in the first Junior O.H.A. game of the season. The Hopers led at the end of each period by 3 to 2, 6 to 4, and 9 to 5, and while they did not look like a championship team at any stage they had the better of the argument. The young Petes' showing was a disappointment, their play falling far below the standard they showed in their game with the Old Boys, last week. There are no alibis—the team as a whole and as individuals were off colour all the way. They lacked pepper and aggressiveness, forgot there was any such thing as combination and shot weirdly and wonderfully; never at any stage did they play any hockey of the brand they are capable of and altogether their showing was a shock to the fans who have been watching their work in practice. Whether it was over-confidence or stage fright their off night against the Onterios will give them a tough battle for the district honours.

Port Hope trotted out a clever little team. They played nice hockey, and looked all the better because the Petes were so bad. They shot on goal accurately and showed an effective combination on their forward line, while their defence checked well, and Edmunds, in the nets, proved an accomplished goal guardian. In Rowden and Lowe they have two very handy wings. Both are speedy and pack a good shot generally on the nets. Hills is a neat stick handler, and both defence men rushed well.

Legros, in the nets for the Petes, was the only player to show at his real form. The rest seemed to be unable to get started, failed to hold their positions and appeared all at sea. Penalties, too, played their part in the disaster, and the locals were a man short for the greater part of the fracas. Morrow was missed off the defence.

Referee W. M. Tackaberry of Toronto proved an unsatisfactory referee. He tried to be strict, and in doing so chased the players for minor infractions, while he lost sight of the more important things. The Ontarios loafed consistently and got away with an offside combination all night. The official seemed unaware of the fact that a player ahead of the puck is always offside.

Port Hope's last goal was scored while half the players and some of the crowd were in a mix-up near the Port Hope goal. Rowden carried the rubber up and scored, the referee failing to notice the fight. He did not even know who were engaged and nobody was punished.

The teams lined up as follows:

Port Hope		Peterborough
	Goal
Darch		Long
	Right Defence
Thompson		Smyth
	Left Defence
Emmerson		Knapman
	Rover
Hills		Jackson
Rowden	Centre	O'Connell
Lowe	Right Wing	Richardson
	Left Wing

Play was fast at the go in, with the checking close and hard. Both sides had long range shots which the goalkeepers handled easily. Finally Knapman opened the ball by beating Edmunds on a long shot from the side. O'Connell of the Petes was penalized three times in a row, but there was no scoring while he was off. Shortly after, Long was benched for upsetting a Port Hope player and while he was on the side, Rowden evened up the score with a side shot. Darch was benched for tripping and playing seven men to six the Petes scored, Long carrying the puck down nicely and passing to Jackson, who scored from close in. Emmerson tied the score shortly afterwards by a shot from a scrimmage. Long went the length of the rink on a good rush but missed the nets. Rowden secured and started down on a nice rush, beating Legros with a beautiful shot.

The Petes evened it up shortly after the beginning of the second period, when Long got away alone and carried the rubber in on top of Edmunds for a goal. Emmerson put Port Hope ahead on a long shot and Darch followed with another goal on a good rush. A combination rush gave the Hopers a chance for a close-in shot which Legros stopped. Smyth, in checking back, slid into the nets and carried the puck in with him. It was a tough luck goal. Knapman closed the gap a little when he took a pass from Jackson and slid the rubber past Edmunds. For the balance of the period the Petes had the better of the play, but they could not score, losing half a dozen golden chances.

The Petes tried a shift in the third period, Long going up to right wing and O'Connell back to the defence, but it did not make any difference in the play. Port Hope scored shortly after the period opened, Hills doing the trick, and Lowe added another from a scrimmage. The Petes got in back in ten seconds, Jackson and Knapman carrying the rubber from the face-off for a goal by the former. The last goal of the game went to Port Hope, Rowden scoring while a fistic combat was being staged.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The Young Petes were away below form last night. They failed to show anything like the hockey they are capable of.

The players all realize that, and if there was ever a disgusted bunch it was the Peterborough team when they reached their dressing-room at the end of the third period.

Port Hope played the better hockey for the night, but the Petes refuse to acknowledge that the Hopes are the betetr team, and say that they will still give them a battle royal for the honours. The Petes play in Cobourg on Thursday night with the return game here on Tuesday night next.

The standing in the Intermediate group is as follows:

	W	L.	T.P
Picton	2	0	5
Peterborough	1	0	2
Whitby	2	1	7
Oshawa	1	1	3
Bowmanville	1	2	7
BBelleville	0	3	7

OSHAWA BEAT BELLEVILLE TEAM

OSHAWA, Jan. 4—In a fast and exciting game played here to-night Oshawa defeated Belleville in an intermediate O.H.A. game by a score of 11 to 7. During the first period, which ended 3 to 2 in favour of Oshawa, the contest was close and the teams appeared evenly matched, but during the second period Oshawa outplayed their opponents all over the ice, and got going very fast in combination play. This period ended 9 to 4 in Oshawa's favour. The game was marked by heavy checking and many minor offences, mostly all being caught and penalized by Referee Gorrie.

In the last period the game lagged somewhat, and Oshawa with a good lead became careless, ending the play with four players on the ice. The teams:

Referee—Gorrie.

WHITBY TURNED TABLES ON BOWMANVILLE

WHITBY, Jan. 4.—The Whitby intermediates got revenge to-night for their defeat at the hands of Bowmanville on New Year's Day, when they administered a defeat to the "rubber necks" in the return game.

The local outplayed, outwitted and outskated the visitors in the second period particularly. The ice was fast, and the game likewise. Of the locals, the Blanchard brothers and Hudge Watson were probably the best, with Lavery showing strong. The final score was 5 to 3, the last period being fast and furious. The teams:

Whitby — Goal, Brown; defence, Smith, McIntyre; centre, A. Blanchard; rover, Lavery; wings, C. Blanchard, Watson.

Bowmanville—Goal, Spry; defence, Jones; Davey; centre, Greenfield; rover, Williams; wings, Higginbottom, Hooper.

Referee—H. Sproule.

WINTER SWIMMING GAINS POPULARITY

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Fifty-two persons, fully half of whom were young women, participated in the opening of the winter bathing season at Coney Island. The water temperature was 48 degrees and the air 28. Later in the season they will break the ice to get their daily or weekly sea bath.

About five hundred persons snugly wrapped in heavy furs and robes, watched the scantily clad bathers from the rocks at the foot of Ocean avenue, the bathers dividing their time between swimming and playing medicine ball on the beach.

Piping hot lunch was served about a big bonfire on the beach, and when the bathers had resumed their street dress most of them went to Prospect Park to join a skating party. All agreed that the water was fine, but that the air was a bit chilly.

Those who participated in the day's sports were members of the Polar Bears, the Arctics, the Snow Birds, the Icebergs or the Sea Gulls, all winter sea bathing clubs.

To the Electors

To the Electors:

Allow me to thank you for the substantial majority with which you endorsed my candidature for Mayor at the polls yesterday. To the workingmen of this city, and others who assisted in my re-election, my warmest thanks are due for the loyal manner in which they rallied around the people's candidate.

Believe me, I will continue to serve you to the best of my ability, and will make every effort to justify the confidence placed in me.

Yours faithfully,

WM. H. BULLER

CARD OF THANKS

I desire to express my deep appreciation of the splendid support that was given to me in the contest for a place on the Board of Education. I consider that with the very strong men that were in the field against me, the showing my friends gave me was a remarkable one, and I thank them one and all, and wish each of them a prosperous New Year.

J. W. GREENE

Yours sincerely,

G. WALTER GREEN

Professional Football Players Now Rallying to the Colours

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Professional football players from all parts of the country have at last made a strong rally to the colours and will go on active service when the soccer season is ended. A battalion of players has been formed and permission given by Lord Kitchener to all professional players joining who are under contract for time off for their engagements until the end of the season.

All expenses for travelling from their training centres to their Saturday games will be paid for by the clubs. That they might be induced to join at once their army pay starts from the time they are attested and this pay is in addition to the salaries received from the clubs.

It was arranged at first to form the battalion from the London professionals only, but at a meeting recently held so many of the country clubs were represented that it was decided to receive applications from professionals throughout England. Mr. Joynson-Hicks, M.P., who presided, announced amid intense enthusiasm that the battalion will be attached to the Middlesex regiment, who are well known as "The Die Hards" and will be at the front within a few months.

At the close of the meeting nearly one hundred professionals stepped forward to enlist and after being sworn in were marched off amid enthusiastic scenes to pass their medical examination. This showing was considered a splendid answer to the attacks that lately have been made on the professional player.

Clapton Orient, the second division club, made the best response at the meeting, no fewer than ten of their regular league team volunteering, but with every club in the country giving valuable assistance in obtaining recruits the battalion will be completed speedily and ready to give an account of itself worthy of English arms.

General Pau's Army Captures Important Village

French Heavy Artillery Compelled the Germans to Evacuate Heavily Fortified Position and March on Mulhausen Will Be Easy

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The capture by the French of the Alsatian Village of Steinbach, Upper Alsace, for which a long house to house conflict has been waged, is admitted to-day in an official German report, which claims further that the Germans regained by a bayonet charge the height near the village, which the French had also captured. Fighting is continuing for the possession of Steinbach.

The most ardent enthusiasm prevails among the French at the progress of the forces at Steinbach.

A despatch to The Journal of Paris describes the fighting there. The Germans were prepared to present the utmost resistance to the French attacks on the village. Redoubts were constructed in houses, in gardens and in the streets, and machine guns were posted everywhere. Deadly French 75 millimetre guns, however, forced the enemy to evacuate, leaving 2,300 dead or wounded in the streets. The French can already see flags flying in Muhlhausen, says The Journal.

Rainy weather brought calm Sunday to the battle lines from the North Sea to the Oise river. At other points of the hostile lines in France there was heavy cannonading and the Paris official report claims the French artillery showed superiority. Several German points of support in the Champagne district were taken, but the effort to occupy a position in the Meuse country failed. In Upper Alsace the statement reports merely a further gain at Steinbach, and the capture of an important height.

The following official communication was issued by the War Office last night:

"The only reports which have been received up to the present have reference to upper Alsace, where engagements of a very violent nature continue in the region of Cernay.

"Last night our troops lost, then regained, the territory around the church at Steinbach. This meaning they occupied the entire village.

"The German works to the west of Cernay captured by us yesterday were lost for a brief period following a very violent counter-attack, but the Germans were not able to maintain it, and this position remains in our hands."

The French War Office gave out the following official statement yesterday afternoon:

"From the sea to the Oise the day passed in almost complete calm. The weather was rainy. There were artillery exchanges at some points of the front. In front of Nouiettes our heavy artillery reduced the German batteries to silence.

"On the Aisne and in Champagne the cannonading was particularly violent. Our batteries showed their superiority and brought under their fire reserve forces of the enemy. We became possessed of several points of support held by the Germans in the region of Perthes and of Mesnil-les-Hurlus.

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse, as well as on the heights of the Meuse, there was intermittent cannonading. An effort made yesterday morning by our troops to occupy Bourouilles did not succeed.

"Our advance continued in the forest of Le Pretre, which is to the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson.

"In Upper Alsace we occupied an important height to the west of Cernay. A counter-attack by the enemy was repulsed.

"In Steinbach we have taken possession of the vicinity of the church and of the cemetery."

ELLIOT'S

The Right Conception Of Prayer Concerning The War

Or Anything Else—What Prayer Will Assist in Securing Triumph to the Arms—Obedience to the Sermon on the Mount

It is only necessary to read the daily papers, all over the world, in order to discover that the war is uprooting many of those beliefs which the prophet Isaiah might have termed the idols of the human race. One of those beliefs is that of the orthodox concept of prayer. For centuries men have regarded prayer as a direct petition of the individual to an omniscient being. The idea has its roots in the remotest antiquity, and bound up with it is the whole gamut of those horrible superstitions with respect to the propitiation of the malignant deities. Sarcasm and eloquence have been hurled against this delusion alike in vain. "Desine fata deum flecti sperare precando," wrote Virgil, in the century before the birth of Jesus the Christ,—"Give up hoping that by prayer the decisions of the gods can be altered," — while in the century after the crucifixion Lucian, in the "Dialogues of the Gods," exerted his unrivalled power of raillery for the purpose of destroying the same legend. Christianity conquered. Zeus and Diana went the way of Baal or Isis. But the idea of prayer as petition instead of assimilation endured, so that even as noble a man as Hugh Latimer could say, "Wherefore I pray you all to pray with me unto God, and that in your petition you desire that these two things He vouchsafe to grant us!"

Latimer himself would have been the very first to admit the omniscience of God. Yet it never seems to have occurred to him that there was anything irrational in doing that thing which Mrs. Eddy questions, on page 2 of Science and Health, when she demands: "Can we inform the infinite Mind of anything He does not already comprehend? Do we expect to change perfection?" Nevertheless, every time finite human intelligence petitions omniscient perfection to grant its desires, it assumes the possibility, it even calculates the probability, of being able to inform infinite widom or influence divine perfection, instead of realising that it is human ignorance which must be lost in spiritual knowledge, and the human will which must disappear in obedience to principle.

The simple truth is that it is the human will which, being human, is insistent in its desires. It bases its prayers on a material sense of right and wrong, of which it commonly contitutes itself the arbitrary judge. "My country, right or wrong," is, consciously or unconsciously, the usual underlying current of all prayers in time of war. There is a remarkable instance of what this ultimates in, in the famous passage in which Lord Macaulay describes the camp service of the allies on the morning of Blenheim: "The English chaplains read the prayers at the head of the English regiments. The Calvinistic chaplains of the Dutch army, with heads on which the hand of the bishop had never been laid, poured forth their supplications in front of their countrymen. In the meantime, the Danes might listen to their Lutheran ministers; the Capuchins might encourage the Austrian squadrons, and pray to the Virgin for a blessing on the arms of the Holy Roman Empire." In a word, here were men whose religious views were anathema one to another, petitioning God to assist them, in jointly slaughtering men, in some instances of views identical with their own, all indifferent to the fact that a precisely similar scene was no doubt being enacted on the other side of the field. What prayer could have secured triumph for these arms but the prayer for the Mind of Christ, which would have brought them "in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

All these men desired an answer to their prayer. Yet it is doubtful if one of them would have sought it apart from the apocryphal Cromwellian apothegm, "Put your trust in God, and keep your powder dry." Could, however, a Christian conceivably seek an answer to prayer on any basis but a conformity to the Sermon on the Mount? Obedience to the Sermon on the Mount a distinguished bishop once described as an altruistic Utopia. Obedience to the Sermon on the Mount is, as a matter of hard, every-day scientific fact, the one practical basis for a stable society. As the result of obedience to its teaching, men will come into a common understanding of and subjection to divine principle, and not waste their time in making counter petitions to infinite intelligence with a view to affecting the divine purpose. The man who prays without ceasing is not the man who is most voluble in uttering petitions: he is the man who most completely lets this Mind be in him, "which was also in Christ Jesus." The prayers of such are answered, for, as Mrs. Eddy says on page 345 of Science and Health, "when the omnipotence of God is preached and His absoluteness is set forth, Christian sermons will heal the sick."

THRILLING RESCUES

Bad Fire in Chicago Tenement Building

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.— Thrilling rescues of women and children, unconscious from smoke fumes, marked a fourth alarm of fire in Wabash Avenue, early to-day. Many of the inmates of the three-storey building scrambled down fire escapes to the street in their night clothes. Policemen O'Halloran, Fitzgerald and McFadden saved a dozen women and children by fighting their way several times through flame-swept halls.

WOULD FIX AN EMBARGO

Enemies of Britain in U. S. Are Active in Washington

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Hearings on pending resolutions to restrict the export of arms and munitions to the belligerent nations of Europe began yesterday before the House foreign affairs committee. Delegations from New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Baltimore, representing German-American and Irish-American organizations, appeared before the committee. All urged immediate action on the resolution of Representative Bartholdt of Missouri, which would empower the President to prohibit the exportation of war supplies. They insisted that at present the United States was not observing strict neutrality because Great Britain was able to secure supplies in this country and was able to prevent Germany and Austria from drawing from the same source.

To-days sessions will conclude the hearings. The witnesses will include a delegation from St. Louis, headed by Father Joseph F. Lubeley and ex-Representative Metz of New York, and Lebeck of Nebraska.

TWO GUN BATTLES

Policeman and a Burglar Are Shot in Chicago

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.— A policeman and a burglar were killed and a hold-up man was fatally wounded early to-day in two revolver duels between two gangs of gunmen and the policemen who surprised the gunmen in the act of robbery. Policeman John Sausman and Dan Langan saw a negro going through a pedestrian's pockets, while a white man held a gun to the victim's head. As they yelled and dashed for the robbers, the negro straightened up and put his hand in his pocket. A moment later Sausman fell dead with a bullet through his brain. The negro had fired from his pocket. He escaped. The white highwayman fled with Langan pursuing. Each emptied his revolver at the other and reloaded. Suddenly the robber fell with bullets in his abdomen and lungs. His death is expected momentarily. He gave his name as James O'Neil. The second gun fight occurred in front of E. H. Labish's drug store in West North Avenue. Detective Sergeant Jansen caught two men red-handed attempting to force the door of Labish's store. Jansen fired in the air and ran towards the robbers. Both men turned and opened fire on Jansen. Jansen brought one of the robbers to the pavement with a bullet in his brain. Shortly before the robber died he was identified as George Hennessy.

No Trouble to Remove Superfluous Hair

(Toilet Tips)

It is an easy matter to rid the skin of objectionable hair or fuzz, if you proceed as follows: Mix a paste with some water and a little powdered delatone, apply to hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method of banishing hairy growths is painless and does not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain to get real delatone.

The Inaugural Meeting of the City Council

Will Be Held on Monday Next—Regular Meeting Will Follow

THE COMMITTEES

The battle has been fought and won, Mayor Buller has been reinstated, and three new aldermen added to the 1915 City Council. Nothing remains now but to hold the inaugural meeting and appoint the standing committees. There will be keen rivalry for the respective chairmanships of the latter. The Board of Works committee will need a new pilot, caused by the retirement of Ald. Duncan, and also the Property committee. These are two of the most important committees, the chairmen of which can rest assured that they will have plenty to do.

The inaugural meeting is slated for Monday next at eleven o'clock in the morning. After a few formalities have been dispensed with, the Council will adjourn to the committee room, where the standing committees will be selected. With that the Council will settle down to the work of conducting the affairs of this great and growing municipality.

The first regular meeting of the City Council will be held on Monday evening next.

A Parade Was Held

Following Mayor Buller's Election—Economic Government Promised

Following his re-election to the position of Chief Magistrate Mayor Buller, accompanied by a number of his colleagues, and headed by the Band, paraded up and down George Street, where impromptu speeches were made. The Mayor promised the crowd an economic policy of good government. He eulogized the workingmen and promised to exert his efforts on their behalf. The main part of the parade broke up at the Committee rooms.

THE CANADA LIFE CALENDAR

The most striking Canadian calendar that has made its appearance for 1915 so far is the one issued by the Canada Life Assurance Co. The attractive features of this hanger is entitled, "A Canadian Trader when the Canada Life was born," 1847. It depicts a winter scene in colours, and shows an old Canadian trapper in the snow-clad woods, dressed in fur and with moccasins and snow shoes. He carries a rifle in one hand and a game trap in the other and has his powder horn and dirk in his belt—a genuine specimen of the ol Canadian trapper. The picture is a good reproduction by Dudley Ward. The calendar contains pads for the whole year 1915 and the month of December, 1914, as well. Herbert C. Cox is President of the Canada Life and the local agent is W. R. Scudding, Bank of Commerce chambers.

Aftermath of the Campaign

How the Returns Were Received at the Committee Rooms—A 1916 Candidate for Mayor

Mayor Buller's majority suffered a reduction of four votes from that of last year. His 1914 majority was 560, and his 1915—556.

Mr. G. N. Gordon was not in the City when the glad tidings of his election to the Board of Education was announced. He had been called away to Toronto on business.

The Mayor heard the returns from his committee rooms on Simcoe street. Mr. J. S. Knapman was his campaign manager.

If Mayor Buller drops four votes every time he contests the position Peterborough will be assured of his services for a number of years to come.

Two ex-Mayors, in the person of Mr. W. G. Morrow and Mr. W. H. Bradburn, were in the Committee Room of the City Hall when the returns came in.

Polling sub-division Number 1 returned one lone majority for ex-Ald. Duncan. This division is located at W. G. Freeburn's, 168 Lock Street.

The North Monaghan elections occasioned as much, if not more, interest than the civic elections.

The new Council will have a quartette of brothers-in-law. They are Ald. A. A. McIntyre and Alc. A. Weir, and Ald. G. W. Green and Ald. G. Evans.

Two new faces will have to face the photographer this year. They are Aldermen G. Evans and J. Edgar. Ald. McIntyre has been there before.

Mayor Buller dropped into the City Hall this morning for a few minutes. He expressed satisfaction at the outcome.

Ald. Jonnston, Chairman of the Finance Committee, was another man who was on the job this morning. He was busy piloting a pen over a sheaf of checks. He stopped long enough to confirm the rumour that he would be a Mayoralty candidate for 1916.

The assistance rendered the Press last evening in compiling the election returns at the City Hall was excellent. This assistance came from City Clerk Armstrong and his capable office staff; also that of the City Treasurer's office. A Burroughs adding machine was also brought into play.

It was the same old questions that greeted officials around the polling booths yesterday:

"Well, who is going to be elected?" was the invariable query, and the invariable reply was "the man who gets the most votes."

This morning a citizen took occasion to remark that the temperance people of North Monaghan received a rude jolt when Rye was elected.

There will likely be a scramble for positions on the various Committees of the City Council. Ald. Green has been spoken of as Chairman of the Board of Works.

RUSSIA TO BUY LAND OWNED BY GERMANS

Number Not Readily Ascertainable and Estimates Vary From 4,000,000 to 8,000,000.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 5.— The members of the imperial council, while considering at a private meeting to-day the question of the restriction of German landholding in Russia, formulated a proposal that German property be appraised by the government and that German-Russian citizens be compelled to surrender their land, which will be paid for by the Russian government in bonds paying 4 per cent.

This measure, if approved by the government, will apply only to land acquired by German settlers since 1870.

The number of Russian citizens of this class is not readily ascertainable, since many of German descent and with German names pass as Letts and Esthonians in the Baltic provinces and as Poles in Poland. Therefore the estimates vary from 4,000,000 to 8,000,000.

The land owned by Germans fringes the entire Russian boundary and is said to be worth 1,000,000,000 roubles ($500,000,000.) Heretofore the chief obstacle to a purchase of the German lands was the financial burden imposed upon the Russian government and the difficulty of a satisfactory appraisal.

THE GERMAN MOVEMENT HAS BEEN STOPPED

Defeated Troops in Galicia Are Surrendering By Regiment, According to Reports in Petrograd

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Violent fighting is in progress along the eastern battlefront, leading at some points to desperate hand-to-hand encounters. The official Russian statement shows that after capturing Polimow, the Germans attempted to push on to the northeast, in the direction of Warsaw. Their advance is asserted by the Russians to have been repulsed with large losses. The Berlin official report says the German attacks are still being pushed east of the Rawka river.

A Petrograd cable says it is learned authoritatively that the fighting of Sunday on Bzura river front resulted in important success for the Russians.

The Austrians in Galicia are retreating in disorder, and whole regiments are surrendering.

The Muscovite steam-roller is crushing out the dying embers of the last Austrian advance through Galicia. The victorious troops of the Grand Duke Nicholas are following up the retreating Austrians down to the plains of Hungary, and as far east as the Austro-Roumanian frontier. Bukowina has been swept by the Russian left wing. Some of the Austrian corps co-operating with the Germans on the Vistula are being driven southward along the valley of the Nida.

The partiality shown by the Russian soldier for the bayonet is one of the features of the recent fighting on the Bzura. Again and again the Russians allowed the Germans to advance within a few yards of their trenches and then dashed upon the astonished enemy with the cold steel.

The Germans are still trying to force a passage of the Bzura river and are sacrificing men by the hundreds in the attempt. Night assaults rule, but up to the present have failed at every point. The most severe fighting is in the neighborhood of Kozoloff and Biskoupi.

The official statement of the Russian General Staff of the Caucasus says the Russians on Jan. 1 and 2 captured more than 5,000 Turks in a battle near Sari Kamyah, also mountain artillery and machine guns. One entire infantry regiment was captured. The battle was going on when the statement was issued.

The Turkish official report says the Turkish army in Caucausia is continuing its march toward Kars, and that a victory was won at Sari Kamysh. Two thousand Russian prisoners were taken, with cannon and machine guns, and two military trains destroyed on the road leading to Kars.

UNITED SERVICE IN THE WEEK OF PRAYER SERIES

The first gathering in connection with the week of prayer was held last night in Knox church. A large number was present. In fact this was the largest meeting ever accomplished for the first evening of the special week.

Canon Davidson occupied the chair and Rev. R. G. Peever preached a brief but effective sermon on the subject, "The Cross of Christ."

The service occupied but one hour, but it was felt by all that it was an hour of greatest profit.

To-night at Charlotte Street church, Rev. R. Pogue will conduct the service and Rev. G. R. Webb will be the speaker. The subject announced is, "Personal and National Repentance."

"IGNOBLE PEACE" IS SCORED BY ROOSEVELT

"Cult of Cowardice" Keeps the United States From Duty to Belgium

HOT SHOT FOR WILSON

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—In an article written for the current issue of the Independent, Col. Roosevelt says under the caption, "Utopia or Hell"; "To violate these conventions, to violate neutrality treaties, as Germany has done in the case of Belgium, is a dreadful thing. It represents the gravest kind of international wrongdoing, but it is really not quite so contemptible, it does not show so short-sighted and timed inefficiency, and above all, such selfish indifference to the cause of permanent and righteous peace, as has been shown by the United States (thanks to President Wilson and Secretary Bryan) in refusing to fulfill its solemn obligations by taking whatever action was necessary in order to clear our skirts from the guilt of tame acquiesence in a wrong which we had solemnly undertaken to oppose.

A Mischievous Farce.

"If I had for one moment supposed that signing those Hague conventions meant literally nothing whatever beyond the expression of a pious wish, which any power was at liberty to disregard with impunity, in accordance, with the dictation of self-interest, I would certainly not have permitted the United States to be a party to such a mischievous farce. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, however, take the view that when the United States assumes obligations in order to secure small and unoffending neutral nations against hideous wrong, its action is not predicated on any intention to make the guarantee effective.

"They take the view that when we are asked to redeem in the concrete promises we made in the abstract, our duty is to disregard our obligations and to preserve ignoble peace for ourselves by regarding with cold-blooded and timid indifference the most frightful ravages of war committed at the expense of a peaceful and unoffending country. This is the cult of cowardice. That President Wilson and Mr. Bryan profess it and put it in action would be of small consequence if only they themselves were concerned. The importance of their action is that it commits the United States."

Mr. Roosevelt points only to Germany as the wrongdoer, whose acts warranted an interference by the United States.

CAN'T FLEE FROM SIBERIA.

Russia's Prisoners of War Are Allowed Their Parole.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 4.—To relieve German and Austrian prisoners of war, a committee of missionaries, principally Americans, will start tomorrow from Pekin for the interior of Siberia, bearing medical supplies and clothing furnished by the American Red Cross and to plan an extension of their work of mercy.

The prisoners are not confined, but generally have been paroled under pledge not to leave the neighbourhood. Their only wants are food, clothing and medicine.

In explantion of the parole of the prisoners, it is said that with its absolute control of the Siberian Railway, which in winter affords the only possible egress from Siberia, the Russian Government feels there is little possibility of escaping.

Belgian Refugee Problem Serious

Offers For Private Homes Were Limited and Government's Resources Are Already Strained

LONDON, Jan. 4—One of the hardest problems facing the British public with the beginning of the New Year is that of caring for the Belgian refugees in England, who now number at least 160,000. Most of them are at present guests in private houses all over the country, and a small proportion are assembled in hotels or boarding houses.

Private Offers Limited.

It is obvious that private hosts will not care to make their hospitality a permanent matter. In fact, many of the offers of space in private homes has not assumed a very definite responsibility in the matter, although evidently it would be compelled to do so soon. The Government is handicapped, moreover, by the fact that its resources are already strained by the necessity of providing lodgings for war prisoners and interned aliens.

Difficulty Is Industrial.

A chief difficulty is industrial. The maintenance of 160,000 men, women, and children in idleness for months, or even years, is a prospect fraught with disastrous possibilities, but apparently there is no alternative. The English labour unions maintain with the greatest firmness that the English worker must have first claim in the English labour market, and that no possible good can come from finding room for a Belgian by throwing an Englishman out of employment. Even with the supervision of the labour exchanges to insure that the Belgian competes on a wage basis with the English labourer, it is evident that there is not work available for one in ten of the men and women who must be provided for.

No Data Compiled.

A difficulty right at the start of the problem is that there has been no compilation of data regarding the refugees in England. Even as to their number, there are only hazy "estimates." The Government has now started the work of registration, which, however, will probably take a long time to carry through, even partially. It is suggested that certain charitable agencies might be asked to assist in gathering this very necessary information as to the history, training and occupation of each refugee. As to employment, the only practical suggestion made thus far is that the Government should equip a number of factories for work in metal, wood and stone, where the Belgians might be employed in making preparations for the re-building of their homes. Here they might do a considerable part of the preliminary work for the restoration of Belgium, and as fast as the country is freed from the presence of the belligerents they could be repatriated, along with the shiploads of brick, metal work, and wod work which they had completed in the meantime.

HOW ENGLAND VIEWS THE WAR SITUATION

Hearty Appreciation of Canada's Contribution--War Has Not Made Panic Prices

Mr. J. Pitchford, city, has received a letter from a friend in England, from which the following extracts are taken:

There only remains the "War" to write about, and as I was penning this to you on the evening 16th December, news came by the evening papers of the cowardly raid by the "Germ Huns" on the east coast—slightly disturbing after so many years of peace along our shores—but it is a mere pinprick in comparison to the big sea struggles that have got to come.

My opinion of the present state of war affairs is thus. We (allies) are just about holding our own, and no marked progress will be made on land, until the spring, when "K. of K." sends his big newly formed army into the field. I believe the Russians can account successfully for all the opposition the Kaiser can send to the east, and ultimately between the two armies the Hohenzollern dynasty will be wiped out. It will be a tough job—very slow—very long but very sure.

We have not experienced any ill effects from the war in the shape of panic prices for food or clothing. The Government at the very start declared all prices for food, and shopkeepers were bound to sell. Any shopkeepers declining to sell at the price declared received a visit from the police with peremptory orders to put his shutters up. Common sense prevailed, and in less than a week after the declaration of war everything became normal and business of every description went on as usual, and has continued to do so, which I think speaks volumes for the good stolid sense of the nation at large. How is the war affecting you privately and publicly?

I need hardly mention that the whole-hearted patriotism of the whole of our colonies will go a long way to shatter the Kaiser's belief in his own and his country's invincibility. What a grand contribution both in men and material, Canada has given, and I hear on good military authority that the Canadian men are the smartest men on Salisbury Plain today.

You would not be surprised at the "De Wet" fiasco. Turkey will not make a very much better show, and when the "Butcher of Berlin" finds that each card he plays is "trumped" he will begin to wish he hadn't started the game.

Oh! how the public and our statesmen have been deceived by these Germans. Everybody knew of their presence amongst us, and a good few knew of the "Rat-Hole-Spy" business they were carrying on, but few, I think, ever thought we should be at one another's throats so quickly, but there, its no use dealing in self recriminations—we must face the music and I think we can do it and very soon be able to calf for our own tune. What say you? and what say your Canadian friends?

Cannot Sell Liquor to Soldiers

At Any Time During the Day

The various hotel men of Peterborough have received direct notice from Provincial Secretary Hanna, of the Provincial Government, to the effect that no soldier in Peterborough must under any condition be allowed in the bar during the day, except at 6 o'clock in the evening. In other words the bars will be closed to the soldiers until 6 p.m. daily.

Liquor stores, it is understood, cannot sell to the soldiers at all.

This is the law observed in Kingston, Toronto and other military centres, where soldiers are concentrated.

"MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH"

Among book plays "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which comes to "The Grand" Saturday, Jan. 9 seems to have the most superabundant vitality. From the first the dramatisation of Mrs. Rice's two popular stories, "Mrs. Wiggs" and "Lovey Mary," met with a degree of public favour more enthusiastic if anything than that awarded those "best selling novels" of low life in mean streets. In Mrs. Wiggs herself, Miss Hasy, Lovey Mary and Mr. Stubbins, the play presents four salient types, each one of which remains firmly fixed in the most pleasant recollections of the playgoer.

Strong as the roles, the play has been even more richly cast. Grace Leith Hodgkins has scored the greatest triumph of her life in the title role. It will in all probability be her crowning success, for the public seems disinclined to let her leave the cabbage patch, where she makes folks laugh so heartily.

A very close second for popularity is the Mis' Hasy of Helen Alexander, who specializes in old maid types, and in the forlorn and lugubrious spinster of the play has evolved something new and likeable in the psychology of the unmarried. Mis' Hasy marries Mr. Stubbins and then her troubles as well as her happiness begin. There are twenty other character parts in the play, and Cuby the "fit horse," is prominent in the cast, though a little broken in the wind.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" comes to this city from a triumphant tour on which it was hailed as the American genre play par excellence. Mrs. Flexner, the dramatist, has added some new comedy to the play, which has improved with travel, despite its original excellence.

The play will be presented here under the maangement of the United Play Company. Seats will go on sale Thursday morning.

Guards' Losses Are Terrible

LONDON, Jan. 4—The bravery of the Guards' Brigade during the fighting in Belgium is amply shown by the terrible losses they have sustained. Lieutenant Aubrey Fletcher, who has arrived home wounded, says:

"Our division, consisting of 15,000 men, was told to hold a tract of land some eight miles in extent at all costs until the arrival of reinforcements. We were faced by anything from 75,000 to 100,000 of some of the Kaiser's crack regiments. We held them for ten days, and although the Germans occasionally broke through by sheer weight of numbers, they were always driven back by our men, and when help came the line was intact. Of the 15,000 Guards engaged in this terrible task only 2,200 remained. My own battalion suffered severely. We had thirty officers at the beginning of hostilities, but at the end only two remained. Of 1,000 men, but 200 were not killed." The factor which told so severely against our men added the lieutenant, was the continual strain. For days and days the men went without rest, and once he himself was unable to obtain any rest for four days. "But I am going back," he said with determination.

MR. J. H. GARBUTT A GOOD MAN TO LOSE

The County Council and the Township of Smith will lose one of its most familiar faces in the person of Mr. J. H. Garbutt, who was defeated in Smith, yesterday, by Mr. McKee. Mr. Garbutt has a long municipal career and is exceptionally well versed in Township and County work. It is to be regretted that Smith, while getting so good a man as Mr. McKee, should have to lose Mr. Garbutt's services.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Throughout Ontario Are Quiet —The Hydro Field is Extended

FEW LARGE ISSUES

TORONTO, Jan. 5. — Municipal elections throughout Ontario yesterday were, on the whole, quietly conducted, no momentous issues being before the electors. In a few cases purely local issues loomed large, and extremely spirited contests were waged. The disruption in Ottawa of the McVeity administration was possibly the feature of the day in the city voting. Throughout the province the votes on enabling or monetary Hydro-electric bylaws were, with the exception of Newmarket, in favor of a wider distribution of Niagara power.

The referendum on giving the franchise to married women was submitted to the electors in some score of municipalities, and the proposal received splendid support, in many places being carried by large majorities.

The following mayors were elected in cities and towns in Ontario yesterday. The names of those chosen by acclamation have already been published:—Alliston, J. H. Mitchell; Amherstburg, Dr. Fred. RAINFALL WAS LIGHT IN 1914

The outstanding feature of the weather in the year 1914, was that the precipitation was below normal in eight of the twelve months. The total precipitation for the 365 days was 27.18 inches, this being 4 1-5 inches below the normal, 31.38. The average precipitation per month was 2.61 inches, or 0.35 of an inch short of the usual. In August the rainfall was heavy 2.54 inches above the average, while in July only one inch fell, this being nearly two inches less than the monthly mean. January, March, August and November were the four months in 1914 in which the precipitation exceeded the normal.

The average temperature for the whole year, 44.03 degrees, was 1.8 degrees above the normal. The coldest day was January 18th, 23 degrees below zero; July 11th was the warmest day, when 82.6 above was the maximum.

Ten of the months were warmer than the average, the mean temperatures both in May and October being 6.2 degrees above the normal, and February was a cold month; 15.53 degrees the mean, was 6.6 lower than normal.

Toronto's warmest year since records began in 1840, was 1913, when the mean temperature was 47.9 degrees. The summer of 1911, it will be remembered was exceedingly warm, and that the year was only two one-hundredths of a degree below 1913.

Probabilities Call For Rain

Ontario, including Peterborough, is in for a January thaw, judging by general conditions; also the latest report from the weather bureau. Probabilities call for rain some time between now and to-morrow. A Monaghan farmer is authority for the statement that a moderate thaw would improve the roads to some extent. The north and south roads are pretty well filled up. The east and west roads are in fairly good condition.

Big Jump In Wheat

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 5.—A sensational rise in spot wheat at Liverpool, and deplorable conditions in the European market were given as causes for the jump wheat took at the opening of the local market to-day. Wheat was up 2 to 2½ cents over yesterday's close at start. This probably means increase in flour prices in the United States and Canada.

RUSSIA MAKING FORWARD STRIDES

The progress of Russia has been tremendous in the last decade, says a writer in the Popular Science Monthly. The years since the Japanese war have seen the adoption of a constitutional regime, the rapid spread of industrialism, the greatest agrarian reforms since emancipation, and a remarkably intelligent study and handling of the problems of primary education, agriculture and intemperance.

Along with this has come a clear appreciation of the richness of her resources. "In the markets of the world there exists to-day a famine in meat, lumber and breadstuffs," say the Russian economists, and Russia has, or can develop, all three to an indefinite amount. Russia has a geographic basis for a great nation such as is possessed by no other people unless it be our own.

It is wanting, however, in one important respect it lacks an adequate coast line. Russia's sea coast is too small for so large a state and she is bound to demand more. Indeed, that is what she has been doing for centuries, her coastward movement has been in progress for at least four hundred years and we are witnesses to-day of another gigantic step in this direction. The Germans block the way, and ultimately, combined with them, the Swedes and Danes.

That Russia with her population of 175,000,000, increasing at the rate of nearly three millions a year, and with resources so vast and undeveloped that they can only be roughly estimated, will be kept permanently bottled up is not likely. Her coastward advance, however, will follow lines of least resistance and the conquest of an outlet by way of Constantinople to the world's trade is as inevitable as is its geographic reasonableness. Toward the Persian Gulf the way is also open and inviting. Indeed, everywhere in Asia she has the unique advantage of internal lines of development and therefore also of attack. Geographically the serious menace to British world supremacy does not lie in Germany, but in Russia.

TORONTO, January 5.—Acording to letter advices received here to-day it is probable that all the cavalry and artillery of the first Canadian contingent have left Salisbury Plains and are now finishing their training in the south of France, or possibly they are at the firing line. These letters indicate that owing to the deep mud at Salisbury Plains and its effects on the horses unaccustomed to living out of doors in such long spells of wet and cold weather it was found necessary to move to France. It was stated that advance parties had already left for the transports at the time of writing. If this is true the Royal Canadian Dragoons, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery with various batteries of field artillery, the Strathcona Horse and ammunition columns, are already in France.

Austria Forces Slavs To Fight

Leading Citizens Imprisoned, Young Men Forced to Enlist and Families of Soldiers Threatened

LONDON, Jan. 5.—George Macaulay Trevelyn, the noted writer, in a despatch from Rome to the Daily News, thus describes the Austrian Magyar tyranny in the Slav provinces of the dual monarchy.

From the beginning of the war, or rather from the time of the murder of the archduke, many thousands of the leading citizens, peasants and priests of the Croat, Slovene and Serb races have been imprisoned in one prison alone there are 700 of these politicals. The parents, wives and children of the prisoners are left to starve, and if any one is seen showing them a kindness he is likely enough to find himself in prison next day.

Many Priests Shot.

"In Bosnia many Orthodox priests have been shot, and among the Slovenes, the most clerical of the Slav races, many Roman Catholic priests have been imprisoned.

"It is a reign of terror. There was never anything worse in the annals of Russia or Austria, either past or present, for not only are the leading citizens imprisoned, but the young men are all seized as conscripts and sent to die for a cause they detest.

"By a refinement of cruelty, a proclamation has been issued that if any soldier deserts, his family will suffer for it. In these circumstances there are few deserters, and, of course, an insurrection is utterly impossible when all the young men are in the army and all the possible leaders in prison.

System of War Slavery.

"This horrible modern system of war slavery, by which a whole population is forced to fight and die for what it hates, exists not only in the south Slav provinces, but in Roumania and in the Czech and Slovak districts of the north. Truly, in time of war, the Austro-Hungarian monarchy is an accursed thing. If there has been any doubt about the Croatian problem in the past there will be none about it in the future.

"It has now become a question between liberty and slavery on just the same old terms as the question of Italy sixty years ago, or Belgium and Trentino to-day."

ARE TRYING TO RECAPTURE SAINT MIHIEL

The Only Point Where the Germans Have Been Unable to Cross the Meuse is Now Under Attack by French

WEATHER VERY BAD

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The French forces in the east are endeavouring to retake the position at St. Mihiel to-day, the only point where the Germans have been able to cross the Meuse. Fighting in this vicinity and in Upper Alsace occupied the attention of experts to-day. The renewal of the rains which are now deluging the entire battle line in the north and centre has nipped in the bud the attempt of the Germans to resume the offensive. The trenches are miniature rivers. The entire country in the front and rear of them is an almost impassible bog. It is almost impossible for the transport to move and the task of keeping men supplied with ammunition and food is almost impossible.

Hundreds of men are suffering from rheumatism and pneumonia despite the best efforts of the doctors. Half a dozen trains are reported as arriving at Dunkirk loaded with sick men. Not a single wounded soldier was among them. Many of the men are reported dying from lung disease. Few of them will be able to return to the front for many weeks.

The British seem to be suffering more from this cause than the French. The majority of the patients are British soldiers. It is reported that few French troops have suffered from rheumatism, but that the British and Belgians seem unusually subject.

Reports from the Alsace fighting show that the French advance is continuing very slowly. "We gain literally a yard at a time," was a sentence included in the latest report from that section.

THEY MUST NOT SHAVE UPPER LIP

Soldiers in 21st Battalion to Grow Moustachess

"No member of the 21st Battalion, after this date, will be allowed to shave his upper lip." This is the fiat that has gone forth to te officers and soldiers of the 1st Battalion, in the battalion orders issued to-day.

The number of clean-shaved men has been increasing in the battalion for some time. The man with the fierce, long, dropping upper lip adornment, a la Cossack, or Simon Legree, and the fellow with the scanty, widely sown moustache of the baseball variety—nine a side, have been removing the growth, and appearing on parade with a face as destitute of hirsute decoration as a billiard ball This is all over. Members of the 21st Battalion must not shave the upper lip.

The Royal Military College has forbidden Cadets to shave the upper lip, and all the military units in the west have done the same thing. It used to be in the Imperial army that soldiers were paid a premium for growing a profuse crop of hair on the upper lip. The ancients believed that a bald face was a disgrace, and among the people of Asia to-day, the shaven face signifies a lack of intelligence and experience.

It is said that the shaving of the upper lip seriously affects eyesight, but the intention of Lt.-Col. Hughes in issuing the order against shaving the upper lip, is to establish uniformity of facial decoration and appearance among his men.

FACT.

You won't be able to dodge strife,
You won't succeed, my son,
When you have a good aim in life
And tote an empty gun.

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question and "How to Prevent Colds" is asked a thousand times every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but due to a disordered condition of the blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the body better able to withstand the varying elements.

This is the underlying reason why the medicinal fats in Scott's Emulsion quickly overcome colds and build strength to prevent more serious sickness. It contains nature's medicinal fats, so skillfully prepared that the blood profits from every drop, and it is totally free from harmful drugs.

TURKISH ARMY IN DISGRACEFUL RETREAT BEFORE THE RUSSIANS

Entire Campaign in the Caucasus Has Failed and the Troops Are Abandoning Equipment, Guns and Ammunition as They Flee From the Pursuing Cossacks.

THE RUSSIANS ADVANCING INTO HUNGARY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 6.—The positive confirmation that the entire Turkish campaign in Caucasus has failed, was made to-day in an official report received from Sarikamysh. The entire Turkish army is in disgraceful retreat, the trops abandoning equipment, guns, and ammunition, and in a number of instances even their regimental colours in their flight. All of the reports emphasize the extent of the Russian victory. The Cossacks are harassing the defeated enemy, pursuing them on both flanks and killing and wounding many of the stragglers.

The Russian advance into Hungary is also stated to continue practically unopposed. Only slow progress is being made because of the desire of the Russian commanding general to have plenty of fully equipped men well supplied with everything needed, on hand before the march toward Budapest is begun, and owing to the fact that the Carpathian passes are blocked with snow the task of bringing up supplies is a difficult one.

In Poland and in western Galicia, it is stated that there is practically no change in the situation.

CANADIANS MAY SOON BE MOVED TO FRANCE

NORTHERN FRANCE, Jan. 5. — A big military camp is being prepared in the North of France, and a rumour is in circulation that the troops of the first Canadian contingent are to be transferred there from Salisbury Plain.

The Princess Patricia's Regiment has not yet been in action. The men are in the reserve trenches close to the firing line. They were advanced nearer to-day, and may be in battle at any hour. They are billeted in a village.

R. F. Bobby, of Winnipeg, has been wounded. His horse was shot under him. He is a former member of Strathcona's Horse, but joined the British artillery since the war began. He is related to the Rev. A. J. Broughall, of Toronto.

Edward Jesner, a chauffeur in the Army Service Corps, formerly of Galt and Toronto, is seriously ill with pneumonia. Both these men are in hospitals at Boulogne.

Numerous Canadians are serving in the British army in France. Major Dr. Percy Goldsmith, of Toronto, has been at the front three times. He is forwarding to Canada a complete collection of war trophies.

All the Canadian nurses and doctors are well.

CANADIAN FACES CHARGE.

Jonathan McCarthy, 1st F.A., Alleged to Have Harmed Fiance's Father.

London, Jan. 5.— Jonathan McCarthy, who is attached to the First Field Ambulance Corps of the Canadian contingent, was remanded at Marylebone to-day charged with causing grievous bodily harm to William Davis, father of his fiance.

Percy H. Illingworth—Chief Liberal Whip in the British Parliament, who was created a Privy Councillor on January 1st, and died on January 2nd of typhoid fever.

HIS THIRD TERM IN REEVESHIP

Michael Walsh was returned for a third term as Reeve of Douro by a majority of 139 over his opponent, Ambrose Coughlin. The results in the polling sub-divisions were as follows:

P.S.D. . .	Walsh.	Coughlin
North	53	45
West	54	18
East	92	16
Town Hall	52	33
Totals	251	112

Majority for Walsh, 139.

The councillors who were returned by acclamation are: Roger Moloney, George Hamilton, Michael Coughlin, and M. B. Kennedy.

RUSSIANS ARE MAKING A RAID INTO HUNGARY

200,000 Men Marching Towards Budapest and Eight Townships Have Been Swept by the Czar's Troops

NO CHANGE IN POLAND

LONDON, Jan. 5 — The Russian general staff maintains official silence in regard to the new invasion of Hungary by the Russian armies, but from many points there comes information that the movement is well under way. A despatch from Petrograd says that eight townships on the Hungarian plains have already been occupied, and that 200,000 men are marching towards Budapest.

Of prime political, as well as of military significance is the complete success of the Russians in Western Galicia, where they have swept the Austro-Hungarian troops entirely out of Bukowina, have occupied the territory along the Roumanian border, and are now pressing through Borgo Pass in the Carpathians to invade Hungary from the east, and likewise to give a display of impressive strength in Transylvania, Austro-Hungarian territory now, but once Roumanian, and still having 1,500,000 Roumanians in a total population of about 2,500,000.

In Petrograd the relations between the Roumanians in Transylvania and the Russian invaders will be watched with the utmost interest, as indicative to a certain extent of the attitude of Roumania towards entering the war.

No Change in Poland.

In Poland the Germans are still keeping up a very strong pressure on the Russian lines along the Bzura, and in particular at Rawa and at Bonjimow, where the fighting for the rival trenches, which are only a few yards apart, continues unabated. The importance of the operations in this quarter is in nowise underestimated in Russia, but for the moment the conquest of Boukowina and the invasion of Hungary hold the public eye.

The Germans still hold positions of great strength in the region of Borjinow, north-east of Bolimow, which is on the left bank of the Rawka, and are resisting successfully thus far the attempts of the Russians to dislodge them. They were driven from one Russian trench which they had captured, but yielded no more ground. Along the Pilica the Germans have also had some success, but Russian reinforcements are being sent against some troops that Marshal von Hindenburg got across the river.

WHY PAT'S. CHANGED RIFLES.

All British Army Men Accustomed to Lee-Enfield.

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—Why the Princess Patricia Regiment discarded the Ross rifle before going to the front is explained in a letter from one of the non-commissioned officers which has been received at Ottawa. It bears out the previous explanation that the reason underlying the change is that the regiment is composed almost exclusively of former British soldiers accustomed to the Lee-Enfield. The complaints were frequent, and just before leaving for France the Ross rifle was replaced. The brigade with which the Princess Pats are merged is considered one of the finest at the front.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS.

Mrs. Richard Ferguson, Smithers, B.C., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Italy Wants To Enter The War

Lieut. Garibaldi's Death Has Revived Public Sentiment and Army is Ready

ROME, Jan. 5.—The death on the French battlefield of Lieut. Bruno Garibaldi has caused a revival of public sentiment throughout Italy in favour of war, this feeling being augmented by the belief that the Italian military preparations have now been perfected.

About 1,000,000 men will be under arms within the present month and another million men are being formed into a reserve ready to be called out at a moment's notice.

All the Italian regiments of artillery have been provided with new cannon which are considered by Italian military experts to be superior to the guns of Austria-Hungary and Germany.

Special secret committees are being formed for the enlistment of volunteers. It is said to be the intention to form a body to be commanded by Captain Ricotti Garibaldi, who will have his sons as lieutenants.

HUGE RUSSIAN ARMY REPORTED AT WARSAW

London, Jan. 5.—Five million Russian soldiers have marched through Warsaw to the west and south, says a despatch from Copenhagen, which states that the information comes directly from the Polish capital. Warsaw has been surrounded by an immense field of fortifications, and it is believed that the Germans cannot escape being rolled back even before they reach the first defences.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

During those weeks of June and the first half of July the mountains seemed to breathe freer, because of the truce pledged by the two leaders, and the men of both clans walked in seeming security, through the enemy's territory. None the less, secret and silent investigations were going forward, and when the answers to them came the seeming of peace would burst like a pricked bubble. The grievance that had been rankling in McBriar breasts since the night of the dance had lost none of its soreness. Who killed Nash McKay? Bad Anse Havey knew that the plighted assurances of his enemy would not long outlast the answering of that question and he was not resting idle.

Juanita Holland had bought a small piece of ground from the Widow Everson, near her own house, and upon it a cabin was being reared.

* * * * * * * * *

One afternoon, while old Milt McBriar was sitting on the porch of his house, a horseman rode up and "lighted." The horseman was not a pleasant person of visage or expression, but he knew his mission, and was sure of his welcome.

"Evenin' Luke," welcomed the McBriar chief.

As the visitor sank into a chair with a nod he laconically announced:

"I've found out who kilt Nash McKay."

Old Milt never showed surprise. It was his pride that his features had banished all register of emotion. Now he merely leaned over and knocked the ash from his pipe against the railing. "Wall," he commanded curtly, "let's hev yore tale."

"Them Haveys picked out a man thet hain't been mixed up in no feud fightin' heretofore," pursued the other with unruffled calmness. "He's a feller thet nobody wouldn't hardly suspect; him bein' peaceable an' mostly sober, but he shoots his squirrels through the head every time he throws up his rifle-gun. Thet waf sher kind of man they wanted."

Milt McBriar shifted his position a little. He seemed bored.

"Who war this feller?"

The bearer of tidings was reserving his climax and refused to be hurried.

"I reckon ye'll be right-smart astonished when I names his name, but thar hain't no chanst of bein' mistook. I've done run ther thing down."

"I hain't nuver astonished," retorted McBriar. "Who war he?"

Very cautiously the second man looked around and then bent over and whispered a name. If Milt McBriar did not show surprise at its mention it was because he made a conscious effort. At last he laughed unpleasantly and commented, "Thet war like Anse Havey. He's kind of fond of doin' things thet ye wouldn't hardly 'low he would do." After a short pause the chief added, "Wall, I reckon I don't need ter tell yer what ter do now?"

"I reckon I knows," confessed Luke with a somewhat surly expression. "Why don't ye foller Anse's lead an' use a new man oncet in a while?"

"Oh, I reckon ye'll do, Luke, an' "Oh, I reckon ye'll do, Luke, an' ther mountings fer a spell."

The surliness deepened. "H—l!" muttered the henchman. But Milt McBriar was paying no attention. His face was darkening. "I wish I could afford ter git ther real man," he exclaimed abruptly. "I wish I durst hev Anse Havey kilt."

"Wall—" this time it was the underling who spoke casually—"I reckon I mout as well die fer a sheep as a lamb. Shell I kill Anse Havey fer ye?"

The chieftain looked at him during a long pause, then slowly shook his head.

"No, Luke," he said quietly, "I hain't quite ready ter die myself yit. I reckon if I hed ye ter kill Bad Anse thet's 'bout what'd happen. Jest git ther lamb this trip an' let ther old ram live a spell."

So one unspeakably sultry morning a few days after that informal session, Good Anse Talbott appeared at the door of the Widow Everson's house. As Juanita Holland appeared in the door to greet him he came to the point without persiflage.

"Fletch McNash hes done been kilt," he said. "'Bout twilight last night es he war a-comin' in from thet barn somebody shot one shoot from ther la'rel. I reckon hit'd be right-smart comfort ter his woman an' little Dawn ef ye could ride over thar an' help 'tend ter ther buryin'. Kin ye start now?"

CHAPTER XIII.

Juanita would go if it were necessary to run a gauntlet of all the combined forces of the Haveys and McBriars. Her heart ached for the widow and the boys, but for Dawn the ache was as deeply poignant as it could have been for a little sister of her own. The child had brought to her her one truly personal association in the mountains. Their intimacy had been to Juanita a solace and a substitute for all things she had put behind, things that left emptiness and ache in her heart. To-day her little protege was a child. To-morrow she would be a woman, and the day after—the girl shuddered as she reflected on the Calloway woman who had a few years ago been the "purtiest gal on Meetin' House Fork." Dawn and girls like her were the stake for which she had come here to fight. It was such lives she meant to redeem. Now across the lot of this joyous little creature had fallen the shadow of the seemingly inevitable—of the grim, sullen home-breaking thing that brooded here, feeding on human life. So it was with set face and hot indignation of heart that she mounted for the journey.

Yet in the rancour of her unreasoning anger it was not upon the actual assassin that her censure chiefly burned. She chose rather to go back of all that and think of Anse Havey as the human incarnation; the head and front of the whole wretched, blood-drenched regime. He seemed even more responsible than Milt McBriar, because his lawless fame had gone more picturesquely abroad.

As they rode the hills were full of midsummer langour. The trees were unstirring in the hushed heat. Only the minnows in the little pools and the geese that waddled down to the cool waters seemed free of torpidness and lethargy. The locusts and grasshoppers sang from dry roadside stalks and flew rattling away from the ironweeds and thistles as they passed.

The horses kicked up clouds of choking dust and along the edges of the shrunken streams little clusters of white and pale-yellow butterflies fluttered wearily.

The houses, where a roof broke through the timber, were sullen, too, and closed of door, despite the heat, but Juanita no longer thought of them as hovels where men and women closely akin to the dumb beasts lived as in dens. Love and hate and hope and despair, she had learned, burn as fiercely there as elsewhere, and though more nakedly, perhaps more honestly. The poverty which it had, at first, seemed must strangle to death everything but animal instinct, was robbed of its abjectness. Its self-denial was a compromise only with necessity, never with self-respect. The same Spartan spirit had animated Kenton and Boone when they discarded every non-essential from their pioneer packs. She herself was in effect as poor as they, because her possessions lay beyond ramparts of granite and sandstone. So much had the girl Juanita grown under the teachings of those she had come to teach.

At last they reached the McNash cabin and found gathered about it a score of figures with sullen and scowling faces. As she crossed the yard the crowd opened for her and gazed after her respectfully. Even the missionary did not cross the threshold with her, but let her enter alone on her errand of comforting the "women folks" who were in there with their dead. From the barn came the screech of saw and rat-tat of hammer, where those whose knack ran to carpentery were fashioning the box which was to serve in lieu of a casket.

There was no fire now and the cabin was very dark. In a deeply shadowed corner lay Fletch McNash, made visible by the white sheet that covered him. That sheet had been borrowed from a neighbour who "made it a p'int ter hev things handy fer buryin's." It had served the same purpose before and would again.

Juanita had come in silently, and for a moment thought that no one else was there, and that she was alone with death. The younger children had been sent away and the neighbours remained outside with rough sense of consideration. Among them was no excitement; they smoked stolcally and talked of indifferent topics. Death was a neighbour near whom they had always lived, and this case was like many others.

Then as Juanita stood just inside the lintel, she heard a low moan and crossed the room.

There in a squat chair near the dead hearth sat Mrs. McNash, with her back turned to the room. She was leaning forward and gazing ahead with unseeing eyes. Dawn was kneeling at her side with both arms about her mother's drooping shoulders. It was from Dawn, whose tear-stained face was wan and white, that the groan had come. The elder woman had uttered no sound. For hours she had been sitting there in just that attitude, tearless and mute, with a face that was as drawn and taut as though parchment instead of skin was stretched across the bones of her skull. Sometimes a spasm of shaking ran through her body like a chill, but except for that she neither moved nor spoke. It was the still grief of the mountain woman which finds no outlet and instills into her offspring a wormwood and thirst for vengeance with their suckling.

Juanita bent and impulsively kissed the withered face, but the woman only stirred a little like a half-awakened sleeper and looked stolidly up. After a while she spoke in the lifeless, far-away tone of utter lethargy. "Ef ye'd like ter see him, jest lift up ther sheet. . . . He's a-layin' thar." Then once more she sank back into the coma of her staring at the hearth with its dead ashes. But Dawn had not looked tragedy in the face so long that it had made her the stoic. She was wild only as the songbird is wild and not as the hunted animal. She rose and stood shaken with deep sobs, and putting both hands out before her, came gropingly and blind with tears into the outstretched arms of Juanita Holland.

Then the door opened, letting in two men, and in them Juanita recognized Jeb McNash and Bad Anse Havey.

At their coming Dawn looked up, and drawing away from the embrace of the older girl, retreated silently to a corner as though ashamed of having been discovered in tears. For a few moments there was silence in the room, complete except for the rap of Jeb's pipe when he knocked out its ashes against the chimney.

Bad Anse stood with folded arms in the dim light and gave no sign that he had recognized the presence of the foreign woman.

The boy jerked his head toward the hearth and said in a strained, hard voice, "Set ye a cheer, Anse," and after that no one spoke. Jeb's thin, but muscular chest rose and fell to the swell of heavy breathing, and his face was wrapped black in a scowl that made his eyes smoulder and his lips snarl. Juanita had dropped back to one of the beds, where she sat with Dawn's face buried in her lap. She studied the faces which were all shadow faces in the dimness, but which grew in distinctness when her eyes became accustomed to the dark, standing out more clearly just as features painted on an old, discoloured canvas came out under an intent gaze.

The Joy of Good Health Is Now Experienced

Nervousness, Dizzy Spells and Sleeplessness Are Now a Thing of the Past.

This is a cheerful letter from Mrs. Peacock, and it should bring joy to the heart of many a reader of this paper. Dizzy spells and sleeplessness are symptoms of exhausted nerves, and are the bugbear of many women, who do not know just what treatment to use.

MRS. PEACOCK.

You can read Mrs. Peacock's letter and take courage, for she has proven that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a complete cure for these troubles. So pleased was she with the results obtained that she wants other women to know about this food cure.

Mrs. Thomas Peacock, 23 Hiawatha street, St. Thomas, Ont., and whose husband is conductor on the Wabash Railway, states:—"I was quite run down in health, was very nervous, did not sleep well, and had frequent dizzy spells. Believing this to be the result of an exhausted nervous system I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that this medicine did me a world of good. It entirely freed me of the symptoms stated above, built up my health generally, so that to-day I feel that I am quite well again."

In a more recent letter Mrs. Peacock writes:—"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good, and I would be pleased to tell everybody so."

In nearly every issue of this paper you will find letters about Dr. Chase's medicines. If this one does not describe your case watch for others or write to us. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

CHILD OF EIGHT WEAK AND AILING

Little Collins' Girl Also Had Stubborn Chronic Cough—Father Tells How She Was Restored to Health by Vinol.

Lakeport, N.H. "Our little girl, 8 years of age, was in a debilitated, run-down condition, and had a stubborn, chronic cough. While she did not have to stay out of school, on account of her condition, she was weak and ailing all the time and far from well.

"We treated her cough, but nothing seemed to help her until we tried Vinol after which we noticed an immediat improvement. Her appetite increas and now she is strong and well and w can recommend Vinol to other parents who have delicate, ailing children."—GEO. A. COLLINS, Lakeport, N. H.

What Vinol did for this little girl it will do for other weak and ailing children, because they need the tissue-building, strengthening cod liver elements and the tonic iron that Vinol contains. It is delicious to the taste.

That's why Vinol builds them up so quickly, and we ask parents of delicate children in this vicinity to try Vinol with the understanding that we will return their money if it fails to give satisfactory results.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance

Gray hair, however, handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay grey! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

A Draft—You Catch Cold—Then Follows
Coughs, Cold Stiff Neck Neuralgia

Especially in the piercing pain of neuralgia or the dull throb of headache is Sloan's Liniment wonderfully relieving. Laid lightly on the part where the pain is felt, it gives at once a feeling of comfort and ease that is most welcome to the overwrought sufferer.

Hear What Others Say:

"There are no Liniments that equal Sloan's. My husband has neuralgia very often, he rubs Sloan's on his face and that is the last of it."—Mrs. V. J. Brown, Route 1, Box 181, Hollis, Texas.

"I have used Sloan's Liniment for family use for years and would not be without it. We have raised a family of ten children and have used it for croup and all lung trouble; also, as an antiseptic for wounds, of which children have a great many, it can't be beat. My wife sprained her ankle last summer and it was in bad shape. Sloan's Liniment applied enabled her to be as good as ever in a week. I have used it several times for sprains and rheumatism."—John Nasmith, R. R. No. 3, Keokuk, Iowa.

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HAGERSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 26th, 1913.

"I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case".

Mrs. W. N. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

TO REPLY THIS WEEK.

U. S. Protest To Britain Will Be Amicably Disposed Of.

LONDON, Jan. 5. — The British Government's reply to the American note concerning contraband probably will be sent before the end of the week. An outline of the reply has been submitted to France, which is greatly interested because of the activity of French ships in searching Mediterranean cargoes.

Probably there will be a statement issued shortly, showing that Italy and England and the other allies have arrived at an understanding concerning contraband satisfactory to all the countries affected.

It can be authoritatively stated that only five cargoes destined for Italy have been stopped at Gibraltar since Nov. 15. Two of these were released within three days, and the others as soon as the alleged contraband in their cargoes could be removed. Since Dec. 4 no cargoes destined for Italy have been intercepted by the allies.

Recruiting Brisk In Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—A meeting of the Militia Council was held at St. Luke's Hospital yesterday, where Major-Gen. Sam Hughes is receiving treatment for his knee, which he injured ten days ago. He worked at his correspondence also with the aid of several stenographers.

Recruiting has become very active in Ottawa with the beginning of the new year. Many are volunteering for both the infantry and mounted regiments and the great majority are men who were born in this district.

Mexico City In a Bad State.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, transmitted to the State Department yesterday a copy of a mailed report from Charge Hohler of the British legation in Mexico City saying conditions there a week ago were deplorable.

TO TERRIFY BRITISH.

Death Sentence on Lonsdale Was Blow at Recruiting.

LONDON, Jan. 5. — The Morning Post correspondent at Berne wires:

"I learn that the death sentence of William Lonsdale, the British prisoner of war condemned at Doberitz, will not be carried out and that it was passed with the object of terrifying prisoners of war who, according to the Germans, are often not very amenable. According to my information this is because they are deliberately underfed. This ill-treatment and death sentence on Lonsdale are all parts of a plan to deter the British from entering the army."

Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent transmits a despatch received there from Vienna which says that a newspaper editor, Joseph Kotel of Prossnits, Moravia, was condemned to death by court-martial for a seditious speech, and was executed two hours after sentence was passed upon him.

HUNGRY AND FILTHY.

German Soldiers Seem Glad When Allies Capture Them.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The Daily News correspondent telegraphs from northern France:

"Again violent storms burst over the dreary, desolate area of the Yser yesterday. On both sides the fighting was a half-hearted amphibian warfare with water-logged guns, water-logged transports, and spirits drowned in the trenches.

"Sixty German prisoners brought in Sunday night were in a desperate state of filth and utterly worn out. I never saw such despondent men in my life. They swallowed the hot soup served them with the greed of starved wolves. They said they had been living in mudholes hardly fit for swine for weeks, frozen and soaked, turn-and-turn about."

Coal Barons Plan Fight.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 5.—That eastern Ohio coal operators at an adjourned meeting to-day will decide to formally break off all negotiations with the United Mine Workers' Union; will plan to evict striking miners because they have paid no rent since the strike was called the first of April last and will decide to make overtures to the miners as individuals to work "open shop" under the scale rejected by the miners' organization, was the belief expressed last night by those in touch with the situation.

Rev. Dr. Maggs Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The death occurred Sunday evening of Rev. Dr. Maggs, superintendent minister of the Wesleyan circuit. Dr. Maggs, who was well-known in Canadian Methodist circles, occupied the pulpit in the morning and was on the point of leaving the house for the evening service when he had a seizure and died almost immediately.

Mania For Skating.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The greatest sale of skates in the history of New York is recorded. Because of the four or five days splendid skating on Central and Van Cortlandt Park Lakes and elsewhere, all the big department stores are practically sold out of skates. One large Broadway department store alone sold 2,000 pairs in one day.

Canadian In Police Court.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Jonathan McCarthy, who is attached to the First Field Ambulance Corps of the Canadian contingent, was remanded at Marylebone yesterday charged with causing grievous bodily harm to William Davis, father of his fiance.

Workman Caught In Shafting.

CORNWALL, Ont., Jan. 5.—Chas. Potasso, an Italian, 29, who was a machine helper in the Toronto Paper Co.'s mills here, met a painful death in the basement of the mill yesterday morning. It is supposed he was in the act of oiling the shafting when his clothing caught, and he was twisted around the shaft. His right leg was broken above the knee and his left above the ankle, both being mangled. His left arm was also broken, and there were wounds in his head. He was dead when found.

Two Kincardine Citizens Dead.

KINCARDINE, Ont., Jan. 5.—Mrs. Thompson, relict of the late Robert Thompson, and mother of R. S. Thompson of this town, died yesterday, after an illness of two years.

Mrs. Baird, relict of the late Robt. Baird, for many years the leading business man and for a number of years postmaster of Kincardine, died yesterday after an illness extending over many years.

German Lawyer On Bail.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. — Maurice Deiches, a New York lawyer, who was arrested in Philadelphia Saturday night, was arraigned here yesterday on a charge of conspiring to defraud the Government in connection with the issuance of fraudulent passports, to enable German reservists to return to Germany. He was released in $5,000 bail for a hearing on Jan. 11.

EVERYBODY'S SECRET:

Officers at Salisbury Found Leave Rules Hard To Obey.

SALISBURY PLAIN, Jan. 5. — A general order was issued which stated that no general Christmas leave at all would be granted the men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. The next line went on to say that commanding officers were empowered to grant it to the extent of 20 per cent. of the men under their command. Seven days could be allowed for men wishing to proceed to Ireland, six for those going to Scotland and so on in descending proportion, according to the distance which the recipients of such leave proposed to travel. Finally there was an injunction that this was to be kept "secret."

There are officers who have learned the drill book from cover to cover and who know "everything else" about tactics and strategy, and yet they found themselves up a tough proposition when they were required to grant leave to one-fifth of their men and to keep the fact secret from the rest!

FIVE MINUTE CURE IF STOMACH IS BAD

"Pape's Diapepsin" is quickest, surest indigestion cure known.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomach. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home — keep it handy — get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diepepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

BRITAIN APPROVES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 5.—(Via London.) — The Netherlands Oversea Trust Co., which was organized for the purpose of taking from the Government the responsibility for consigned chipments will have a meeting to-day and at its conclusion an announcement concerning the business policy of the company will be made. The company purposes to handle all imports to Holland. It is understood it is persona grata with the British Government and that it was organized with the object of putting imports on a firm commercial basis.

Karlsruhe Seen Off Venezuela.

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao, Dutch West India Islands, Jan. 5.—A report is current here to-day that the American steamer Maracaibo of the Red D Line, saw the German cruiser Karlsruhe, one of the few German warships still at large in the Atlantic, the night of Jan. 1, between this island and the Venezuelan port of Laguaira. The Macaraibo left New York Dec. 23. Her schedule takes her to various ports on the Venezuelan coast.

Capt. De Crespigny In Hospital.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 5.—Cable advices received yesterday state that Capt. Claude de Crespigny, son-in-law of J. A. McSloy, St. Catharines, had both feet frozen in the severe weather experienced while on active service in France. Capt. De Crespigny, who is now in hospital, will not have to suffer amputation of his feet as was at first feared.

LONDON, Jan. 5—According to an Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., French aviators dropped several bombs in the vicinity of Brussels Saturday, partly destroying a Zeppelin shed under construction and killing several German soldiers.

Germans Operate Railways.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 5. — (Via The Hague.)—The Germans have placed the entire Belgian railroad system in operation and are employing about 8,000 men, of whom 1,100 are Bavarians. Many of these men have just been brought to Belgium.

More Wheat For Belgians.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. — Six hundred thousand bushels of cash wheat were bought here yesterday for the Belgian relief.

TOWN IS BOMBARDED.

Dar-Es-Salaam In German East Africa Shelled by British.

NAIROBI, British East Africa, Jan. 5.—(Via London.)—The British battleship Goliath and light cruiser Fox have carried out successful operations against Dar-Es-Salaam, capital of German East Africa. The warships bombarded the town and effected considerable damage. All the German vessels in the harbor were disabled. Fourteen Europeans and twenty natives were taken prisoners.

The British loss was one killed and 12 wounded.

Dar-Es-Salaam, the best built town on the coast of German East Africa, is a military station with an excellent harbor, situated 40 miles south of Zanzibar. It is the terminus of an important caravan route, the residence of a governor and has large commercial interests. The white population in 1909 was estimated at 100, the total population more than 20,000.

Legal Lore.

His teacher was having a hard time explaining the geography lesson.

"Tommy, you can learn this if you make up your mind. It's not one bit smart to appear dull. I know that you are just as bright as any boy in the class. Remember, Tommy, where there's a will there's"— "Aw," broke in Tommy, "I know all dat, I do! Me fadder's a lawyer, an' I've heard him say it lots o' times."

"You should not have interrupted me, but I am glad that your father has taught you the old adage. Can you repeat it?"

"Sure. Me fadder says dat where dere's a will dere's always a bunch of poor relatives."

Law Lord In a Cell.

Lord Russell once gave a lecture on his imprisonment in Holloway jail. The thing that impressed him most strangely during the early period of his confinement was being without his pipe and watch. He was perpetually feeling in his pocket to see the time or for matches or tobacco. He soon got over the want of smoking and after six weeks obtained leave to wear his watch, the absence of which worried him more than having no tobacco pouch. When he went into prison the governor asked his religion, and he replied, "Agnostic." This answer seemed to puzzle the official, who said he supposed it was Protestant, not Catholic. And as "Prot." Lord Russell was entered on the card outside his cell.—London Spectator.

Old Time Bathing.

What would mixed bathers in England think of Blackpool as it was a little over a century ago? When ladies went to bathe a bell was rung to announce the fact, and any gentleman discovered on the parade after it had sounded was fined a bottle of wine. When the ladies had been bathed and completed their toilet the bell was rung a second time, and the gentlemen had their turn.—London Opinion.

New Zealand Nicknames.

New Zealand is described by its inhabitants as "the happiest country in the world." It is now a dominion. Some of the pretty names given to it by New Zealanders are "The Fortunate Isles," "The Wonderland of the Pacific," "All Lands In One" and "The Star of the South."

Well, Aren't They?

"Yes, I certainly advertised for a valet," said the gentleman in reply to the man on the lookout for a berth, "but you're as old as the hills."

"Well, sir," answered the applicant, "begging your pardon, aren't valleys always as old as the hills?"—Exchange.

A Reproof.

Parent—Willie, my father used to whip me when I behaved as badly as you are doing. Willie—Well, I hope I'll never have to tell my little boy that.—Exchange.

United States an Easy Prey.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Capt. M. H. Hanna, U. S. military expert, who is writing a series of articles for The New York Sun, declares that the United States could not repel an invasion. An enemy could easily land 100,000 invaders on the coast, as proved by the mock war waged two years ago.

"Have you started to build your house yet?"

"No. We haven't quite decided what we want."

"You haven't? I thought you had that all planned out months ago."

"So we did, but Aunt Jane didn't like the living room, so we changed that to suit her, and Uncle Bill thought the porch ought to be different, and we changed that. Then Cousin Kate finished that we'd never be satisfied without a music room, so we had to rearrange it to put that in, and my folks thought we ought to have a better's pantry, and her folks were sure we couldn't get along without a room in the attic, and we're waiting now to learn what color an uncle in Honolulu thinks the roof ought to be."—Detroit Free Press.

BURN CONSTANTINOPLE

Turks to Destroy City Rather Than let Russians Take it.

ROME, Dec. 14 (by mail to New York, Jan. 5).—This prophecy was made here to-day by Ismail Kiemal, former Turkish Governor of Roumania before Roumania achieved her independence: "The Russians will pay any price in blood for the 'Queen of the Bosphorus'; they will not hesitate before any sacrifice, but even admitting that they will ultimately succeed—when the last of the Turkish guns have been silenced and the last of the prophet's followers lies in his grave, the Russians will enter a city of smoking ruins. From Pera to Stamboul, from Galata to Scutari, the greatest conflagration the world has ever seen will flare up, greeting the conqueror, destroying every stone of every building. The flames of St. Sophia and Yildiz Kiosk will light the last hour of the Ottoman Empire, and the blasting explosions will be her requiem."

Ismail Kiemal was long Turkish Governor of Syria and Asia Minor, and he is known as "The Wise Man of Constantinople." He declares that Turkey is engaged in a fight for her existence and will stop at nothing. He believes that England's weak spot is Egypt and predicts that the Turks will be able to take the Suez Canal.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The bedside caps must not be less gorgeous. They are made of lace, of gold tissue, of net plain and embroidered—some with Dutch points turning back from the face, others with ruffles draping the forehead. All are dainty and fascinating, with a mien perhaps over one eye. Still, there are simpler things, made of plainer, less expensive materials, and trimmed simply if at all. There are lovely flowered kimonas and crepe jackets, and negligee of French flannel for chilly mornings. With these may be worn lace caps or net ones, trimmed with a ribbon that can be removed easily so the cap may be laundered. Point d'esprit makes a pretty boudoir or breakfast cap.

A design that will be readily appreciated by every woman—one that she need have no compunction about sending to the laundry. Such a negligee is illustrated here, made up in dotted crepe and trimmed with Cluny insertion and narrow edging. There are two tucks each side of front and back, a pretty sleeve with a flowing cuff and a nice becoming collar. The pattern, numbered 6,980, and cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure, provides for several styles of sleeve, as the various views show.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

THE MOST USEFUL GRASS

It Grows a Hundred Feet High and Is Called Bamboo.

There is a grass that grows 100 feet high. For bamboo is classified with the grasses. And bamboo is the most useful of all the grasses, for in the variety of its applications to the service of man it exceeds all other plants.

Most people are familiar with the appearance of this treelike tropical grass and the structure of its all important stem or trunk.

Being remarkably light and strong and at the same time elastic, the stem is admirably suited for making light bridges, the masts of ships and for other structural work. At every joint there is a partition. If these be removed, together with the pithy filling, the trunk may be used as a water pipe. By sawing across just below each segment the trunk is converted into a series of buckets or water pails, each pail having a partition for a bottom. Life preservers, boxes and quivers are also made in a somewhat similar manner.

The hard, elastic stems are used for bows and arrows, flutes, whistles, pipestems and the familiar walking cane. Such a stem of good quality makes an exceptionally serviceable rod.

Rattan, which is made by splitting bamboo into thin strips, is woven into mats, hats, umbrellas and wickerwork. The leaves are used to make hats and thatch. They are mangled into a pulp, which is a good base for certain kinds of coarse paper.

The tender young shoots and the seeds of bamboo are eaten cooked, and a crude beer is made from the seeds. A sweet, viscous exudation from some species is known as tabeo beer. It was known to the Greeks in ancient times and called "Indian honey."

Moreover, there are species of bamboo that, on account of their thorny nature, are used as a hedge, as fortification against wild animals or human foes.

CHILDREN HATE OIL, CALOMEL AND PILLS

"California Syrup of Figs" Best For Tender Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful give to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

HOW ONE MAN WON HIS V. C.

Lieutenant John Henry Stephen Dimmer of the 2nd Battalion King's Royal Rifle Corps, has been gazetted V.C.

The following details of the action in which he won the honour are given:

The 2nd Battalion took up a position in the trenches at Klein Zillebeke on October 31. For almost three weeks there was an exchange of rifle and gun fire, with little advantage to either side. Matters livened up on November 8, when the attack of the Prussian Guard was first expected. When Lieut. Dimmer went to inspect the position he was saluted by three rifle shots, which passed through his cap.

On the 9th the Prussian Guard attacked in great force, but they were eventually driven backk. The day following saw a renewal of the attack, and one of the two machine-guns under Lieut. Dimmer's charge, that on the left, was put out of action. Rifle fire, of course, was continuous.

Later that day the other gun was forced to retire, though this was again brought up into the firing line by the lieutenant under cover of darkness, valuable assistance being given by Corp. Cordingley. For this Corp. Cordingley was mentioned in despatches and recommended for the Distinguished Service Medal, but unfortunately he received his death wound at the hands of the Prussian Guard.

On November 12th all was quiet until 1 p.m., a most unusual time, when the Prussian Guard commenced their final attack. Lieut. Dimmer was ordered to beat them back, and he brought his gun into action, with three men assisting. There was a heavy mist, however, and the cartridge belts becoming wet jammed in the feed. Although exposed to a galling fire, Lieut. Dimmer at once attempted with a spanner to make the necessary adjustment, when he received a bullet in the jaw, which—in his own words—"he did not mind; it only made him wild."

Shrapnel burst everywhere along the trench and the rifle fire became fiercer. The three men at the gun were picked off one by one, but the lieutenant remained at his post, and a shrapnel bullet hit him in the right eye, almost blinding him. Another shell exploded a few minutes afterwards and filled the left eye with streams of blood.

The enemy attack appeared to slacken, and Lieut. Dimmer staggered to the machine gun again, though both his eyes were almost blinded with blood from his wounds. Observing the Kaiser's Guards turning to retreat, he thought he would give them "a little something to go on with, and banged away for all he was worth."

He was still alone at the gun, emptying belt after belt of cartridges. Then another shrapnel shell burst, and the V.C. hero was hit in the left shoulder. It did not stop his firing, however, but eventually a bullet from a rifle in the same shoulder laid him out quite unconscious.

The heroic lieutenant, wounded and bleeding in five places, had fired 500 cartridges and so saved the position. After a time he recovered consciousness, men of his regiment bandaged him, and by their aid he was able to hobble along to make his report.

Old Nick and Nickel.

Nickel was first discovered by Cronstedt in 1751. No use was made of it, as it was found only in small amounts. For a great many years the German miners called it kupfernickel, or devil's copper. It was believed by these simple folk that Old Nick, or the devil, made this ore purposely to bother the miners, as it looked exactly like copper ore and yet no copper could be extracted from it. Nickel was scarce until a New York smelter found a quantity of it in a shipment of ore from Canada. He stated its value in his report, and the owner of the mine prospected for more and found large quantities of it. Nickel is hard, ductile and malleable. It is white in color, with a yellowish cast. It ranks next to iron and cobalt in magnetic properties and is extensively used for plating purposes, because it will take a high polish and will not rust. Nickel added to steel makes it harder and stronger.—New York World.

Peacock Superstitions.

According to Mohammedan tradition, the peacock opened the wicket of paradise to admit the prince of darkness and received a share of his punishment. The feathers, gorgeous in their hellish dye, reflect the glamour of the evil eye; hence the origin of the superstition that peacocks' feathers are unlucky, though the superstition is sometimes said to have its origin in the fable of Argus, whom Juno set to watch Io, one of her husband's mistresses. Argus was beguiled by Mercury and lulled to sleep by his playing, thus allowing Io to escape. Juno, to punish Argus, placed his many eyes in the tail of her peacock, who thenceforth proudly displayed them. Thus a peacock's feather became the symbol of watchful and vindictive jealousy. There was an old superstition that peacocks ruffled their feathers at the sight of corpses.

This Was in Denmark.

An Englishman having business in a certain Danish town arrived at the railway station. He inquired of a group of men standing near the way to the house he wanted, whereupon one of them offered to go with him and show him. With recollections of what such a service meant in England he said, "I don't want a guide." "But surely you asked us to show you the way," said one of them. "Yes, but I don't want a guide." "My dear sir, I am not a 'guide'; I am the burgomaster."

If You Could Only Be A Stomach

You'd Go to Bed Rather Sore at the Work You'd Have to Do.

Fancy a master that works a horse so long, without rest, that the poor old beast at last has to go to a bone pile.

Fancy yourself doing the same thing with your stomach—the noblest of all our physical organs.

Just imagine yourself devoting hours of ceaseless work to the digestion of a meal which you cannot digest because of wrongful ingredients given to you by the blood.

Is not a man very foolish to imagine a raw sick stomach capable of good work when the juices it receives are so filled with alkali or acid that they actually eat the stomach membrane?

Do you not know from a common sense point of view that to continue such a course means not only the impairment of your stomach but of all digestive organs as well?

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into your stomach just like food. They are so powerful in health giving qualities that almost instantly the work of digestion is improved. They ease up the stomach's work. They go into the blood and balance it perfectly. Thus, when the stomach calls for new juices at your next meal you are able to furnish them.

Your common sense will tell you that so great an aid to digestion as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets could not be in every drug store, unless demanded after trial by all classes of stomach sufferers.

No more are they a doubtful quality. They have passed a rigid examination by all manner of stomach and digestive tests, and they have been awarded the diploma of American patronage. Their's has been the practical test.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists at 50c a box.

THE ALLIES WIN SUCCESSES IN ARGONNE

GERMANS LOSE HEAVILY IN COUNTER ATTACKS

FRESH SUCCESSES FOR THE FRENCH IN THE ARGONNE

New Attacks Gain More Ground, While German Counter Attacks at Several Points Are Driven Back With Very Heavy Losses to the Enemy

MANY TRENCHES HAVE BEEN TAKEN

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 6.—Distinct successes in Argonne and in the neighbourhood of Cortechausee are announced by the French authorities to-day. In addition German attacks have been repulsed at several points.

The Germans, despite terrible rains, have essayed two attacks in force in an attempt to retake positions at St. Georges, but were driven back with heavy loss. From the Lys to the Oise the only artillery has been silenced by the accurate fire of the French heavy guns, and the Germans have been forced back a hundred yards to the northwest of Rheims. In terrific fighting in the Argonne region the French have won back 300 yards of trenches which previously were captured by the Germans. Two violent German attacks at Bagatelle and Frontain have been repulsed while near Cortechevese the French have dynamited and demolished 300 yards of German trenches capturing half of them. Fight is still in progress for remainder. The weather is still almost intense at every point along the line.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Earl Kitchener, addressing the House of Lords this evening, made it plain that all of the allies are increasing their resources of both men and materials in order to prosecute the war to a triumphal finish. He did not give the figures of the men available at present for service in France, but stated that a satisfactory level of recruiting is being maintained. The War Secretary also stated that a house to house canvass had shown that there were 216,000 men who had registered to be called on for service should they be needed later on, but who were not at present moment ready to enlist for the war.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Jan. 6.—Count Zeppelin has at present seven aerial dreadnoughts at his disposal at Friedrichshafen, Dusseldorf, Berlin and Homburg. An eighth airship was seriously damaged by Commander Briggs, of the British aerial squadron in his raid on Friedrichshafen last month, and is being patched up to join the second fire of Zeppelins, which number a dozen and which are useless for long journeys.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—At Salisbury Plain all training is again suspended owing to heavy floods. Thousands of men are compelled to remain in the huts. Much of the training area is under several feet of water, and Salisbury streets are impassable except by boats.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Morning Post correspondent telegraphs from Berne: "Forty-one towns and villages in Alsace, which have been occupied by French troops since the outbreak of hostilities are now administered by the French authorities.

Earl Kitchener stated that Sir John French's force has been increased by the territorial units and an entire new division to which has been attached a fine Canadian regiment, the Princess Pats. The War Secretary declared that in the last six weeks the allies had won marked successes both in the eastern and western theatres of war. He expressed the belief that the news of the Russian victory in the Caucasus would have a far-reaching effect. He also paid a high tribute to the operations of the Servians, who completely overwhelmed the Austrians.

The War Office, Kitchener said, had anticipated a decrease of recruiting during Christmas, but this was followed by a rush which had already almost restored the record made before the holidays. He stated that all of the units of the new army are satisfactorily offered, while there is a surplus of officers now in training to be drawn on as needed.

The Underwriters' Annual Dinner

Was Held Last Evening—Large Attendance—Stirring Addresses

The annual dinner of the Life Underwriters' Association of Central Ontario was held last evening in the main dining room of the Oriental Hotel. The meeting, which was one of the best ever held under the auspices of the Association, was featured by a couple of excellent addresses from Mr. D. H. Moore of this City, and Mr. J. E. Meiklejohn of Ottawa. Mr. T. W. Robinson, retiring President, occupied the chair.

Mr. D. H. Moore of the Sun Life, laid special emphasis on the reasons why life insurance men should belong to the Association. Mr. Meiklejohn, who followed, explained the workings of the Association, and the results achieved. It had for one of its objects the raising of the standard of the men engaged in the insurance business. It was also instrumental in having legislation passed in the interests of the insuring public. At the close of the meeting a hearty vote of thanks was tenederd Mr. Meiklejohn.

Officers Elected.

The officers elected for 1915 were as follows:

President—W. A. Haslam.
First Vice President—W. Scadding.
Second Vice President—Mr. Widdess of Lindsay.
Secretary-Treasurer—C. H. Patterson.

The meeting was brought to a conclusion with the rendition of the National Anthem.

A LOCAL MAN AFFECTED BY GERMAN RAID

Mr. John Bentley of Peterborough Owns a House That Was Partially Destroyed in Scarborough

BROTHER'S NARROW ESCAPE

Mr. John Bentley, 388 Park Street, Managing Director of the Auburn Woollen Co., Ltd., and a former resident of Scarborough, England, is in receipt of a letter from his brother, Mr. Adolph Bentley, of Scarbosough, containing information concerning the German raid of December the sixteenth. Mr. Bentley has also received a picture showing one of his houses that was damaged by the last shot that was fired by the "baby killers". Mr. Bentley of this City owns considerable property in Scarborough including the house referred to, which is one of a block of seven. The house in question was situated in the middle of the block. The damage will amount to three or four thousand dollars. The occupants of the room that suffered considerable damage had only been out of the room about a minute when the shell struck the building. Another woman was knocked down and buried under a chest of drawers. House number 164 was the building that was struck by the shell. In house number 168 of the same block resides a brother of Mr. Bentley's. He was away at the time of the incident referred to. It is estimated that at least five hundred shells were fired. In a field, one mile inland, and owned by Mr. Bentley, fourteen shells were found.

At Death's Door.

Mr. Adolph Bentley of Scarborough writing to his brother of this City, states that the death list will probably reach one thousand. Scarborough was a seaside resort and, consequently was the summer rendezvous for a large number of invalids, the population rising from thirty thousand, which is normal, to upwards of two hundred thousand. Many of these invalids have since died from shock. The woman who was in Mr. Bentley's house when it was struck is now at death's door. The writer also refers to the elaborate precautions that have been instituted to prevent a repetition of the occurrence. Miles of barbed wire have been placed along the Coast line to a depth of twelve feet. The wire entanglements have been connected to electric generating machines so that they can be charged with the deadly fluid in event of an attempt at an invasion. The roads along the coast have been torn up, and trenches construcetd.

The Red Indian.

An interesting, not to say, amusing part of Mr. Bentley's letter is his description of a trip he made to Salisbury Plain for the purpose of seeing the Canadian troops. Of this the writer has the following to say:

"I have been to see the Canadian troops at Salisbury. They are a fine-looking body of men. You must have sent mostly all cowboys as they look as though they are used to outdoor life. I looked in vain for the Indians. I wish you would tell me where they are stationed."

The writer evidently refers to the North American Indian or what is known as the Redskin, of which there are a few with the first contingent. They are not, however, garbed in the war paint, that was in vogue years ago when the Redskins roamed over the American continent at will.

Mr. Adolph Bentley visited Mr. Bentley of this City about a year ago.

INAUGURAL MEETING OF THE BOARD

The inaugural meeting of the Board of Education will take place at the Secretary's Office, 387 George street, on Thursday night, January 7th, at 8 o'clock p.m.

NO CAMP FOR CITY

Forces in This Division For Third Contingent Will Be Mobilized Chiefly At Ottawa

MR. BURNHAM'S STATEMENT

That Peterborough is to be passed by as a mobilization centre is evidenced by the following statement from Mr. Burnham, M.P., regarding the rumour of mobilization of trops here, which has been the source of much confusion and disappointment:

"Some days ago it was decided as I understand from military authorities here to mobilize troops here. Various officers were sent here who made measurements and observations and approval of the accommodation. Nothing appears, however, even to have been decided upon to that effect at Ottawa. It may be that they were merely investigating and collecting information. However, a day or so ago a report greatly agitated Lindsay, Peterborough, Cobourg, etc., to the effect that mobilization was to take place at Ottawa and Belleville alone. Recruiting alone was to be conducted at the other towns, and this in the face of orders issued and bills posted calling for tenders for all sorts of supplies for the camps at Peterborough and the other towns. We failed, therefore, to understand what the report meant. I wired the minister asking for information. He wired back this message: "Have got heard of any change in our original plan re mobilization."

Minister Is Ill.

The minister is ill at the hospital in Ottawa. I tried to get him by telephone but could not. He cannot be interviewed. I was then informed here that Sir Robert Borden was acting-Minister of Militia. I telephoned him but he denied the statement emphatically, and said that General Hughes was in control of that department. I then telephoned twice to another minister of the first rank, and he telephoned me this morning that the Minister of Militia was ill and could not be seen, and that the deputy-minister was away, but that the plans had all been fully considered and decided on some time ago and that mobilization was to be at Ottawa chiefly, with some troops at Belleville. I then rang up the Department of Militia which said the same thing, and that the matter was not open for further discussion.

Nothing More to Be Said.

In view of the minister's wire and the information received from other ministers including the Prime Minister, and from the departmental officials, there is nothing more to be said. What was decided on I was informed over the telephone was what was considered to be in the best interests of organization, of the cause and of the troops who were about to risk their lives in the service of their country. While naturally we may be disappointed that we get no pecuniary advantage out of being a mobilization station, still we are not disposed to grumble at the Government's decision to do what is strictly in the best interests of those most concerned, namely, the Empire and the troops. I understand that Lindsay is furious, but that is likely only another rumour. They are just as patriotic and sensible as we are. What further inducements the city may wish to present to the authorities I cannot say. I have wired making an appointment for the Mayor and Aldermen with the Premier. I have left nothing undone so far as I know to do my duty in the best interests of all concerned."

INSANITARY METHODS OF MILK PRODUCTION STRONGLY CENSURED

At the Opening Session of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association—G. G. Publow Points the Way to Get at the Careless Dairyman.

SPLENDID MEETING TO-DAY

T '4TT.3n.G AkTm |E " one mht T

The 38th annual convention of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario was opened this morning in the Grand Opera House, with a large representation of the most prominent dairymen in the eastern peninsula of the province. It was a splendid opening, with an important address by G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Inspector of Eastern Ontario.

He struck a keynote that appealed to the meeting, and was heartily endorsed by a number of other speakers. Mr. Publow pointed out that the time has come when the indifferent, careless milk producer must be brought to a full realization that he cannot continue as in the past. And on the other hand, the dairyman sending out good, sweet milk must demand protection from these individuals, who, by their carelessness, are retarding the progress of the industry, and preventing Eastern Ontario cheese from reaching that place in the world's markets which the efforts of the industrious and particular producer should have already attained. Mr. Publow pointed out that competition in the industry is growing keener every year, and that good milk producers should not tolerate the encumbrance which their careless neighbours are proving.

This was the theme of the initial session, and it found a ready response throughout the house.

PROMINENT MEN PRESENT.

President J. A. Sanderson, of Oxford Station, occupied the chair, and among those present were: Senator Derbyshire, John R. Dargavel, Henry Glendenning, T. H. Thompson of Madoc, Prof. Grisdale of the O.A.C., Guelph; C. F. Whitley, Geo. H. Barr, Robert Ward, Geo. A. Gillespie, and others.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

In his opening address, Mr. Sanderson said: It is a pleasure for me, as President of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario, to welcome you to the 38th annual convention of this association, and to the City of Peterborough, whose citizens are so justly proud of the historic association of this City and vinicity with the dairy industry. It is not too much to say that Peterborough dairy district has been, and is, an important factor in winning and maintaining the proud position our dairy products occupy in the markets of the world. Our association has had the loyal support and influence of the best citizens of this City, and I venture to express the hope that our meetings in this City will be of mutual benefit to its citizens, to the association and to the dairy industry as a whole.

A year ago there was, owing to changing conditions, more or less discontent and uneasiness in the minds of some dairymen, particularly some producers. The results of the past season's business, in receiving the highest prices ever paid in the history of the industry, has proved that this uneasiness was unnecessary, and should convince the dairymen of Eastern Ontario that they need have no hesitation in engaging in this branch of agriculture as extensively as their conditions will allow. Our motto should be: "Business as usual," and more business.

It is gratifying to be able to state the district dairy meetings, which is one phase of dairy education being carried on by the Provincial Department of Agriculture, were more largely attended than any previous season. The producers showed a keener interest in larger production, a more sanitary milk supply, and in making the business more remunerative to themselves and to the industry at large.

For some yields past we have been forced to report each year a decrease in exports of cheese from that of the previous year. Nineteen fourteen is no exception in this respect. However, while the decrease in exports from 1912 to 1913 was about 9 per cent., the decrease from 1913 to 1914 is only about 5.5 per cent. But we must not lose sight of the fact that the average selling price of cheese during 1914 was about one cent per pound greater than that of 1913. When this increase in selling price is taken into consideration our cash receipts for exports will be very little under that of 1913.

It is a fact well known to dairymen of Eastern Ontario that our creamery business has for some years past shown a healthy, steady growth. During the past season three more creameries have been in operation in Eastern Ontario than in 1913. In addition to this several factories equipped for the manufacture of both cheese and butter are increasing their make of butter every year. The butter produced in Eastern Ontario is practically all consumed in Ontario, consequently statistics relating to exports of butter have little bearing on our creamery business. Nevertheless, considering the question from a national standpoint, it is gratifying to know that while our exports of butter were nothing for some years previous to 1912, they were 70 packages in 1912, 1,728 packages in 1913, 7,300 packages in 1914.

Turning to the city milk and ice cream phases of the industry, we find these branches have been developing rapidly, which naturally accounts for a large part of the decrease in our cheese production.

The thanks of the dairymen are due to the Departments of Agriculture, both Provincial and Federal, for the splendid and efficient services being rendered in the different lines of educational work being carried on by these two departments. In this respect I would mention particularly the dairy instruction carried on by the Provincial Department under Mr. Publow and his able staff, and the herd improvement work carried on by the Federal Department.

In concluding my address I wish to emphasize the necessity of the dairyment realising the critical condition of our own and our mother land, and the great need of using our best efforts, not only to maintain but increase our great national industry—dairying. We must all realize that the British Empire, of which we form no mean part, is engaged in a life and death struggle. We can and are rendering valuable aid by sending men to engage in this struggle, but those of us who remain at home can and must render equally valuable aid by increasing our supply of food stuffs for export to the home land.

In commencing his adress Mr. G. G. Publow said the weakest point in connection with the production of milk and cream lies with the farmer in failing to provide the cattle with an abundance of suitable feed throughout the entire season. In June when there is plenty of grass we are satisfied with the milk supply. But often during July and August under a dry spell the flow falls off and we are led to blame the cows. I don't care how well a cow is fed, if you don't give her material from which milk can be produced you will not get the quantity you should. Eighty per cent of the cows are capable of doubling their production if they get the proper food.

Some Complaints to Make.

We've had dairy instruction for a great many years and yet we find after earnest work we have the same things to report about, the same defects in our cheese and butter. How long are we to continue talking and preaching until a remedy is brought about? Has the time not come when those men who are doing their best should make the demand on the careless farmers to bring them into line. They are the most interested. The men working with the most sanitary conditions should not be held down by the mix-

NOT THIS WAR.

The German Chancellor Von Bethmann-Holweg, said to a correspondent a day or two ago—"I did not want this war." That is to say he did not want this kind of war. He did not want a war with Great Britain, as one of the enemies. What he and the German war party desired was a war that would permit Germany to ride, roughshod, over Belgium into France; march in triumph over France, capture Paris, and then turn eastward and crush slow-moving, but solidly-moving Russia. He and the German war party wanted a war in which Italy would have been an ally. Great Britain, with her chivalrous regard for national honour, with her noble sympathy with the weaker nation, with her eternal hostility to oppression and autocratic rule, made this a war that is not to Germany's liking. With Britain out of the fight, Germany would have been immensely strengthened. Her fleet could have had a comparatively free way on the sea, and her commerce, and her food, and other sources of supply, could have operated with little interruption. If Britain had kept out, Germany would not have found herself cabinned, cribbed, confined, her navy virtually useless, and inevitable defeat staring her in the face. We may well believe the German Chancellor that Germany did not want this war, this kind of war. Instead of realising her dream of world domination, she is fighting for existence, and even at, that is playing a losing game, so far as her existence as a world disturbed is concerned.

WHERE UNCLE SAM STANDS.

The United States owes its very existence as a nation to resistance to a far less wrong than Germany is inflicting upon Belgium. The very foundation of the republic is freedom of the individual and the right of the individual to share in the government necessary to organized society. What constitutes the base of the freedom, the prosperity, the happiness, of the United States republic, is what Britain and the Allies are fighting for in resisting the evil ambition of Germany—world domination at the expense of the right of the individual to freedom and a share in his own government. Britain is fighting the battle of democracy; and the greatest democracy of the world, the most populous, the most wealthy and, materially, the strongest, is standing idly by as an indifferent spectator. Like Saul at the Martyrdom of St. Stephen—it stands by consenting, and by its attitude, approves and virtually helps, the process of the outrage upon Belgium and the war against democracy, against civilization and human freedom. It is fair to say that this attitude is the attitude of the government, not the concrete form of expression of the popular idea. It is safe to say that in this attitude the Government of the United States does not express the feelings and sympathies of the people of the United States. A more fitting and true expression is found in the press of the country, which is overwhelmingly in sympathy. Ex-President Roosevelt has strong opinions too. He protests vigourously against the "tame acquiescence of the United States in Germany's violation of The Hague convention and neutrality treaties." The United States with other nations signed The Hague agreement, and ex-President Roosevelt is right in regarding as a great act of international wrong-doing the violation of this convention. He gave his sanction to the signing of this agreement in the name of the United States. Now he finds the head of the nation acting as if the solemn obligations it assumed were no more than "a scrap of paper." Great Britain was no more in honour bound to go to war in the interest of the neutrality of Belgium by virtue of a treaty to which she was a signatory than is the United States in honour bound to implement its signature to The Hague agreement by at least specific and strong protest against the violation of The Hague Convention by German bombardment of non-combatant cities. Ex-President Roosevelt can somewhat consistently be grounded over the "cold-blooded and timid indifference" of his country "to the most frightful ravages of war committed at the expense of a peaceful and unoffending country." Instead of the United States making vigorous protest against the violations by Germany of all the international obligations to which she and the United States put their hand and seal, in adopting the hucksterring policy of virtually conniving at protecting the unscrupulous attempts of its citizens to reap petty commercial profit, by strengthening Germany's power to commit outrages, by smuggling into that country material for munitions of war. The Government of the United States, in a close analysis of the situation, does not differ very widely from Germany in contempt of the obligations arising from placing her hand to a solemn document. The government in its present attitude does not represent the sentiment of the best element of its people. This is represented by such journals as the Philadelphia Public Ledger, which in the following extract, says only what other influential journals and millions of citizens are thinking and saying—

Of all the fatal mistakes, none has been graver than the Germanic outraging of the sense of international morality. If the Kaiser had failed only as a warrior, the world would have accorded him and his armies the honour that belongs to courage; but mankind will never forget and hardly forgive the raping of Belgium, the destruction of Louvain, the vandalage of Rheims, the unleashing of the merciless Moslem and last of all, the flagrant violation of The Hague ruling against the bombardment of defenceless towns without warning. It seems now as though the callous jest about "the scrap of paper" were simply the first evidence of a complete abandonment of national compacts.

We don't expect the United States to mobolise army and fleet at once; but we should expect that the United States should formally and forcibly protest against the outrage of a convention devised in the interests of humanity and freedom. Such a protest, from a country with a hundred millions of people, whose liberties would be imperilled if Germany won, would have a tremendous moral effect, and, probably make Germany drop barbaric methods. We may not expect that the United States would have recourse to arms to enforce her protest. She would, however, be justified even in this if Germany disregarded her protest and refused to play fair in the game of war. It is incumbent upon the United States to protest from principle, and not from selfish interest, as she would surely do if, as well may happen, some of these days, an United States ship carrying United States commerce and citizens, is blown up by one of the mines fiendishly planted by Germany in the waters of neutral shipping.

THE NEW "POOR MAN'S CLUB."

Warmth, companionship, the chance to relax, and something going on—these things have often been called the real attractions of the saloon. Then why not get the pleasures without the usual foot rail and cycle of smutty stories, without the ultimate price of jail, hospital, or gutter? That is, why not cut the saloon for the movies? They are doing it in Brooklyn, N.Y., where fifty-three saloons failed last year, while the moving-picture theatres increased in twice the corresponding ratio. The notion that the saloon is the only possible "poor man's club" is being imperiled by the films. Every new movie show that opens is a new foe to booze. That is why the saloon owner loves the movies as the burglar loves the watchdog.—Collier's.

NEGLECT TO DECLARE.

Another fiction of the naval searchers for contraband has been exploded, announced the Philadelphia Record in commenting on the "explanation" of Senator Walsh, of Montana, that the usual way of loading copper ignots on board is to stow them away in the bottom under other merchandise because they make good ballast. That's all right so far as it goes, but where the American shippers have left themselves open to detention and search is that they have neglected to declare this copper in their shipping manifests. It doesn't make any difference where the copper is placed in the ship so long as its presence is declared. Some of the less fair-minded among the Americans are being hard put to it to defend the evasion on the part of a few of their shipping countrymen of the contraband regulations. There are always a few persons who consider it altogether proper to turn every possible contingency to their own profit. These persons can perhaps be excused, but it is not so easy to excuse those who seek to defend them, knowing as they do that these offences against the contraband regulations, were they successful would tend to prolong the war which all America is deploring.— Ottawa Free Press.

GERMANY THE LOOTER.

Articles 46 and 53 of The Hague Conventions specify that private property must be respected by belligerents and requisition cannot be claimed for other than the army of occupation. That is, only the invading army on the spot has a right to requisition stores or supplies from the community of which it has gained control, and then only for its own use. The Germans subscribed to those articles in common with others, and in the case of Belgium this is how they have observed them:

In Antwerp they have seized $2,600,000 worth of cotton, $1,000,000 worth of rubber, $1,200,000 worth of woollens, $2,000,000 worth of leather.

In Ghent they have seized cotton nets, flax, and other raw material worth $1,700,000.

In Charleroi they have seized $300,000 worth of copper and tool machines worth $2,400,000.

In Duffel they seized $200,000 worth of nickel.

In Malines they seized $500,000 worth of canned goods.

The facts have been filed by the Belgian Minister with the United States Government as official. In all, about $87,000,000 worth of raw materials have been seized in Belgium, and transported to Germany for the use of German factories. Then the Germans say the Belgian workmen will not return to work. Col. Roosevelt's indignant call to the United States to make good her adherence to The Hague Conventions by showing Germany she will not tolerate that country's violations of international good faith is a natural expression of wrath. Germany is not only an anarch among the nations, but she has the morals of a Captain Kidd. —Mail and Empire.

A WORD FOR THE "TOWN" CRUISERS.

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier was Premier of a Liberal Government he and his colleagues became responsible for the formulation and adoption of a policy of naval aid to the Empire, which contemplated the building, equipping, and manning of four swift cruisers and six efficient torpedo-boat destroyers. The cruisers were to be of the "Bristol" class; that is, one of the group called by the names of cities. Of these "town" cruisers several have since distinguished themselves, including the Glasgow, the Birmingham, and the Sydney, and there is still a good chance for others, including the Melbourne and the Brisbane of the Australian squadron. The Ottawa Citizen refers to this matter for the purpose of protesting against the practice of Conservative journals in calling these extremely effective vessels "tin-pots," a practice which tends to discredit the fleet of British cruisers in a most uncalled for and unpatriotic manner. Here is the characteristic way in which The Ottawa Citizen condemns its fellow-Conservative journals

"Narrow partisanship seems to forget that Sir Wilfrid Laurier suffered defeat in Quebec largely because he dared to advocate even a fleet of four cruisers. Some partisans forget, too, that certain of Sir Wilfrid's strongest opponents—opposed to any form of naval aid to Britain—have since been awarded portfolios in the present Dominion Cabinet. There is something totally un-British in the whole handling of the naval defence question in Canada. The Liberal party fully deserved its punishment in 1911; and so long as it is no different from the Conservative party in practice it can lay no special claim to re-election. But it is not British fair play to forever crush Sir Wilfrid Laurier between the jingoism of Ontario and the nationalism of Quebec; nor is it conducive to any kind of political progress in this country. At the present time when the old Liberal Chieftain is playing a part as statesmanlike and patriotic as any political leader in Canada the spirit of partisanship trying to pillory Laurier can only be described in the effective terms of Earl Grey as "low and ignoble."

That rebuke will not prevent the London Free Press and other journals of the true-blue shade from continuing to pillory Laurier and all who stand with him for a Canadian navy.—Globe.

FIVE SONS GOT LEAVE.

Mother Saw Her Soldier Boys Before She Died.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Chronicle says: "Earl Kitchener is so generally credited with an iron character devoid of sentiment in matters affecting his great purpose that the following story of his thoughtfulness is of special interest.

"A Sunderland woman with five sons in the army lay dying. Her one desire was to see her boys again, and through the offices of a local Salvation Army officer four of the sons serving in England reached home within twenty-four hours. Their expenses were paid by the authorities. The fifth son, however, was at the front, and there seemed little chance of the old woman's wish being fulfilled. But the Salvationist officer, wired to the War Office, and back came a reply over Lord Kitchener's signature saying that if the son could be found he would be sent home. Afterwards came a wire to say the man was on his way home, and eventually he landed in time to see his mother before her death. The authorities had paid his expenses and gave him seven days' furlough and rations."

DARDANELLES BOMBARDED.

Allied Fleet Is Reported To Be Making a Vigorous Assault.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A Berlin wireless despatch says:

An Athens despatch reports that the Franco-British fleet is attempting to force the Dardanelles. It is being blocked by the heavy bombardment of the fortresses. It is said that one torpedo boat was slightly damaged.

It has been previously reported that the allied fleets were bombarding the interior Dardanelles forts, and that the archives and public documents were being removed from Constantinople.

Mediators Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Secretary of Labor Wilson yesterday named Daniel J. Keefe, ex-commissioner of immigration, and Hywell E. Davies as Federal conciliators to intervene in the Ohio and West Virginia coal miners' strikes. This action was taken at the request of the Wheeling, W.Va., chamber of commerce.

Davies was one of the mediators originally appointed in the Colorado coal strike.

Maj.-Gen. Hughes' Son Hurt.

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—Word has just been received by Maj.-Gen. Hughes that his son, Col. Garnet Hughes, who is with the first Canadian contingent, was struck by a piece of shrapnel shell while over on the firing line with Col. Leckie of Vancouver. They were studying the country and the actual fighting conditions. Col. Hughes has a scalp wound several inches in length, but he was not seriously injured.

Can United States Consistently Maintain Neutrality in the War?

This war is sui generis. It has no prototype, and there are few, particulars in which it follows any precedent. By Germany, that anarch among nations, international law is being repealed in the same deliberate and conscientious manner as domestic trouble is being fomented by her agents in nearly every country in the world. Those agents did everything they could do to rouse China against Japan, to incite to civil disturbance United States citizens of German origin, to start insurrection in South Africa, to precipitate an uprising of Mohammedanism against Christian nations, to bribe Italy by promises of war plunder in the form of French territory, and to breed strife between Britain and the United States in regard to ocean commerce. Treaties, rules of war, rights of neutrals, rights of belligerents and nearly everything of military and civil institution recognized in the law of nations are upset and trampled upon by German militarism on the stampede. The greater the stress to which Germany is put by the Allies the more does she seem to be possessed of the evil spirit that entered into the swine and drove them headlong to their own destruction. The wild boar of her own forests, furious and frothing, is not more reckless of others' rights and of the principles of civilization than is Germany herself.

The world at large should take cognizance of the fact that the war Germany is carrying on is much more than a conflict rising out of a dispute between neighbouring nations, and of concern to them alone. It is a rebellion against all laws for the governance of war, all conventions regulating the intercourse among nations. Onlooking powers should take notice and govern themselves accordingly, that Germany has put into the melting pot the principles and understandings that make up what may be called the civil constitution of the family of nations. Her reversion to barbarism has made necessary a revision of the established way of classifying nations as belligerents and combatants. Except in the most rigidly technical and meaningless sense, what nation can be neutral in such a war as this? The issue is not, we repeat, one solely concerning any two nations or two coalitions. It is one affecting all powers, States and principalities, great and small, independent and dependent. It is the question whether civilization shall endure, or Vandalism, with the sword in one hand and the torch in the other, shall rage over the continents and the oceans.

The United States cannot maintain a sustantially neutral attitude. As a matter of fact, it is not maintaining such an attitude. The great mass of the United States people are, as might be expected, heart and soul with the nations who are now pouring out their blood and money to champion the cause of civilization, for which they are fighting with even greater devotion than that shown by the chivalry of Europe in the Wars of the Cross. In what one of the Crusades was there so much at stake for Christendom as there is now with the Vandals and the Turks in league?

The United States' Government itself is not preserving a perfectly neutral stand. Its protest to Great Britain on the subject of interference with American merchant vessels suspected of carrying contraband identifies it with one side. The protest is not altogether reasonable, and in so far it might seem to be an indication that the Washington leaning from neutrality is against Britain and the nations allied with her. But the grounds set forth in the protest show that the United States ought, as Mr. Roosevelt says, to be on Britain's side in this war. The Washington Government complains that in certain cases the British interference with United States merchant vessels is contrary to international law and generally accepted usage. That is, the United States Government declares itself to be an upholder of the law of nations. That surely puts her in the company of those powers that are undertaking to overcome and render harmless the wrecker, the defier and destroyer of international compacts. It is as if Washington chided the British Government for not being a more circumspect champion of the United States and other civilized nations against the common enemy—as if Britain were reproved for not being as perfect a respecter as she is stout defender of the world's heritage of rights and liberties and guarantees thereof. It is as if our neighbours said to Britain "You are fighting our battles "for the security and freedom of commerce and of everything else of national consequence to us. Would it not be well to impress the ravening power you are protecting us from by the example of your own tenderness even to the most suspicious cargoes under our flag?" The United States should be in the fight for civilization instead of nagging it own friend and mankind's friend, the valiant John Bull, when he is in the sweat and blood of battle in behalf of all free nations.—Mail and Empire.

ARMY IN RETREAT

Army of the Caucasus Has Been Victorious Over Two Turkish Army Corps, Capturing One and Routing the Other

TURKS ALSO CRUSHED

LONDON, Jan. 6. — The Russians report another victory over the Austrians in the Uzsok Pass of the Carpathians. Emperor Francis Joseph's army in this region is declared to be in full retreat in a mountain pass deep in snow, while a violent snowstorm rages and the Russian cavalry is attacking on the flank and rear.

By forcing this pass the Russians gain control of some of the most valuable oil fields in the Austrian empire, and thus shuts off another of the sources of fuel supply of which the Austro-German armies are said to be so much in need. This, however, has only been part of the Russian task. While forcing back the Turks and Austrians, the Russian troops are holding the line of the Mazurian Lakes in east Prussia; are fighting strenuously to withstand the German offensive in north Poland; are advancing toward Cracow and have crossed Bukowina, which is now virtually in their possession.

In north Poland, where Russia is confronted with the most serious task, the weather is proving a useful ally. The Germans, according to their own accounts, are making only slow progress with their offensive operations, while the Russians, an unofficial despatch received from Berlin by way of Copenhagen says, are advancing toward Cracow and southern Silesia.

Military men look for bigger events between the lower Vistula and the east Prussian frontier. The Russians are in possession of the greater part of the intervening territory, and unless engaged, would, when the river freezes, fall on the German flank to the south of the river. It is therefore believed here that the Germans are planning a movement from Thorn and east Prussia, which would prevent its possibility, and as the fighting would take place in the open it would afford a contrast to the trench warfare, which prevails along the rest of the front.

Defeat of the Turks in the Caucasus at Sari Kamyah with the capture of the entire 9th army corps and the vigorous pursuit of the 10th army corps and a severe repulse of the invaders at Ardahan, forty-five miles northwest of Kars, on the road to Tiflis, were reported in despatches from the commander of the Russian forces on the frontier received in Petrograd last night.

This rapid success is considered most gratifying by Grand Duke Nicholas, who had kept his forces at a minimum strength along the three hundred mile Turkish frontier in order not to weaken his armies opposing the Germans and Austrians in the west.

At the outset of the war it was determined in order not to fall in with the designs of the Germans in bringing Turkey into the war to stand on the defensive against the Turks for the present and to devote the energies of Russia to the crushing of the Austrians and Germans. As soon as this was accomplished the Turks would be forced to collapse speedily beneath the superior weight of Russia and Great Britain.

The Turks, led by German officers, took the offensive amid the rigors of a winter of the Caucasus, and the inferior Russian force in compliance with the plans of the General Staff at once fell back and concentrated against the Turkish column so as to defeat them in detail.

When one column of two army corps, it is believed here, advanced as far as Ardahan on Sunday, driving in the Russian advanced outposts, the bear, by a lusty stroke with his claws, smashed this formidable force. This was followed by an immediate offensive at Sari Kamyah before the leaders of that column of invasion could have time to fall back after hearing the result at Ardahan, with the result that the Muscovite entangled over sixty thousand men in his net, or what was left of them, and chased sixty thousand more for their lives. The predicament of the Turks who have escaped from Kamyah is believed to be very bad.

The effect of these defeats to Turkish arms upon Constantinople is awaited with interest. The Russian successes are considered a severe blow to the prestige of the German officers, who held the high commands, and this will not be lost on the Turkish populace.

HOAXING THE ENGLISH.

Jokes Sprung by Irish Members in the House of Commons.

Now and then a joke, somewhat after the American pattern—perhaps it would be more exact to say hoax—is brought forward in the British house of commons, usually by some son of Erin. Recently John O'Dowd, an Irish M. P., wanted to know of the government when the port of Manorhamilton would be opened for the shipment of Irish cows and Irish sheep. Mr. Runciman, answering for the government, said the matter should receive his consideration. When this promise got into print there much laughter all over Ireland, for Manorhamilton is forty miles from water, and the fact was apparent that English ministers are as densely ignorant about Ireland as they have been charged with being.

The O'Dowd sell is, however, not altogether new. Some years ago John Roche, an Irish member, gave a beautiful picture in words of the natural advantages of a roadway that he named as Woodford harbor and assured the house that its shelter was unsurpassed and that if it were properly dredged the whole British fleet could safely ride at anchor within its coast lines. He threatened to divide the house unless satisfactory assurance were given that something would be done for this neglected harbor. The head of the admiralty promised to give the matter his immediate and personal attention. The next morning all Ireland was in a roar of laughter, for Woodford is even farther from the sea than Manorhamilton. Mr. Roche, it seems, is the owner of a duck pond, and the natives now call this sheet of water Woodford harbor.—Exchange.

PLAN TO FLOOD SAHARA.

Revival of the Scheme to Turn the Desert Into a Sea.

The De Lesseps project for flooding a portion of the Sahara has been revived. In the extreme south of Tunisia is a tract of land, some of which is hundreds of feet below the sea level. A string of "schotts," or small salt lakes, occupies a portion of the depressed area, which is barred from the Mediterranean only by a few miles of sand flats, never 100 feet above the level of the sea.

Manifestly the flooding of such an area so placed is an easy task for modern engineering. The question is whether the project will pay. In addition to the first canal, several shorter canals would have to be dug to conduct the water to isolated portions of the depressed region. The extent of country which might be flooded has been estimated variously from 6,000 to more than 20,000 square miles.

Just what good will come of the proposed desert flooding is not clear. It could hardly make much change in climate or rainfall, and it would not lend to any important commercial developments. But it can be done, and perhaps it will be done, just as an evidence that man has become boss of the earth and is making it to suit him.—Chicago Journal.

GERMAN MERCHANT SHIPS AUCTIONED IN OLD LONDON

"Ulla Boog" is the First Prize Vessel to be Offered and It Brings 23,150 Pounds—Sale is Attended by Shipping Men From All Over Britain

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Baltic Exchange Building was bright yesterday with red ink notices, announcing that four German ships captured since the outbreak of war, and now lying in various British ports, would be sold at public auction at 2.30 o'clock. This is the first auction since the ships were under the Prize Court ruling, and by 2.30 the room especially prepared for the occasion and the adjacent corridors were packed with top-hatted, grey-haired and bald men, representing as the shrill call of the telegraph boys reminded one, of shipping interests from all over Great Britain. "By order of the Marshal of the Admiralty, no bids will be considered which represent an advance of less than £5," said the auctioneer.

The first ship offered for sale, after the conditions, principally designed to prevent boats falling into the hands of foreigners, were read, was the "Ulla Boog." It was a single-deck steamer of a gross tonnage of 1,698 and immediately £13,000 was bid for it. This bid was rapidly jumped £500 or £1,000 at a time until £23,500 had been offered. Then it was raised £50 to a bid of £23,150, at which price it was knocked down. The bidding for the other ships followed more or less the course of the bidding for the "Ulla Boog." The total sum realized by auction was £130,735. This sum will be divided by the Government among the whole navy. Before the outbreak of the war the prize money of this description was divided among the sailors making the capture.

The Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, at the suggestion of Lord Derby, passed a resolution yesterday and sent a letter to the Government saying that there was a shortage of shipping and expressing the hope that means might be devised, in the event of the capture of enemies' ships and proceedings for sale should be expedited.

WHY WILLIE QUIT THE JOB.

His Part in the Making of a Cherry Pie Much Too Strenuous.

WILLIE had resigned his position in the big bakery, where he labored in the pie department, and had gone to work in a carpenter's shop for smaller wages. The social investigator, having heard about Willie, questioned him.

"Aren't you sorry you left the bakery and came to this shop?" she asked kindly.

"No'm," Willie answered quickly.

"But you get less money."

"Yes'm."

"Well, what was the matter with the bakery?"

"'Twus this way," explained Willie. "It hurt my mouth. I wus in de pie part, de cherry pie part, an' I had to stone cherries. An' dey've got a rule over there dat all de boys has to whistle all de time dey's workin,' so as to show dey ain't eatin' no cherries."—Popular Magazine.

Fun Ahead For Hubby.

"Have you any smokeless powder here?" she inquired as she made her blushing way to the cigar counter in the drug store.

"No," replied the polite cigar clerk, "we don't keep smokeless powder here."

"Oh dear! that's too bad. Do you know where I could get some?"

"At a gun store perhaps, but would you mind telling me what you want it for?"

"I want to mix it with my husband's tobacco so he won't smoke up the house with that old pipe of his," she replied, with the air of one who had solved a great problem.—Springfield Union.

So Happily Married.

"You know, George, this is my birthday," said the wife.

"Oh, is it, dear?"

"Yes, and, do you know, I never can remember how old I am."

"Well, dear, when we were married you know you were just twenty-eight."

"Oh, yes, so I was, George. That's near enough."

"Precisely, dear. It doesn't really seem any time at all since we were married."—Yonkers Statesman.

A Compromise.

"Well, Geraldine," said the theatrical manager, "what do you want now?"

"Now is right!" answered the actress. "I want a raise, and now is when!"

"Aw, now look here, Jerry," soothed the boss, "I'm willing to meet you half way. How'd it be if I'd raise you another hundred a week in the press stories and only reduce your real pay $2.50 instead of $5?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not at All.

"Is this outdoor sleeping arrangement you propose instructive?"

"Oh, no. You can take a shack if you don't like the term."—Baltimore American.

FARM LANDS.

The Story of Their Rise in Value Reads Like a Romance.

The farmer, not the money king of Wall street, is the real owner of the United States. The giants of his fields is another Aladdin story, only instead of rubbing a lamp he has simply scraped the ground.

Our cereal crops last year were worth $3,000,000,000, which is sufficient to pay for all the tools, implements and machinery of the whole of American industry. While this sum seems huge as it stands alone, you have only to go back a few years in the story of our agriculture to see the miracle of the steady increase that has been achieved. Eleven years ago the value of all our farm products for a single year was reckoned at $4,417,000,000. You have already seen how that figure was doubled by 1909. During these years the sum total that the soil has yielded the farmers is $70,000,000,000. The advance is so steady and sure that you can almost calculate upon it year by year.

Compare this record with the ebb and flow of earnings in steel or any other industry and you realize as never before how agriculture keeps the even tenor of its prosperous way unmindful of panic or depression. Why? Simply because land is stable and, given proper methods of farming, the more you take out of it the more valuable it becomes. It cannot be moved away. It is in truth the very foundation of the nation's material welfare. It would take $24,000,000,000 to buy our farm lands, and their value is real and not watered, save by irrigation.—Isaac F. Marcosson in Munsey's.

A Sixth Sense.

Scientists in Denmark are greatly puzzled by a man named Emil Knudsen, aged thirty-six, a Norwegian from Christiania. He has been an object of interest to the medical faculty for some time, and lately Professor Friedenreich, one of the leading nerve specialists of Europe, suggested an experiment. Knudsen was blindfolded, placed at the wheel on a steamer and told to pilot it through the intricate channels of Copenhagen harbor. This he did without any mishap whatever. He displayed no nervousness or hesitation. He took a dozen sharp corners and followed a zigzag course throughout without any uncertainty. He explains his gift as a sixth sense, and the scientific men who have him under observation are inclined to believe that this explanation is the true one. At present, anyway, they are unable to account for the performance on any other hypothesis.

When you come to the parting of the ways, take the uphill road.

To wish is of little account; to succeed you must earnestly desire.

HARDNESS OF WATER.

Solid Streams at High Velocity Are as Rigid as Iron.

"In the American Magazine a contributor gives a most interesting description of the resisting power of water. He says that a solid stream of water shot out of a hose at tremendous velocity is just as powerful and destructive as a rod of iron. An extract from the article giving an idea of the hardness and resisting power of water follows:

"Here is a fact which is probably novel to the average man who has not spent much of his life thinking about motor speed boats. This is what we may call the hardness of the water when it boat is running at speed. Water at fifty miles an hour is not the limpid liquid we are accustomed to bathe in. If you put your arm overboard from a hydroplane running at fifty miles an hour and strike a wave crest the probability is that you will break your arm or wrist, because at that speed the water has not time to give, not time even to change shape, and striking it is like striking so much metal.

"In the great hydraulic mining monitors, where a stream of water under enormous head is used to wash down hillsides, a swordsman, in attempting to cut into one of these streams, will shatter the sword without being able to penetrate the water. The stream is like a bar of iron. The fact that water at relative speed is so hard—or that its strength is so great, to be a little more accurate—is the reason why a skipping stone travels over the surface and is the reason why a hydroplane boat glides over the surface instead of plowing its way through.

"The picture we must have in our minds, then, of a speed boat is that she is traveling not in water, as we ordinarily understand it, but over the surface of a semisolid, very much as a sled travels over snow."

Freak of a Bullet Wound.

An engineer's clerk, named McNish, engaged in a Wolverhampton (Eng.) office, who took part in the Boer War, has just concluded a remarkable experience. On January 31st, 1901, as a member of the Dorset Regiment, he was in an engagement at Waterpan, and received a Boer bullet in the chest. The X-rays in the Johannesburg hospital revealed the presence of the bullet in an almost impregnable position behind two bones, and the surgeons decided not to operate. For thirteen years McNish has not been seriously troubled by the bullet. Recently, however, a rather large protuberance on the back was incised, and the Boer bullet stood revealed.

HAIR CAME OUT IN GREAT COMBFULS

Little Hills of Dandruff Itched Badly on Child's Scalp. Would Burn, Itch and Smart. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

Glen Sutton, Que.—"My daughter's scalp was affected. It would come in bunches on top of her head as big as the end of my finger. The condition was like little hills of dandruff which itched very badly; she would scratch till her scalp would bleed. Then it would burn and smart. Her hair would be all dishevelled together with a white powder-like substance. Her hair did not grow well and was very thin. It came out in great combfuls every time she combed it.

"I put on the Cuticura Ointment at night and in the morning would wash it with warm water and Cuticura Soap. She is completely cured.

"My married daughter was troubled with a breaking out on her head. When she would get heated up it would prick just like pins. I used Cuticura Ointment on her head, then washed it in the morning with the Cuticura Soap and they cured it." (Signed) Mrs. A. H. Allen, July 11, 1914.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Prices said not to have been equalled for cash wheat, especially at this time of the year, since the Franco-Prussian war in 1870, were reached today on 'change.

Domestic millers were the chief buyers of the cash wheat that was largely left in Chicago. Exporters were said to have continued to buy large amounts at the seaboard. But 500,000 bushels was the greatest total known. Meanwhile speculative values here swept higher, and although unsettled at the finish, were 1½c to 2½c above last night. Corn closed unchanged to 1-16c up, oats ⅛c to ⅜c up, and provisions dearer by 7½c to 10c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 5.—The wheat market at the opening was wild, and the excitement continued for some time following. May wheat opened from $1.33 to $1.34½, and advanced fractionally later, showing nervousness the most part of the day. The contributing causes of the advance were the continued export trade and higher Liverpool cables.

The European visible supply shows a decrease of 7,364,000 bushels, which was also a factor.

In exporting circles the opinion is freely expressed that a large volume of [illegible]

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 6.—Export business in Manitoba spring wheat was good today, there being a fair demand from overseas buyers at an advance in prices of 1c to 2c per quarter, with sales of No. 1 northern to London at 154s 3d and No. 2 northern at 153s 3d. No. 3 northern was sold to Liverpool at 152s, all January-February shipment. All the offers made by exporters for wheat were accepted, and the latter would have preferred the wheat, but exporters would not accept them, owing to the further advance in the Winnipeg market, and 2/6 asking is 2d per quarter more tonight. A much stronger feeling developed in the local market for oats today, and prices advanced 1½c per bushel, with an improved demand from local and country buyers. English importers wanted spring wheat flour, but owing to the scarcity of ocean freight to some parts the volume of business was checked some. Cables were stronger and sales of export patents were made at 27/ per sack and choice export at 26/ 6d. The local and country trade in flour is still quiet and prices show no change, but the undertone of the market is strong. The demand for millfeed is fair at firm prices. Butter is fairly active and firm, while cheese is quiet, and the demand for eggs is good.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 5.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.23½; No. 1 northern, $1.23; No. 2 do., $1.20½ to $1.20½; May, $1.24 to $1.20.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

OPENING SESSION OF THE PETERBORO' POULTRY SHOW

Was Held in the Market Hall Last Night—Demonstration by Miss Yates of the Ontario Agricultural College—Lecture Will Be Given To-night - Over 1000 Entries

The annual exhibition of the Peterborough Poultry Association made its debut in the Market Hall last evening. Fair weather and an appreciative audience combined to make a success of the initial efforts of the directors to make this one of the best shoows of its kind ever held in Peterborough despite the conditions through which the community is passing in common with the Empire At one time it was thought advisable to dispense with a show this year, but the more optimistic of the directorate manifested the courage of their convictions by declaring that as this community had always shown a practical interest in the efforts of the Association it would be unwise to dispense with what has come to be known as an indispensible institution in the form of the annual show of the Peterborough Poultry Association. That this course was more than justified is apparent from the large number of entrants that have been recorded to date, representing some of the best known exhibitors throughout the Province of Ontario. The aggregate number of entries is well over a thousand. This is a gratifying showing considering that six years ago the Association recorded only six hundred entries. One of the reasons for this expansion is attributable to a capable and efficient directorate, coupled with active and consistent co-operation on the part of those engaged in the poultry industry through out this part of the country.

An Instructive Demonstration.

A feature of last night's meeting was the educative address on "Killing and Prepaging Fowl for Market," which was provided by Miss M. Yates of the Ontario Agricultural College. Miss Yates selected as her subject for this demonstration a well-developed Plymouth Rock rooster. The maturity of the bird was apparent by the budding spurs which the demonstrator observed was sufficient to disqualify the feathered biped for table use. Many who were in the hall must have wondered if Miss Yates realized the vast quantity of fowl that passes through the same building each week, some of which are decorated with spurs that would beat a cavalry officer. The bird that formed the subject of Miss Yates' demonstration was dispatched by the simple and bloodless operation of dislocating the neck. It was then plucked and prepared for market.

Lecture This Evening.

Miss Yates was introduced by Mr. J. J. Cunningham, who took occasion to comment upon the efforts that had been put forth by the Association, also Miss Yates' ability as an expert on matters pertaining to the poultry industry. This is her fifth appearance in Peterborough so that she is no stranger to the poultry fanciers of this district. She will lecture again this afternoon and evening, when it is hoped that a large number will avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing one of the best authorities on poultry in Ontario.

Belleville, Napanee, Orillia, Lindsay, Galt, Cannington, Cobourg and Port Hope are represented in the list of entrants. The judges are James Bennet of Toronto and J. H. Minshall of Brantford.

The splendid display of over 30 silver cups gold pieces, prize medals, etc., gives an indication of the growth and development of the Association. The exhibition has created considerable attention and there will undoubtedly be an influx of visitors at the different sessions.

French Launch Another Move Against St. Mihiel

Assault on Position on Banks of the Meuse May Be Opening of a Strong Movement Northwest to Cut Off German Forces in the North

LONDON, Jan. 6.—On the western battle front the French official communique last night records the capture of a quarry at the crossing to St. Mihiel, the first progress made in that section of the front for several weeks. It was at this point the Germans took a stand four months ago, and so far they had defied all attempts to dislodge them. It remains to be determined whether Gen. Joffre massed large forces at this point for the operation, whether a general advance will be made up the Meuse, and whether the present progress in Alsace is really a feint to weaken the German lines, stretching like a snake across northern France, so as to give the French room for progress into Belgium along the Meuse, a process which if completed with rapidity with a strong force, would compel the Germans on the Belgian coast and in Brussels to beat a hasty retreat, or run the danger of being cut off from Germany and compelled to surrender.

It became evident that the French operations in Alsace were alarming the German General Staff, for reports were allowed to filter through, telling of a large German concentration in Alsace to resist the French advance.

Gen. Joffre told the Alsatians that the French had come there to stay, and this speech would tend further to make the Germans believe in the imminence of a French invasion of Germany by way of the upper Rhine. The dispositions of the enemy to meet this supposed advance may have led to the weakening of the lines where the natural defence seemed strongest, and thus give Joffre room for a vigorous drive thrqugh mid-Belgium. It is to destroy the German armies that Gen. Joffre is primarily aiming at, then Alsace-Lorraine, the country along the Rhine, lies at his feet and the invasion of Germany will be an easy matter.

In the other parts of the battlefield, despite the frightfully bad weather, the allies are prompt to seize any advantage to press themselves forward and are continuing the process of wearing down the enemy.

[illegible] from the French War Office were as follows:—

"Last night our troops took possession of a quarry situated at the crossing of the road from Mouvrois to St. Mihiel, and that from Maizey to St. Mihiel, and also some neighboring trenches.

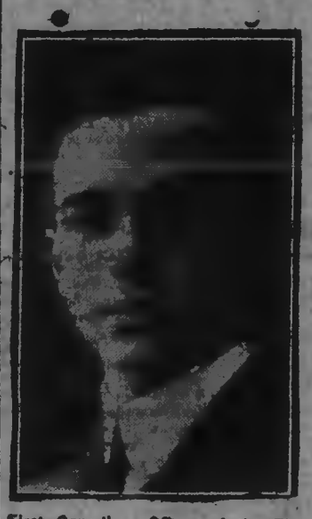
"There is no other operation to report. The weather continues to be very bad, with incessant rain.

"In Belgium, in spite of the condition of the ground and the difficulties which result, our infantry made progress in the sand dunes in front of Nieuport. In the region of St. Georges our men advanced at different places, 200, 300 and 500 yards, occupying houses and some trenches. At several points the Belgian artillery reduced to silence the artillery of the Germans.

"From the Lys to the Oise, in the region of Notre Dame De Lorette, to the west of Lens, we were successful, thanks to our mortars and our hand grenades, in completely stopping the sapping labors of the enemy. In the vicinity of the Lille highway the Germans blew up one of our trenches and then took possession of it, but an immediate counter-attack again put us in possession of it.

"From the Oise to the Vosges no infantry activity has been reported. In the region of Craonne and in the vicinity of Rheims there have been artillery engagements. Our batteries effectively bombarded the positions of the enemy in the town of La Suippe, as well as in the region of Perthes, and in the vicinity of Beausejour. There was similar activity in the Argonne and on the heights of the Meuse.

"In Alsace, to the southeast of the Col (Mount) Du Bonhomme, we have entered the hamlet of Creux D'Argent, two kilometres west of Orbey, where we are organizing our position. The gains realized by us on the road from Thann to Cernay have been maintained at a distance one kilometre to the east of Old Thann. Furthermore the fire of our heavy artillery at a point two kilometres east of Purnhaupt le Haut silenced the artillery of the enemy."



First Canadian Officer of the First Canadian Contingent to meet death—Captain Lester Ingles, Chaplain of the Queen's Regiment, son of Ven. Archdeacon Ingles, who died at Salisbury after a few weeks' illness with spinal meningitis. He was twenty-eight years old.

Guarantee Is Not Enough

British Officials Fear Transfer of Contraband at Sea

LONDON, Jan. 6. — Although the Foreign Office regards with high favor the American Government's plan of certifying cargoes loaded under the direction of officials of the Treasury Department and destined for European ports, it was said yesterday that Britain cannot accept such certification as an absolute guaranty of the nature of the cargo in case any cause for suspicion arises after a vessel leaves America. In other words, the right of search cannot be waived, because of the possibility of shifting cargoes at sea and the impossibility of holding the Treasury officer who issues the certificate accompany the ships to her destination to guard against smugglers who may carry copper or other contraband on small ships to be transferred at sea.

The waiving of the right to search of ships bearing contraband cargoes, in the opinion of several prominent British officials, would be an invitation for smugglers to ply their trade, whereas the retention of the right would tend to prevent dishonesty.

This position is precisely the same as that taken by the Foreign Office concerning the certification of manifests of American cargoes by British consuls at American ports.

The Government is constantly in communication with representatives of Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Holland. It is reported that all of the nations are to take steps to revise their lists of prohibited exports so that they will correspond with the British contraband list, thus making possible a resumption of shipping to neutral European countries from America so as to avoid delay or the danger of seizure.

The only thing some women lay up for a rainy day is silk hosiery.

TURKS ILL-EQUIPPED.

Defeated Army Conducted Battle Against Heavy Drawbacks.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Petrograd says:

"Accounts received here of the Turkish defeat at Sari Kamysh say that the Turks displayed great bravery when their position was seriously threatened, and made frequent desperate bayonet sorties. When they were compelled to evacate they made valiant but futile efforts to cover their retreat by a rearguard action, even the wounded continuing firing from the ground when they were struck down.

"According to a telegram from Tiflis, the persistence with which the Turks pressed their attack in the Sari Kamysh district was due to their purpose to enable their troops in the Ardahan region to retire without heavy losses. Their operations were conducted under tremendous difficulties. They lacked proper equipment and had no transport trains. Everything had to be carried on the backs of soldiers or of civilians commandeered for the purpose. Most of the trophies of war captured by the Russians were of German make.

"Northwards of Kars, the Turkish force at Ardahan is also threatened with disaster. The enemy in his disorderly flight has been almost surrounded by the Russians, who hold the main roads. The Turks frantically are striving to find an outlet, but have to face passes deep in snow. The Russians have attacked Ardahan on two sides, their artillery playing a prominent part."

MERCIER A PRISONER.

Cardinal Arrested for Pastoral Letter Issued to Belgians.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 6. — (Via London.)—A despatch received by The Tijd from Rosendaal says that Cardinal Mercier, Primate of Belgium and Archbishop of Malines, has been arrested by the German authorities and held a prisoner in his own archiepiscopal palace at Malines under a military guard.

The report, which has not been confirmed, says the cardinal's arrest was the result of a pastoral letter issued by him and read in the churches of Belgium on Sunday. In this letter the cardinal is said to have referred to the occupation of Belgium as follows:

"This power has no legal authority and consequently you owe it in your heart neither allegiance nor obedience. The only legal authority in Belgium is that appertaining to the king, his Government and the representatives of the nation."

Prize Court Detains Ship.

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—The Norwegian steamer Sandejord, which was seized by a British cruiser and has been held at Halifax on suspicion of containing contraband, has been detained for the prize court to decide whether it is contraband or not. The difficulty there is in searching steamers at the present day is shown by the fact that the steamer has been held at Halifax now for a month. The cargo had to be all unloaded and then reloaded. The Sandejord sailed from New York with an American cargo and was bound for Norway.

Wants To Get Even.

AYLMER, Jan. 6.—Geo. Swadling, president of the local Sons of England lodge, heard yesterday that his brother had been killed in action, and has left for London to enlist in the hope of, as he put it, "getting back" at the Germans.

Did Not Pass Through U. S. Territory.

WOULD SUMMON THE CHURCHES

Council, Headed by the Pope, Would End War, Says Campbell

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A striking proposal is put forward in The Christian Commonwealth this week by Rev. R. J. Campbell, with the object of putting an end to the war. He suggests that a general council of the Christian Churches of the world be summoned to discuss the war. Mr. Campbell writes: "Who is to summon such a council? There is only one person who could with any chance of success, and perhaps he would not dream of attempting it. I mean the Roman pontiff. The Archbishop of Canterbury could not do it. Rome would not listen. The Metropolitan of the Eastern Church, or the largest portion of it, could not do it. Rome holds the key of the situation. Let her try and the Protestants will think better of her than has been the case for nearly 400 years, and there is precedent for it. Is it generally known that the Protestants were summoned to the Council of Trent in the sixteenth century? They did not come, but they were invited. Had they come who knows but what the scandal of a divided Christendom might have been averted."

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hinn, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

DR. MORRISON REFERS TO GORDON CHARGES

Retiring Chairman of the Board of Education Discusses Blinds and Insurance--Members Express Regret at His Departure From the Board.

Dr. Morrison and Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., of the 1914 Board of Education, severed their connections with the Board at the last regular meeting of that body last night.

Expressed Regrets.

Mr. Hill in referring to Dr. Morrison, said the Board was indeed sorry to lose him. Dr. Morrison had been with the Board nine years and for the past year chairman. During the nine years he had the honour of seeing the Collegiate Institute and King Edward, King George and Queen Mary Public schools built and they were a fitting tribute to his faithful service to the city.

As to Mr. Turner, who had been on the Board only two years, Mr. Hill said few men had been of more service in the time. He had been faithful and his advice was always valuable.

Regarding New Members.

Dr. Morrison in his farewell remarks congratulated the old members returned at the last election. He regretted that Mr. Turner, who has been so active and faithful, had not been able to make the harbour. However, he and Mr. Turner would have the pleasure of looking on at the work of the Board.

As regards the new members elected to the Board, Dr. Morrison said Mr. Denne was successful in his own business and should make a good man on the Board of Education.

Reply to Gordon.

As to Mr. Gordon, the other new member, Dr. Morrison said he would like to make a little explanation. Not wishing notoriety he had hesitated in rushing into print in reply to certain charges by Mr. Gordon.

He drew attention to Mr. Gordon's letter of Monday, Dec. 31, in which he said vague statements regarding supplies, etc., were made, to which he (Dr. Morrison) replied by a letter through the papers also.

Regarding Tenders.

Mr. Gordon had come back with another letter and stated that certain things were not bought by the Board by tender. Dr. Morrison went on to say that the Supervision committee, having charge of the buying for the Collegiate Institute and Public schools, had been most careful. In fact a few years ago they had found the prices so high here that the contract for supplies was let to a Toronto firm, and resulted in a saving of hundreds of dollars.

$27.00 on Blinds.

If Mr. Gordon, while delving in the minute book and vouchers of the Board which were always open to any ratepayer, had been desirous, he could have found that when the Property committee called for tenders on the fittings for the new schools, they wrote to the different dealers instead of advertising in the papers in the usual way. Mr. Fair wrote the Board, offering blinds at an advance of five per cent on wholesale price. He stipulated that the contract should be closed at once if the offer was to be accepted. The blinds were up to specifications and the invoices and freight bills presented for the consideration of the Board in the usual way. Mr. Fair received the great profit of $27.00 on the transaction. He did not believe any dealer was supplying the School Board or anybody else at a loss.

Insurance By Tender.

It was the first time Dr. Morrison had heard of insurance being let by tender. He was under the impression all old live companies had a set tariff. The Board had always placed the insurance with reliable companies regardless of who the agent happened to be.

Dr. Morrison appreciated the assistance the Board had given him during his year as chairman. He regretted in some respects leaving the Board. His association with it had always been pleasant. The only thanks he wanted for his services and all he expected was the satisfaction that he had done his duty. He hoped Peterborough would prosper and build more schools.

Dispatch of Board.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., said he had sat but two years on the Board and thought he was only getting into the work. He had profited a great deal by the dispatch, dignity and system in which the work was done by the Board. He believed it might open the eyes of the new members to see the decorum and dispatch with which the business was done there.

BOARD DISCUSSES THE QUESTION OF ACCOMMODATION

Mr. Gordon's Suggestion of More Publicity in Regard to Meetings is Raison d'etre of Some Interesting Remarks

The matter of future accommodation for the Board of Education, was discussed at the last regular meeting of the 1914 Board last night. When the estimates for expenditure for the coming year were being passed, Mr. Crane took occasion to inquire if any arrangement had been made by the Finance committee for extra expenditure for vault accommodation, furniture, etc., which it had been suggested should be provided for the Board. He remarked that it seemed to be the slogan of this election, and if it was the wish of the people he believed it should be provided.

Collegiate Auditorium.

Dr. Burnham suggested that the Collegiate auditorium might be used if new methods were to be introduced. As to vault accommodation he did not know how that was to be arranged if the Collegiate were used.

Mr. Crane thought the matter could be left with the Property committee to report, but it was pointed out by Mr. Hill that the personnel of the new Property committee would hardly be the same when appointed on Thursday evening.

Keep Down Expenses.

Mr. Eastwood said that notwithstanding any criticism, he thought the Board was justified in keeping down the expenses as much as possible and if they followed this they would come out on top.

SAD DEATH OF ELGIN C. MEYERS

The many friends of Mr. Elgin C. Meyers, formerly private secretary to Hon. J. R. Stratton, will regret to learn that he suicided by shooting at Penticton, B.C., on Sunday last. The late Mr. Meyers had a number of friends in Peterborough when he came for pleasure and business. He was a great sufferer from stomach trouble, and had a number of operations, but without securing much relief. He went west in the hope of bettering his health, but unfortunately it did not have the desired result. There is no doubt but that his continued illness preyed on him to such an extent as to cause his rash act.

HALF WORLD'S JEWS IN THE WAR ZONE

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 4.—"Responsibility for preserving Jewish customs and ideals now rests almost wholly with the American Jews," declared Mr. Louis D. Brandeis, of Boston, here, on Sunday. Mr. Brandeis, chairman of the provisional committee for general Zionist affairs, delivered two addresses on Sunday before the Knights of Zion, whose eighteenth annual convention closed on Sunday night.

"The people of Israel are now suffering the greatest calamity since 1492, when 300,000 Jews were driven out of Spain," he said. "Half the entire Jewish population of the world is in the zone of the European war."

Two obligations now devolve upon the Jews of America, Mr. Brandeis said. To give quickly and generously to the aid of the war sufferers and to live up to the highest ideals of American democracy.

"To be a good American you must be a good Jew," he declared, "and to be a good Jew you must be a Zionist."

Women Vote Same As Men

Citizen Claims Toronto and Peterborough Results Show This

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—In your Saturday editorial, "Women in Civic Politics," you say: "If all the women in Toronto on Friday had had the vote they couldn't have abused the right as much as 6,000 male electors did." If women can be trusted to use good judgment in voting for a competent candidate, may I ask why were not the votes of franchised women in Toronto cast against Tommy Church? There were enough women voters to keep him out of office.

In the Saturday Examiner there appeared a letter from a woman referring to Mayor Buller's "backdown on the Women's Council," and mildly hinting that it would be remembered against him in the recent election. What was the result? Mayor Buller is four votes lacking in his majority of a year ago. And yet there are enough franchised women in Peterborough who, by their votes, could have turned the election against him had they wished.

It seems, Mr. Editor, that women vote much the same as men do, Grit, Tory or not at all.—Yours, etc.,

CITIZEN.

The War Does Not Quiet the Woman's Franchise Demand

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 6.— Some people said that the war would kill all such movements as votes for women. This opinion was based not on the assumption that women's suffrage would become less popular, but that there would be no interest in the subject owing to the interest arising from the war. These predictions, as far as Ontario is concerned and as far as one specific branch of the Woman's Suffrage question is concerned, have not been fulfilled. The votes taken in a number of Ontario towns this week favouring the extension of the Municipal Franchise to married women if they were otherwise qualified, is most significant. The plebiscites were carried in all the place they were submitted including Strathroy, Guelph, Thamesville, Orangeville, Clinton, Bracebridge and North Bay. These results simply confirm the vote recorded in Toronto last year when, on the same question, 26,226 votes were polled in favour, against only 12,575. Requests for this legislation have also come to the government from a large number of places throughout the Province.

The municipal franchise for married women, otherwise qualified, is one of the planks in the Liberal platform and Mr. Rowell's view is expressed thus:

"With the possible single exception of Tax Reform, we have not had in recent years, a greater demand presented to this House in favour of any legislation than the demand in favour of this proposal."

It is interesting to note in connection with the majorities in favour of this measure recorded this week, that it is only a few weeks ago that Premier Hearst aroused the resentment of a deputation of women who had come to see him asking for this very reform, but who found that Mr. Hearst had suddenly left for Ottawa and was not there to receive them. It looks as if the new administration is going to be as hostile as the old to this reform, which, as repeated votes are showing, is one of the popular issues of the day.

INSANITARY METHODS OF MILK PRODUCTION, ETC.

fag of his milk with that of an indifferent neighbour.

You are asked for better sanitary conditions. Many farmers say to us "we are doing better than we ever did and yet you continue to find fault." We can remember when milk could be left in the can from night to morning and apparently it went to the factory in good condition. Then they used to milk in the open; now you find most farmers milking in stables. Clean, sanitary conditions are for the purpose of preventing the planting of the seeds in milk which bring about fermentation. The time has come for greater action and less talk, and I appeal to the farmers of this country who are doing their part and appeal to their neighbours to have them do their part.

What Cooling Does.

Cooling milk or cream simply retards the action of any organisms there may be in the milk. The quicker the cooling is accomplished the less growth of these organisms. The more unsanitary conditions under which milk is produced the greater the need for rapid cooling.

The Indifferent Dairyman.

You see one man with a supply of ice for cooling his milk, with covered stands, etc. The next man leaves his cans beside the road under most careless conditions.

Voice — Merely trusting to Providence.

Another member—Does the man who takes care of his milk get more money than the careless man?

Mr. Publow—No, and that is the reason why there should be a strong demand that every producer take the greatest care of milk.

Mr. Publow urged clean, wholesome surroundings not only to secure good quality of milk, but to make the work more attractive to the farmer's family.

"I like to milk cows," he said, "but I want the surroundings clean and sanitary and such as would meet the approval of my wife or daughter."

Surely if it is worth while expending money on herds, crops and all that goes to produce milk, surely then the farmer should do all in his power to protect the quality of the product."

Question—What would be the result of putting a can of poor milk into the factory vat.

Mr. Publow—It would be better to throw it into the whey. The quantity of cheese might not be injured by this can of milk in the vat, but the cheese produced would go wrong sooner. We would lose in both quality and quantity of cheese. A sounder milk enables the maker to produce a more palatable cheese; it cannot be made from unsound milk. And this milk will go on indefinitely unless we can secure some method to bring about a practical scheme to have all the milk produced under the best conditions and to put an end to the indifferent producer handling his milk under indifferent methods to the injury of the careful producers. Nothing will bring more money to patrons that I know of if this can be secured.

A Suggested Remedy.

To a query, Mr. Publow replied that separating good from indifferent milk would scarcely be practical. However, he suggested that patrons of factories might decide that the cheese maker should not accept any milk under a specific temperature.

Every year we will have warm weather, but it is in July and August that we have the most difficulty. It may be any month of summer. In September of this year we made more poor cheese than we did all summer, because it was the hottest month. I say we should have uniform methods of handling and cooling; we should demand better milk from the careless producer.

Mr. Ward— Is milk received anywhere in this country on the basis of temperature?

Mr. Publow—Yes, in three factories they have set the temperature at 75 degrees.

Mr. Ward—Don't you think that is a little high?

Another members—Better than 90, anyway. (Laughter)

Mr. Ward—I find best results where milk was cooled to 70 deg.

Mr. Publow emphasized the possibility of increased gain by this idea of securing uniform conditions. It took 13 1-2 lbs. of milk in some factories this year to make one pound of cheese. He pointed out that a better quality of milk means better cheese, which will be more pleasing to consumers and thereby increase the demand. In every respect the farmer will be the gainer, especially the man who is doing everything to protect the milk and to whom there should be a full measure of reward for his efforts and not that he be held down by the careless producer.

Cheese Demand Growing.

Next year there will be more cheese produced than ever; the demand will surely be greater and the quality must be improved if the farmers are to get the best returns. All I plead for, he said, was that the careless men be brought up to the carefulness of the best farmers. You don't need to expend another cent, but carelessness must be shut down upon. Otherwise there is no use of having government officials tramping up and down the country talking along these lines. You must have action.

Speaking of creameries Mr. Publow said the butter of Eastern Ontario is not enough to export to foreign market with the hope of gain. Why first thing you know Alberta and Saskatchewan will have more butter than they can use, and they will be in on you here.

All of the men in the business are not of that stamp that they do their best just for the sake of doing it. Pay your men good wages. Cheese makers are like the rest of us. There are indifferent makers, just as there are indifferent milk producers.

An Accomplishment.

Mr. Geo. Leggett of eNwboro—I had more difficulty twenty years ago in one factory than in twenty-seven during the past year. I handled 30,000 cheese and had no difficulty. And that has been brought about by the work of Mr. Publow and the inspectors.

In conclusion, Mr. Publow stated that future attention must be directed at the second grade cheese which must be improved and raised to the first grade.

G. A. Gillespie—What about the separating on the farmers?

Mr. Publow—Why not have patrons send in samples from time to see if they are skimming as close as possible. We are finding that the percentage of fat is decreasing slightly. This year we found a number of herds that had been graded up and they registered under 3 p.c. butter fat. Several I know of showed only 2.6. Test your cows and find out what they are.

Need of Milking Machines.

Mr. Geo. H. Barr—We cannot get best from our herds until we get a milking machine that will give the utmost satisfaction. Then you will have a mechanical milker that will be of real assistance to farmers who now cannot afford a staff of workers. Just as long as we will pay the man who makes tainted milk the same price per hundred pounds that we pay the men more who do better work. A creamery business will not advance in this country. You've got to pay the men wmore who do better work. A can of tainted or greasy milk will spoil a vat of milk, and the worse it is the more disastrous the effect on the cheese it makes. The quality of the cheese will not be high from that milk in spite of the efforts of the maker to work it up.

Separater Question.

Mr. Gillespie—I believe 75 p.c. of the separators are not running as they should. I do not refer to any particular separator. What is your opinion?

Mr. Publow—One of the greatest weaknesses with [illegible] is their operation of speed. Sometimes, too, they are not kept clean enough.

Mr. Gillespie—I find the great difficulty is that machines vibrate as the result of weak bearings. Mr. Publow said a speedometer on a separator would be a great help to the farmer in regulating its speed, and considered that manufacturers should attempt to provide something to meet this need.

Senator Derbyshire remarked that special attention should be paid to the talk on the poor can of milk.

Milk For the City.

Speaking of milk for city consumption, Mr. Publow said the time would come when all milk would have to be pasteurized. It would keep longer after this treatment and was therefore more desirable.

Panic In The Subway

Thousands of Lives Were Endangered In New York This Morning

Special Cable to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—One woman is dead, thirteen other people are in very serious condition, and 700 are suffering from after effects of shock and smoke asphyxiation, as a result of the worst transportation accident in New York history to-day. In addition thousands of persons were so unnerved from fright that they required medical attention.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Thousands of lives were endangered, and it is feared some lives have been lost, in the worst disaster in the history of New York's subway to-day. For hours the entire system was stalled, and long trains filled to point of suffocation with passengers en route to their work were tied up between stations. At one part of the line they were in total darkness. On the section of the road between 95th Street and 14th Street many persons were rendered unconscious from smoke, and as a result of a blow out and subsequent fire at 58rd Street, many passengers were burned. The passengers were unable to get out of the cars and walk owing to the darkness and the danger of electrocution from the third rail. The heat in the crowded cars became unbearable. Many women fainted when the rumour was passed through that the tunnel was on fire and all way out off from escape.

MORE TRAVELLERS ON THE ROAD

There has been a decided increase during the past few days in the number of travelling men in and around the city. The agents at the G.T.R. and C.P.R. stations have had more applications for commercial tickets in the last couple of days than for some time previous.

The "Knights of the Grip" are evidently not discouraged over the dull prospects. To see so many salesmen active again augurs well for business in the year 1915.

On the Road.

"Has he reformed?"

"Not exactly. He is just flirting with consistency."

SELECTION OF THE CABINET

Will Be Undertaken by Mayor Buller on Monday Next—Ald. Green May Head the Board of Works

On Monday next His Worship Mayor Buller will be called upon to select his cabinet for 1915. At present it is composed of seven committees consisting of the Board of Works, Fire, Water and Light, Manufacturers, Finance, Property, Legal, and Power Committees.

Ald. Green has been named as a likely chairman for the Board of Works, while his able partner, Ald. Burns, may take over the Fire, Water and Light Committee. Both Aldermen Johnston and Stratton are aspirants for the Chairmanship of the Finance Committee. Ald. Johnston has been Chairman of that Committee since last summer, following the resignation of Ald. Anderson who went over to the Public Utilities Department. Many are of the opinion that Ald. Johnston should pilot the destinies of the Power Committee, and that as many of the old members as are in the Council should be retained. The most important phase of the Hydro-electric scheme remains to be settled, namely the completion of the expropriation proceedings. Ald. Johnston has been Chairman of the Power Committee for the past two years, and it is claimed that he is more familiar with the inner workings of the Hydro-question than any other member of the Council Board. That forms the chief argument for retaining Ald. Johnston, alias "Hydro Bill" on that all-important committee. There is no doubt but the Peterborough Light and Power Company will put up a stiff fight when the expropriation proceedings are staged. Therefore, it is claimed that Ald. Johnston's presence as head of that Committee will add considerable weight to the City's side of the case. It is hardly likely, in event of his appointment as Chairman of the Power Committee, Ald. Johnston will care to retain the chairmanship of the Finance Committee, as he has done for some months past. The work would be too much for one man. Ald. Stratton is looked upon as an eligible candidate for the position of Chairman of the Finance Committee. He has been engaged in business for a great many years, and the experience gained as a result should fit him for the position.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

FOOTBALL CONTROVERSY IS STILL A GREAT QUESTION

International Game May Be Abandoned—Footballers' Battalion is Spoken of—Scottish League Results

The following are results of games played in Scotland on Monday:

SCOTTISH LEAGUE.

Rangers 0, Airdrieonians 5.
Celtic 2, Kilmarnock 0.
Ayr 2, Hibernians 1.
Morton 1, Falkirk 0.
Hearts 3, Hamilton 0.

F. A. PREVAILS.

The Football Association, says the Athletic News, have not yielded to a campaign organised by a number of newspapers who openly avow that they have no sympathy with professional clubs either in peace or war, and they have not been influenced by prejudiced persons who have torn passion to tatters in an inconsistent and unscrupulous attack on the poor man's pastime.

As the Bishop of Birmingham (Dr. Russell Wakefield) has recently said:

We have rather a habit of making scapegoats, and a certain part of our press leads itself rather too readily to cranes and to panics. At any rate, let them be quite clear, and if it be true that the football ground is the place which stops recruiting, then let the football ground be closed. But in Birmingham the bulk of the people who had been at football matches had been either people who had been already recruited or people who were working for the Government at the present time, and without which work our soldiers would not be properly equipped.

AS YOU WERE.

This is going to be a funny football season! Evidently it is going to be a football season, in spite of the tremendous efforts which are being made to hamper and even stop the game by various suggestions which include the conscripting of players, the commandeering of grounds whether they are wanted or not, and the taxation of receipts—what there is of them! Also evidently the season is going to be funny, not exactly in the humorous sense, though the players are gradually coming to be amused at the descriptions of arm-chair warriors, who use such moderate terms as "hirelings," "renegades," "loafers," and so on in an endeavour to persuade (!) the professionals to recruit. The funny part lies in the fact that, although we are approaching the holiday season, we are very much in the position of the gentleman in the ancient song who "Dunno where 'e are."

NO NATIONALS.

In the international records of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales the year 1915 will be marked by the historic statement, "No watch owing to European War." Never before has any soccer international been abandoned for any reason, and thus the decision arrived at by the representatives of the four nations is momentous. While abandoning the national games, the national representatives affirmed their belief that recruiting is more likely to be assisted by the continuance of football than by the stoppage of the people's game. It is quite on the cards that the Scottish and English Leagues will follow the example set and abandon the game fixed for Glasgow in March.

FOOTBALLERS' BATTALION.

For some little time a London Footballers' Battalion of Kitchener's army has been under discussion. A mass meeting of the officials and players of the London clubs was held. Many inspiring speeches were delivered which had the desired effect. At the close of the meeting over forty players, chiefly belonging to Clapton Orient, Croydon Common and Watford enlisted. The battalion was given a great send-off, and before the week is ended the number of players who have taken the "King's shilling" will be greatly augmented.

CHELSEA PAY HALF.

It is stated the directors of Chelsea are offering their players very generous terms if they enlist. Each player joining the colours will be paid half his football wages till the end of the war, and if at any time he can get off to assist the club he will be paid full wages. His life will be insured for £100, this sum to be paid to the next of kin in the event of the player being killed.

Arrangements have been made to quarter the battalion at Richmond, on the ground of the Athletic Club there, so that the probability is that any player enlisting would be allowed to assist his club on Saturday's till the end of the present season, and in that case they would not suffer financially.

Indeed, they would gain considerably, as in addition to their football wages they would get military pay, and free quarters, so that from a monetary point of view they would be much better off than at present, and in the event of football stopping at the end of April till the war is over—a not unlikely event—they would score, as they would be drawing half pay as long as hostilities lasted.

15,000 ENLIST.

It is no exaggeration to say that quite 15,000 of the regular habitues of Stamford Bridge have enlisted, as the average attendance at League matches this season has fallen over 20,000. No doubt many of them were reservists and territorials, but the number that enlisted in the new army must be very great.

What is true of Chelsea is equally true of the other London clubs. As a matter of fact, nearly 400 recruits have been enlisted on the ground of Millwall F. C.

It is to be hoped the sponsors of the new battalion will see their scheme crowned with success, and that they will be enabled to recruit several battalions for the great work that is before the nation ere the might of Germany is broken.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Albert Shepherd, the whildom Newcastle United centre forward, was in great shooting form for Bradford City against West Bromwich Albion. He scored three of the five goals by which the Albion were beaten at Valley Parade.

Frank Buckley of Bradford City, has joined the new Footballers' Battalion. He had previous military experience as a sergeant-instructor in the Second Battalion, King's Liverpool Regiment.

BELLEVILLE TEAM WILL PLAY HERE ON FRIDAY

The Peterborough Intermediates will endeavour to make up for their defeat at Picton on Friday night, when they tackle Lawson Whitehead's Belleville team at Brock St. Rink. Judging by Belleville's showeing at Picton ther is not much to choose between the Bay of Quinte team and the Petes, and the latter will have to step to town all the way on Friday night to head them off. With one loss already registered against them the Petes cannot afford to drop many more games, and they can be counted upon to give Belleville a battle royal on Friday. The homesters will have their strongest line-up of the season on against Belleville, and the clash with the old-time rivals should be full of interest all the way. The biggest crowd of the season will see the engagement.

PETES WERE BEATEN 3 TO 0 AT PICTON

Last Intermediate Battle to the Group Leaders Last Night --Picton Scored a Goal in Each of the Three Periods

The Peterborough Intermediates returned at noon to-day from Picton, where they were beaten 3 to 0 last night. The absence of Park from the forward line, coupled with the small ice surface are the reasons assigned for their defeat at the hands of the Canning Town team. The Petes had opportunities to score but could not find the nets. A Picton despatch says:

PICTON, Ont., Jan. 5—The O.H.A. game here to-night between Peterborough and Picton Intermediates resulted in a win for Picton by the score of 3 to 0. The home team scored one goal in each period, while Capt. Hunter's Peterborough bunch could not find the nets for a counter. The game was fast, with close checking and back-checking the features. It was very clean hockey. Janes, in the Peterborough goal, had a very busy sixty minutes, the Picton forwards raining the shots at him, especially in the second period, while Scott's duties were comparatively light. Lou Marsh of Toronto made an excellent referee. The line-up:

HOCKEY GOSSIP

Park's scoring ability was missed in last night's game at Picton.

Picton has a clean sheet in the district race so far with three wins. But it's a long way to Tipperary in a six-club group race and the Petes should bethere or thereabouts at the finish.

Ray Rose, centre of last year's juniors, was thrown into last night's game at Picton, without a practice with the team, and gave a good account of himself under the circumstances.

The local Junior O. H. A. team will practice at Brock Street Rink to-night in preparation for the game at Cobourg to-morrow night. All junior players are asked to be on hand this evening for the practice and to pack their outfits. The team will leave for Cobourg on the 11.40 G.T.R. train.

The Port Hope view of Referee Tackaberry's work in Monday's game coincides in every particular with the Examiner's opinion of that gentleman. The Port Hope Guide says:

W. M. Tackaberry, of Toronto, acted as referee and Mr. Hewitt will confer a favour if he keeps him in Toronto in future. He was quite impartial, but he has not the faintest idea of handling players.

FAMILY HISTORY.

Miss Curley kept a private school and one morning was interviewing a new pupil.

"What does your father do to earn his living?" the teacher asked the little girl.

"Please, ma'am," was the prompt reply, "he doesn't live with us. My mother supports me."

"Well, then," asked the teacher, "how does your mother earn her living?"

"Why," replied the little girl in an artless manner, "she gets paid for staying away from father."

FREAKS IN BASEBALL.

Apparently Clever Plays May Sometimes Be Pure Luck.

Freak plays make baseball humorous, if not interesting. Some of these plays are said to be the result of quick thinking; but, as a matter of fact, most of them are simply luck.

Curious things happen. A ball fall into a tin can, and, it being impossible to get it out in time, can and all were thrown to the baseman. Another ball hit the end of a nail driven through the opposite side of a fence and could not be got down until all the runners scored.

A swift hit glances off the pitcher's hand, is snapped up by an infielder and thrown to first, putting the man out.

Red hot liners or grounders sometimes hit the first or third base bag and glance away for singles or even two baggers.

The shortest two bagger known was when the ball grazed the bat, shot up a few feet and fell in front of the plate. As the catcher reached for the twirling ball it glanced from his glove and bounded back to the stand, and the batter made second easily.

A center fielder saw a hit in the way of the shortstop and walked about sixty feet in to move it out of the way when he heard the crack of the bat and saw a hot ball coming straight at him. He could do nothing but try to catch it and did to his surprise. But he was given credit by the crowd for being a great student of batters.—Arthur Macdonald in American Physical Education Review.

Corpuscles in Normal Blood.

Normally there are approximately 5,000,000 red blood corpuscles in the cubic millimeter. The number is temporarily diminished during fatigue and after the ingestion of much fluid. Fasting and profuse sweating increase the number of red blood cells by concentrating the blood. In high altitudes the number is also increased. There are 5,000 to 10,000 white cells in the cubic millimeter, the ratio of white to red cells being about 1 to 500. In health the blood amounts to about one-thirteenth of the body weight.

Two Speeds in Same Wheel.

The top of a carriage wheel in passing along the road moves more quickly through the atmosphere than the bottom. This sounds absolutely foolish, but it is absolutely sound. It is due to the movable axis, or axle. The top of the wheel has forward motion plus forward revolution. The bottom of the wheel has the same forward motion minus backward revolution.—London Saturday Review.

Mastery.

A man must challenge the world at its own games and win before he can show the world that there are finer games to play. He cannot stand above the mists and call the crowd to him, but many will follow him up through the mists.

"Fifty-fifty."

Eloquence Unchecked.

"Our friend makes exceedingly effervescing speeches," said the cautious campaigner.

"I know it," replied Senator Sorghum. "Aren't you afraid he'll prove a rival for leadership in our party?"

"No. Just let him go ahead making speeches while I devote my attention to the real business."—Washington Star.

Difficult Children.

Said his father to Jonathan Slafin:
"My lad, you're as wild as an Injun.
Really, you ain't, John,
What I'd call a saint, John.
And I think that you're in for a swingin'!"

Said her mother to Little Miss Chumley:
"You color your hair rather bumly.
Do it more blondily.
Daughter Chelmondeley,
Don't streak it and freak it so rumly!"
—New York Sun.

She Was Surprised.

"I've got something I want to tell you. You haven't heard about the shocking Billinger tragedy, have you?"

"Yes. I've heard about it at least four times. You're late."

"That's funny. It was told at the club for the first time, and everybody there promised not to repeat it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Of Course.

"You know that people feather nests," said Tommy Smith.

"That here's a question for you, Ma, What with?"

"That question is a simple one," Quoth Jimmy Brown.
"What do folks use to feather nests?
Cash, sure."

LEAVES TRENCHES TO WED.

French Soldier Returns After Ceremony To His Post.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The first marriage under fire has just occurred near Arras. At midday the bridegroom, Private Lemoir, emerged from the trenches, scraped the mud off his clothing washed up and marched with a couple of his soldier comrades to the City Hall, where he met the bride, a Parisian dressmaker, who had journey thither by special permit.

Shells fell thick in the village during the ceremony and the subsequent Mass.

After the wedding breakfast Lemoir shouldered his rifle and returned to the trenches. The bride proceeded to Paris.

A COMPLAINT FROM A RECRUIT

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—It is about time something was done to waken up someone in authority. I, with a half-dozen other men, some who came in by train from outside points, who wanted to enlist in the Cavalry, went up to the Armouries and sat around all morning, went back in the afternoon, and sat around all afternoon, and did the same in the evening. We were then told that as the head medical man was not there we could not be examined.

This is a great way to have things done. The other fellows were so disgusted that I don't suppose they will go again. I should think that if the head medical man is so busy that he cannot attend to his military duties that he ought to get out and let someone less do it. This is no time to fool with a thing like this.

We are told that the country needs us, and surely some one can be found who will think enough about his country to attend to getting men willing to defend her.

I suppose the medical officer is being paid for his services, the same as other officers.

Yours truly,
Recruit.

WEDDING BELLS

HONE—McCOMB.
The wedding of Miss Helen Kathleen McComb, one of Trenton's prettiest and most popular young ladies, to Arthur D. Hone, B.A., science master of Peterborough Collegiate Institute, took place at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Lydia Pettingill. The bride, very becomingly gowned and looking sweet and girlish, was given away by her brother, Dr. R. A. McComb, of South River. The bride was supported by Miss Doris Whittier, and the bridegroom by H. S. Hayes, B.A., a college chum. Among those present from outside points were: Dr. and Mrs. R. A. McComb, of South River; Mr. Thornton McComb, of Calgary; Mr. Garratt Pettingill, superintendent of the Saskatoon-Winnipeg electric railway, and wife. Marconigrams were exchanged with a brother, Capt. H. A. McComb, now at Salisbury Plain.

Canada's Buffalo Herd.
The largest herd of buffaloes in the world is now owned by Canada, says a writer in Canada. They form a most picturesque group as they roam over the new national reserve set apart for them near Wainwright, one of the growing towns on the Grand Trunk Pacific, 125 miles east of Edmonton. It is only within the last year that Canada has wrested from the United States the honor of having the most representative herd of this distinctively North American animal, which is rapidly disappearing. The Dominion government recognized the need of action if the bison were to be preserved and before Washington had realized it had purchased practically the entire herd of 600 or 700 from Michael Pablo of Montana, who had carefully gathered them together and protected them on his great ranch near Ravalli.

Music Loving Spiders.
It has been asserted that spiders possess a sensitiveness to musical sounds. Some species seem to respond to the notes of the piano, the harp, the flute, and so on, in a manner suggestive of their ability to recognize these sounds or the harmonic vibrations on which they are based. But Professor Lecaillon of Paris, who has made a special study of the instincts and the supposed "psychism" of spiders, thinks that the apparent sensitiveness of these insects to music has been misunderstood. It is thought that when musical instruments are played near their nests the spiders simply feel the vibrations through their webs or otherwise without recognizing the musical notes as sounds. The effect upon them is similar to that of the buzzing of an entrapped fly.—Harper's Weekly.

Ancient Mirrors.
A French investigator has lately interested the French Academy of Sciences in his researches concerning the glass mirrors which were used in ancient times in Egypt and in Thrace. They were backed with a highly polished metal, the nature of which has been in question. It has now been ascertained that the metal was almost pure lead, and it is believed that the method of manufacture was to pour the molten lead on the concave surface of disks cut from balloons of blown glass. In consequence of their shape the mirrors minimized the images of objects looked at in them.

Limestone Wool.
Wool not the product of sheep is being utilized abroad for the making of men's clothing. This is known as "limestone wool" and is made in an electric furnace. Powdered limestone mixed with certain chemicals is thrown into the furnace, and after passing through a furious air blast it is tossed out as fluffy white wool. When it comes from the furnace the wool is dyed and made into lengths like cloth. A pair of trousers or a coat made of this material cannot, it is claimed, be stained or damaged by grease and is as flexible as cloth made of sheep's wool.

Medical Men.
"What a little frail looking man your family doctor is!"
"He may appear so, but he really is a man of powerful foe seek."—Baltimore American.

Nearly 100 Recruits Have Been Passed

Peterborough Will Have a Good Representation in the Third Contingent

A steady stream of recruits at the offices in the Armouries indicate that Peterborough will have another splendid representation in the Third Canadian Overseas Contingent. Already nearly 100 men have been passed by the doctors and sworn in, and there are others on the waiting lists to be examined. The 2nd Prince of Wales Dragoons have accepted about sixty men for the Mounted Rifles, while the 57th Regiment, which has already sent over 200 men to the front in the two previous contingents, has accepted over thirty recruits for the third, and the recruits are coming in rapidly.

During the recruiting for the other contingents, many men were rejected on account of bad teeth. A little dental work was all that was needed, but the majority of the men could not afford to pay for the operation, and as a result the owners of the offending molars were turned down. This time, however, thanks to a patriotic offer from local dentists, this difficulty has been overcome. On an order from the Militia authorities, the dentists repair the bad teeth at a nominal fee, which is deducted from the recruit's pay, and no cash payment is needed. This already resulted in a number of men being accepted who would otherwise have been rejected.

Lieutenants Ross Cameron and W. Eastwood, of the 57th Regiment, have volunteered for service overseas, and expect to be attached to the Third Contingent.

Mr. Harry Rogers, son of Mr. B. B. Rogers, has applied for a commission in the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons for service with the Mounted Rifles now being organized.

LIVE LEECHES IN CITY WATER

Mr. D. Hennessey left at the Examiner office, where it may be seen, a vial of city water containing two leeches, which came from the kitchen tap of his residence, 21 Cricket Place. The leeches, which are about two inches long when extended, seem to be lively. It is not likely that they are of a dangerous character. The water main from which they were drawn is what is known as a "dead end." It is probable that the leeches passed into the mains through the filter when they were small. While not a pleasant addition to water they are far less dangerous as living bodies, than would be dead organic matter. It does not seem possible to employ filters fine enough to exclude them from the mains, but a screen that can be screwed on the tip of the tap will exclude them. Many persons would shudder at living leeches in water, who take kindly to a liquid that generates reptiles much more dangerous—"snakes."

Struck Two Russian Mines

Former German Cruiser Goeben Was Seriously Damaged

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 6.—A special despatch to The National Tidende from Constantinople says the former German cruiser Goeben, which now flies the Turkish flag, struck two Russian mines in the neighbourhood of the Bosphorus and was seriously damaged. She has two big holes on her waterline, and it will take two or three months to repair her.

This fact, the despatch adds, has been kept secret from the people of Constantinople.

London (via wireless from Berlin), Jan. 6—A report from Constantinople says two Turkish cruisers ran into a Russian squadron of seventeen units and escaped without suffering any damage.

Occupy Towns on the Best Route to Transylvania From the East —Siege Warfare is Being Carried on in Galicia.

FIGHTING AT MLAWA

LONDON, Jan. 6. — The Russian forces in Bukowina have taken possession of a series of towns which command what is described in tonight's official statement from the headquarters of Grand Duke Nicholas as "the best and most direct route to Transylvania by way of Bukowina." This reference of Transylvania, which is the first that has come from official sources, is regarded here as highly significant, indicating evidently the intention of the Grand Duke to send an army of invasion into Hungary's most Slavonic province. The statement does not give official confirmation to the private reports from many sources announcing that such an invasion actually has begun. It gives merely a list of the places on the Bukowina-Transylvania border that the Russians have captured during the recent operations.

The Russian statement says that "the usual cannonading and rifle fire" are proceeding on the battle front in Poland west of Warsaw. Minor battles are reported near the confluence of the Baura and Bawka Rivers, but it is clear that the great German onslaught in the direction of the capital has been abandoned, temporarily at least, because of the new developments in Galicia and Bukowina. In the former province the Russian statement says there is no change in the situation, and despatches from Berlin to-night indicate that a condition of siege warfare has arisen on the Nida River to the east of Cracow, where the artillery of both the Austrians and the Russians has sufficed to prevent progress by either army until a change in the weather makes infantry operations possible.

The North Poland fighting area is mentioned to-night by the Russian headquarters for the first time in some days. The Russian front is now located east of Mlawa and west of Prasnys, the Germans holding the former town. Both places were taken by the enemy during General von Francois' offensive several weeks ago, and both were regained by the Russians when the Germans retreated. Mlawa again fell into the enemy's hands when they resumed the offensive. The Russian statement to-night says that a force of Germans occupied a village between Mlawa and Prasnys was "almost entirely bayoneted" by the Russians in a surprise attack.

PROBING THE DISASTER IN THE SUBWAY

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Directing his force of assistants in the probe of the greatest disaster in the history of the New York subway, District Attorney Perkins to-day pledged himself to make the guilty pay the fullest penalty if criminal negligence can be proved.

Perkins planned to summon more than 100 witnesses to-day. Most of these were smoke victims in yesterday's subway horror who recovered sufficiently from suffocation to leave the hospitals to-day. Others were officials and employees of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. operating the subway system. These charges the district attorney's office was prepared to probe to the bottom, that the insulation on the cables which started the fire was eight years old, that the subway guards locked the doors when the insulation caught fire and refused to permit the passengers to leave until they were half suffocated, that more than an hour elapsed between the time the short circuiting of cables was reported to the offices of the subway corporation, and the time the first fire alarm was turned in, and that the cables short circuited were "overloaded."

PARIS OUT OF WAR ZONE.

Bakers are now to be Allowed to Produce Fancy Bread.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The military situation is now so satisfactory that the Government has begun gradually to relax the rigors of the war regime for Parisians.

By decree, Alexandre Millerand, Minister of War, has declared that the entrenched camp of Paris, with the exception of the district of Pontoise, is no longer included in the zone of operations, and Louis J. Malvy, Minister of the Interior, now permits bakers to make fancy bread, a practice forbidden since Aug. 7.

BERLIN CLAIMS

German Statement Denies That the French Have Made Substantial Gains in Alsace

A BERLIN OFFICIAL

BERLIN, Jan. 7, via wireless.—Although it is admitted at military headquarters that the fighting in Alsace continues, a flat denial is made of the French allegations of substantial gains. There has been only minor fighting during the last few days along the Vistula and Polish Rivers. The Russians have attempted advances but they have been more in the nature of "a feeling out" movement than of an active aggressive attempt to take the German positions. For the most part it is stated the fighting is now only a long range artillery duel.

Brother of Local Man is Killed at Ypres

Mr. Joseph Newhouse Receives the Sad News

Mr. Joseph Newhouse of this City has received the sad news that his youngest brother, Fred Newhouse, had been killed while fighting at the front, on October 11th, during the first day of the Battle of Ypres. The late Mr. Newhouse was a reservist in the Cheshire Regiment and responded to the call of his country the day after war was declared. He was sent with his regiment to Ireland and thence to the north of France.

In Several Battles.

The Cheshires were at Rheims, River of Aisne, and Marne. At Mons, they went into battle 1,146 strong, and only 178 returned.

At the War Office Mr. Newhouse is only reported as missing, but a chum who was at his side and was returned to England wounded, told the family of seeing him killed. The Regiment was quartered in a farm house and the Germans surrounded it, almost annihilating them. According to his chum Mr. Newhouse was shot through the head.

Nepews at Front.

Mr. Joseph Newhouse has two nephews at the front. One is Sidney Christie, a reservist, who left Calgary to join his Regiment, also the Cheshires, upon the outbreak of war. He has been wounded, but recovered, and is again at the front. Another is with Kitchener's Army.

Trades Are Busy.

In a letter of another brother of the late Mr. Newhouse to Mr. Joseph Newhouse of this City, from Birkenhead, comes the report that all trades are busy there, especially shipbuilding and shipping. Over 10,000 men at Laird's Shipyard, Birkenhead, are working night and day, and Sunday, the same as any other day. Things are quite normal, only for the war, and to use the words of the writer, "Soldiers are drilling here, in the Park, since August. Big guns are placed on Bidston Hill and trenches all around Wirral, with barbed wire fences. German prisoners are housed in Morpeth dock sheds, and the people here in this little Island are worked up to fever pitch. The war is terrible; the wounded are everywhere, the hospitals are full and private houses full. Most of the large houses in Claughton are occupied by soldiers in training, wounded, or Belgian refugees."

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A fleet of forty-motor ambulances, 4 officers' cars, 5 motor trucks, and 10 motorcycles has been presented to King George for the use of the army by the Maharajah Scindia of Gwalior.

The cars, after the presentation at Buckingham Palace, were reviewed by the King, Queen, the Princess Mary and Prince Henry. The King then sent a personal telegram of thanks to the Indian potentate.

SAFETY FIRST FOR HUNGARY

Dual Monarchy Doomed And Hungarians Desire to Remain An Independent State

BUDAPEST IN PANIC

LONDON, Jan. 6.— In view of reports of the early entrance of Roumania into the war, special significance is attached to the following despatch from the Chronicle's Milan correspondent:

"Russian hosts are making rapid strides in Austria's eastern province of Bukowina, where they have encountered but faint-hearted resistance. The well-informed Roumanian correspondent of "Il Secolo" at Rosenthal, says the invaders are sweeping down along the Roumanian borderland, where their patrols, composed of Roumanians belonging to Russian Bessarabia, are to be found chatting amicably with the Roumanian army sentries at the frontier villages.

Had Historic Cities.

"The Russians are in possession of Suczawa and Kimpoling, two cities redolent of historic memories for the Roumanian people, and both within a few miles of the Roumanian frontier. The Russian infantry and artillery regiments entered the former place on Sunday. The bulk of the population fled to Bardujevo, in Roumanian territory, but 1,000 other famished refugees huddled together in the country districts awaiting trains to transport them to Roumania. Large convoys of prisoners are being continually marched through the town.

Trying to Save Hungary.

Muscovite hosts are preparing to burst into the Austrian polyglot province of Transylvania, south westward from Bokowina, and yesterday were pointing upon Dornawatra, Markani and Jakopay in Bokowina, near the Transylvania border. The Journal Epoca, conducted by M. Filipesco, an ex-Minister, learns that Budapest is in a veritable state of consternation. Hungarian politicians, deeming the fate of the dual monarchy sealed, are straining every nerve to save Hungary as an independent state.

"Germany, they say, "has dragged us into a game which she herself is unable to play."

Egged Austria On.

It cannot, however, be forgotten at this juncture that the Hungarian element played a considerable part in egging on Austria to brutal measures against Servia. It is rumoured that at the urgent appeal of Vienna Germany has sent half a dozen army corps in hot haste from Poland to try to stop the Russian incursion into Transylvania.

MR. TORRANCE IS APPOINTED

The announcement was made yesterday by the White Star-Dominion line that it has been decided to merge the management of their Portland and Montreal offices, with Mr. John Torrance as manager, and Mr. P. V. G. Mitchell as assistant manager, the appointments becoming effective January 1st, 1915. This reorganization follows the death of their late manager, Mr. James Thom.

Mr. John Torrance is a son of the late John Torrance, who was widely known in Montreal as general agent of the Dominion line from its inception until his retirement in December, 1906. The present Mr. John Torrance was formerly associated with his father in the Montreal general agency until he was appointed general agent for the company at Portland, Me., in 1902. He is a brother of Rev. Dr. Torrance, formerly of Peterborough.

VALUE OF COW TESTING IN DEVELOPING A DAIRY HERD

An Unquestionable Example Presented by C. F. Whitley at the Wednesday Afternoon Session of the Dairymen's Convention—Reasons Why Every Farmer Should Know the Milk Producers of His Herd.

ROTATION OF CROPS, TOO

If we may assume that cow testing is of some value to dairymen, we may hope to find some evidences of progress. A hasty sketch of two or three results may, therefore, be of interest.

One evidence of recent progress in cow testing is the marked increase of interest taken in it by the average dairy farmer, interest real and widespread. Requests for information on the subject and for record forms come by almost every mail from all provinces. One demand for a further supply contains this typical statement: "I would not like to stop weighing; it is a surprising check on the feeding and working condition of the individual cow." That man weighs every milking.

A second evidence is the decided influence cow testing has had on general public sentiment. Occasional discussions on it are overheard amongst non-dairymen in public places, frequently with this commentary, "What a simple and sensible proposition." It is not regarded as a freakish experiment, indeed cow testing has proved itself a vital necessity to the progress of the true dairyman. Invisibly banded and corded together as such good men are now, the time seems almost ripe for a membership badge or a club button as a distinguishing mark of honour for these leaders, real benefactors of their communities.

Then the solid and substantial improvements made on dairy farms belonging to this progress club of cow testers constitute even to the most casual observer a third strong evidence.

Where do you note the abundant forage crop, the improved stables, the windmills, the new silo, etc., etc.? On the very farms whose owners use milk records. Local tradesmen and machinery agents have that fact sized up, and to those particular farms stream through the local dealers the labour-saving implements, the good piano, the new dresses, the inside plumbing and lighting systems for the deserving partners in the home. Cow testing helps along "business as usual"; it rests not there, but always in the van of progress issues a summons to every devotee for "better business than ever."

Turning now to the personal equation we find in the large crop of benefit reaped by the farmer himself a fourth evidence in such improvement made in the ordinary dairy herd that registers on the luminous dial of progress not merely present gain, but a morecast of future greatness. We find, for example, that the standard of production is being steadily advanced, men now talk freely of 7,000 and 8,000 pounds of milk as a herd average, and that type of owner aims even higher, while the type formerly content with 4,000 pounds per cow has mounted a few solid rungs up the ladder of progress. We find also amongst our cow testing members dairy herds with less indiscriminate mixing of grades of three or more breeds, herds where the proportion of low testing cows is decreasing, and herds that are of far more even production (where the lowest yield any one month is 730 pounds of milk and 23 pounds of fat) because dairy records have helped in selection.

So the educational features of this movement are of decided importance. For the knowledge obtained and the study induced by keeping records weigh down heavily the scales of self-development of the farmer and his family, while the opportunities now being embraced of introducing this subject through schools and short courses must be laden with large and valuable freight for the dairymen of to-morrow.

It means to any herd owner far greater efficiency than he now has, because while one score that counts is "more milk," the bull's eye aim is "more economical production by each cow in the herd." The successful shot on this target is dependent not only on a strong faith in the permanence of the dairy industry, but also on having a thoroughly reliable and up-to-date equipment of cows busy behind each manger. In that aim cow testing has abundantly proved itself, wherever intelligently used, an indispensable range finder.

While we entertain unbounded admiration for the good dairy cow as an economical producer of delicious food for mankind from the coarsest of feed, yet we can only stand aghast at the large room there is for general improvement. Taking a survey of 600 herds in our five eastern provinces, I contrasted the best cow in each herd with a poor one, the lowest yield but one, and obtained this result: Valuing fat at 30 cents a pound and allowing $35 as the average cost of feed, each one of the best cows gave as much profit above that feed cost as was made by fifteen cows of the poorest type. This comparison of 1,200 representative cows surely points out one great want, a better supervision and direction of willing, but at present quite erratic, cow energy is urgently needed on many a farm to-day; with 15 to 1 the odds are altogether too unequal. In this great cow game, duly indexed on fateful cards, what hand do you hold? Have you four dairy queens, a royal flush, or some mean little two spots?

It is the outstanding privilege, more the bounden duty of every dairyman, to move the pointer on his own pressure gauge of efficiency. Cow testing is good insurance against losses, and builds a solid concrete dam against the deceptive leaks caused by those poor cows that dribble only a meagre 125 or 130 pounds of fat in a season. We need to replace that too costly kind, that deciduous cow shedding her leaves too early in the fall by the economical almost evergreen type that in an honest season's work cheerfully gives 280 or 300 pounds of fat. To weigh and sample is but a trifle, a matter of only half a minute; from that tiny seed act climbs the sturdy plant of knowledge up the trellis of your perseverance and intelligence, finding full fruition in cows that pay well.

Do you say it is too niggling a job? May I venture to remind you that lack of detail is the sombre headline in many historical chapters of failure. The master of detail is a precise, punctual man, a sure winner. The small detail of weighing is well worth looking after. Your cow dairymen big or little, will tell this message, "It pays."

It is desired to lay emphasis on testing as well as weighing, because it becomes daily of more importance. You may have noticed that since that the value of Ontario butter has increased by one and a half millions of dollars, while the value of cheese made in Ontario has decreased by a similar sum. Then to every dairyman, but especially to a creamery patron, but it is a matter of some moment whether a cow tests 3.4 or 4.5; whether she falls perhaps 10 or 15 pounds of fat in a month below the yield of a stable mate on the same feed. How would we know of these good grade cows, cows giving 60, 70 and 80 pounds of fat per month, if we did not have dairy records? The modern slogan "safety first" may well be heeded by the modern dairyman; to him it is translated perhaps better by quality first," that is, such cow quality is, on the indisputable evidence of dairy records, produces abundant milk and fat at moderate cost.

CHART.

This chart gives as a diagram the comparative yield in boxes of butter of three types of cows. The first, selected, both fed and bred for production, is a five-year-old grade, that gave 11,630 pounds of milk, 450 pounds of butter worth $135; with feed cost of $55, her clear profit is $80. Such cows and better ones have been discovered through cow testing. Her owner was not content with an ordinary type, an average cow, for satisfaction of that kind effectually kills and buries all progress; so he selected, using records as a rational basis. The second is the average yield of 8,300 cows as collected by our recorders at 13 dairy record centres in Ontario, Quebec, and Prince Edward Island, namely 306 pounds of butter worth $1.80, feed cost $35, profit $26.80. This is probably much better than the average yield of all cows in the Dominion. The third is the type unmasked by cow testing, desired by no one. In this case it is not just one lone individual cow, but is the average yield of a herd of ten cows in Ontario, 80 pounds of butter worth $24, and the owner estimated it cost $30 to feed each cow.

Does this comparison not convey something to you? Is it not worth a very great deal to you to look carefully into this matter of cow testing, to think in larger figures to determine that your herd shall speedily be one of selected individuals? The best in everything is yet ahead of us; the best cow is yet to be recorded, helped on by the best in methods, the best in crops, the best in dairy farming generally so that our dairy herds, uniformly excellent, may be of the finest type possible, always improving. Join this society of unlimited possibilities, become a member to-day, start recording at once.

Cow testing has always sounded one dominant note, the selection, on their records, of the best cows. The recommendation is timely in view of the claim that there is an investment by dairymen of from $800 to $1,000 or more for every gallon of milk produced per day. Thus the efficiency of every cow is no slight consideration in our huge business of milk manufacture. For every hundred dollars invested in the manufacturing

But even in the murk Anse Havey's eyes shone clear and insistent, and held her gaze with an almost uncanny fascination. It was difficult to remember all the villainies of which she believed him guilty when she could actually see him, for the face was that of a strong, fighting philosopher, who acts swiftly and surely, but who thinks even more swiftly and surely. As she looked at him she told herself that she hated him the more for his hypnotic eyes—they gave him much of his evil power over men.

Then as if coming from a long dream Mrs. McNash lifted her gaze, and for the first time appeared to realize that her son and his companion had entered the place.

The dead blankness left her pupils and into them leaped a hateful fire. Her voice came in shrill and high-pitched questioning: "Wall, Jeb, hev ye got him yit?"

The boy only shook his head and glowered at the wall while his mother's voice rose almost to a scream. "Hain't ye a-goin' ter do nothin'? Thar lays yore pap that nuver harmed no man, shot down cold-blooded. Don't ye hear him a-callin' on yer ter settle his blood-score? Air ye skeered? Ther sperit of him thet fathered ye air a-pleadin' with ye from his shroud—an' ye sets still in yore cheer an' twiddles yore thumbs!"

Juanita felt the slender figure in her embrace shudder at the lashing invective that fell from the mother's crazed lips. She saw the boy's face whiten; saw him rise and turn to Bad Anse Havey, half in ferocity, half in pleading.

"Maw's right, Anse," he doggedly declared. "I hain't tarry hyar no longer. He b'longs ter me. . . . I've got ter go out an' kill him. Thar hain't but one thing a-stoppin' me now," he added helplessly. "I don't know who did hit. I hain't got no notion.'"

He stood before the clan chief and the clan chief rose and laid one hand on the shoulder which had begun to tremble. Man and boy looked at each other, eye to eye, then the elder of the two began to speak.

"Jeb, I don't want ye to think I dont' feet for ye, but ye don't know who the feller is, an' ye can't hardly go shootin' promiscuous. Ye've got to bide your time."

"But," interrupted the boy tensely, "you knows. You knows everything hyarabouts. In God's name, Anse, I hain't askin' nothin' out of ye but jest one word. Jest speak one name, thet's all I needs."

The mother had dropped back into her stupor again and her son stood there, his broganed feet wide apart and his whole body rigid and taut with passion.

Anse Havey once more shook his head.

"No, Jeb," he said quietly, "I don't know neither—not yet. The McBriars acted on suspicion — an' they killed the wrong man. Ye ain't seekin' to do likewise, be ye? Ye ain't quite twenty-one, Jeb, an' I'm the head of the family. I reckon ye'd better take counsel of me, boy. I ain't bent on deludin' ye an' ye can trust me. Ye've got to give me your hand, Jeb, that until we're plumb, everlastin'ly sartain who got your pa, ye wont' raise your gun against any man. I want ye to give me your solemn pledge on that."

The boy sank down into his chair and bowed his head in his hands while his finger nails bit into his temples. Even Juanita Holland had felt the effect of Havey's wonderfully quieting voice and personality. Finally Jeb McNash raised his face.

"An' will ye give me yore hand, Anse Havey, thet if ye finds hit out afore I do, ye'll tell me thet man's name?"

"I ain't never turned my back on a kinsman yet, Jeb," Anse gravely reminded him.

The boy nodded his acquiescence and hurriedly left the room. Juanita gently lifted Dawn's head from her lap and went forward to the hearth.

She had listened in silence, outraged at this callous talk and this private usurpation of powers of life and death. Now it seemed to her that to remain longer silent would be almost to become an accomplice. Something in her grew rigid. She saw the bent and lethargic figure of the bereaved wife and the stark, sheeted body of the feud's last victim. Before her stood the man more than anyone else responsible for such conditions.

"Mr. Havey," she said as her voice grew coldly purposeful, with the ring of challenge, "I have been told that you did not mean to let me stay here; that you did not intend to give thes poor children the chance to grow straight and decent." She paused because so much was struggling indignantly for utterance that she found the ordering of her words very difficult. And as she paused she heard him inquire in an ironically quiet voice, "Who told ye that?"

"Never mind who told me. I haven't come here to answer your questions. I came to these feud-cursed hills to fight conditions for which you stand as sponsor and patron saint. I came here to try to give the children release from ignorance—because ignorance makes them easy tools and dupes for murder lords—like you."

Again her tumult of spirit halted her and she heard Dawn sobbing with grief and fright on the bed.

"Are ye through?" inquired Anse Havey. His voice had the flinty quiet of cruelly repressed passion, and his face whitened, but he had not moved.

"No, I'm not through," she went on with rising vehemence. "I came here seeking to interfere with no man's affairs . . . wishing only to give your people, without price, what they are entitled to . . . the light that all the rest of the world enjoys. I found the community bound hand and foot in slavery to two men of a like stripe. I found their hirelings murdering each other from ambush. I'm only a woman, but I carry the credentials of decency and civilization. You two have everything else—everything except decency and civilization. . . . You and Milt McBriar!"

He had listened while the muscles of his jaws stood out in cramped tensity and the veins began to cord themselves on his temples. Now he said in a low voice between his teeth: "By God, don't liken me to Milt McBriar," McBriar."

The girl laughed, a little hysterically and wildly, then swept on.

"I do liken you to Milt McBriar. What in God's name is the difference between you? He kills your vassals and you kill his. Both of you do it by the proxy of hirelings and from ambuscade. In this house a man lies dead—dead for no quarrel of his own, but because of your quarrel with Milt McBriar. But it seems that's not enough. You must enlist the son of the dead man into a life that will have the same end for him. . . . You bind him apprentice to your merciless code of murder." Her hands were clenched and her eyes burning with her tempest of rage. When she stopped speaking the man inquired once again: "Are ye through now?" But Juanita swept both hands out and added:

"You have taken the boy — very well. I mean to take the girl. I shall try to undo in her and in her children the evil you will do her brother. I shall try to give the family one unblighted branch. Unless you kill me I shall stay here and fight. I'll fight you and your enemy, McBriar, alike because you are only two sides of the same coin. . . . I'll try to take the ground out from under your feet and leave you no standing room outside a State's prison. . . . Dawn shall learn the things that will, some day, set this country free."

Mrs. McNash was looking up vaguely, but her thoughts were still far away, and this outpouring of speech near at hand meant little to her.

Juanita as she finished her wild peroration fell suddenly to trembling. Her strength seemed to have gone out with her words. Her knees, now that the effort was made, seemed too weak to support her, and for the first time in her life, as she looked into the face of Anse Havey, a face ominously blanched with rage, hurt pride and bitterness, she was physically afraid of a man.

His eyes seemed to pierce her with the stabs of rapiers and in his quiet self-repression was something very ominous. For a moment he did not permit himself to speak, then he thrust a chair forward and said in a level and toneless sort of voice: "If ye're all through now, mebby ye'd better sit down. Such eloquence as that's liable ter tire ye out right smartly."

The girl made no move to take the chair, and Anse Havey came one step forward and pointed to it. This time his voice came quick and sharp like the crack of a mule whip. "Sit down I tell ye! I've got just a few words ter say my own self."

CHAPTER XIV.

Dawn drew back on the quilted feather bed, her fingers twisting about one another in an excess of nervous disquiet. Never before had she heard any one, man or woman, venture a word of rebellion or defiance to Bad Anse Havey. It had not occurred to her that there was in the world a person bold enough to do so. The mountain child felt almost as if she were a prize being fought for; fought for bitterly by two people whom she held in that high awe accorded to deities.

For a few moments Bad Anse Havey said nothing more and the Eastern girl dropped almost limply into the chair which he had pushed forward, while he, himself, paced the narrow length of the room, pausing once to gaze down at the rigid body of the dead man. At last he came and took his place squarely before her by the hearth with both hands thrust deep into his coat pockets. A long black lock fell over his forehead and he impatiently shook it back.

"Dawn," he said finally, "I wish ye'd go to the door an' tell one of them fellers out there not ter let no one come in till I'm through."

"So you mean to keep me prisoner here while you attempt to intimidate me?" inquired the elder girl a little scornfully. "I suppose I might have expected that. It doesn't frighten me, however."

"Wait a minute, Dawn!" countermanded Havey, still speaking in a low and unexcited voice. "Is there any person out thar, ma'am, ye'd like to have come in? I 'lowed that in here, whar we both come to try ter help friends in affliction, ye'd know nothin' couldn't harm ye."

Juanita's cheeks betrayed her annoyance with a deep flush. She had meant to be bitterly ironical; and this barbarian had parried her thrust with a dignity greater than her own. "Please go on," she said. "I've already told you that I'm not yet terrorized."

"In the first place," he began in his deliberate voice, "ye've said some things thet I doubt not ye believe to be true, but they're 'most all on 'em lies." He flung back his head and looked squarely down at her, his eyes narrow and snapping, but with his voice pitched to a low cadence.

"Ye've said things that, since ye're a woman, I ain't got any way of answerin'. I listened to all them things an' I didn't interrupt ye. The only thing I asks of ye, is thet now ye hearken to what I want to say."

"Go on. I'm listening with humble attention."

"Ye've called me a murderer an' a hirer of murderers. That's no lie. I've never killed no man thet didn't have his face t'ords me, nor one that wasn't armed. I've never hired any man killed.

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough
Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of the most pleasant and effective remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes so gently and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending any persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Before He Became Famous as the Author of Dr. Chase's Receipt Book.

Here is a letter from an aged gentleman who consulted Dr. Chase, long before his Receipt Book attained a world-wide circulation or his family medicines became known to the ends of the earth.

MR. O. D. BARNES.

Like most people of advanced years his kidneys were the first organs to break down and when doctors failed to help him he remembered the physician who cured him of pleurisy in his younger days.

Mr. O. D. Barnes, R.F.D. 1, Byron, Mich., writes:—"About fifty years ago, when living in Ann Arbor, Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author, was called on to treat me for pleurisy. Ever since that I have used and recommended Dr. Chase's Medicines, and have two of his Receipt Books in the house.

"Some time ago a cold settled in the kidneys, causing backache, frequent urination, dizziness, and affected the eyesight. My appetite failed and I could not sleep nights. Two doctors failed to do me any lasting good, so I started using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. The results have been highly satisfactory to me. Appetite improved, I gained in weight, sleep and rest well, and feel strong and well. My kidneys resumed their natural functions, and I believe that my cure was due to Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. I am 78 years old, superintend work on my farm, and can turn in and do some work myself."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Prophecy

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Margaret and I met in Florence. We were both of an artistic makeup, and there is nothing more pleasing than the companionship of one with congenial tastes. We sauntered through the galleries of that artistic city and admired the works of art together.

Then, too, there is something unifying to kindred spirits in being thrown together in a foreign country. America to Americans on the other side of the Atlantic ocean seems so far. The customs of those countries are so different from ours. They seem so old; we so new. It is this that draws Americans abroad together who would live for years next door to each other and never form an acquaintance.

These meetings between fellow countrymen of opposite sex frequently end in love affairs, and such was the case with Margaret and me. But my suit was not successful. Whether this was due to Margaret or the influences brought to bear upon her I did not know. At any rate, I returned to my home, leaving my heart in Florence, and I realized that I would never get it back again.

On my voyage home the stateroom opposite me was occupied by a young man who had gone abroad for his health and, having failed in his quest, was coming back to die. There was no one on board whose business it was to minister to him, and the duty fell to me. I became very much attached to him, and he seemed grateful for my attentions. More than that, he seemed to love me as a brother.

I told him of my disappointment, and he seemed to be regretful for me. He tried to comfort me by telling me that he had a feeling deep down in his heart that Margaret and I would meet again and that all would be changed. "She loves you," he said. "I know it. When she refused you it was contrary to her inclinations. She will return to America much changed. Her circumstances will be different. Instead of refusing to listen to your suit she will be glad to lean upon you, happy and relieved to be loved by you."

He seemed so earnest, so sure, in what he said that I was greatly surprised. Could it be that to one so near death had been imparted something of that knowledge of future events we are prone to attribute to those who have passed the portal of eternity? The thought occurred, but I did not really believe it.

My friend lingered till we reached the coast. Then he said that if he could be spared through the brief journey that remained to him to his home he would be content to die. I accompanied him and spent with him the few days he lived after being again under his own rooftree. The day he died he was, or seemed to me to be, delirious.

"I see men marching," he said, "hundreds, thousands, millions. They are like fields of wheat. A mowing machine is passing through them, and they are falling just as I have seen the grain fall in the fields of a summer day. People are fleeing before them. Some are peasants; some are gentlefolks; some are without a roof to cover them; some are starving; some are strangers in that land and, being cut off from home and friends, have no one to care for them."

At this point his voice sank to murmurings, and I understood no more.

I had left Italy early in the spring, and when my friend died the leaves had not yet put forth their buds. I was busily engaged, but not so much so as to recover from my disappointment. My mind during the day constantly reverted to she who I felt was my natural mate, and the nights were dreary without her.

Late in July there came like thunderclaps out of a clear sky declarations of war all over Europe. Hundreds of thousands of Americans were stranded there. All, or nearly all, were cut off not only from their homes, but from the wherewithal to meet their necessities. Naturally I thought of Margaret, for I had seen no announcement of her return. I would have filled my pockets with gold and gone to seek her that I might supply her necessities, but I realized that I would be unable to find her and would not likely be able to reach her if I knew where she was. All I knew of her whereabouts was that she had left Italy, for it was not intended when I parted with her to remain there after the spring opened.

Since I could not go to her I waited for her to come to me. Something told me that my lost friend's words would come true. When a steamer bringing Americans from Europe came in I was on the dock and watched eagerly those who came down the gangplank. One day I was at my post as a steamer docked, and as she swung around to back into the pier I caught sight of a pale, haggard girl standing on the deck.

I rushed to the gangplank, but was ordered away. I waited while the throng of sufferers left the ship. My eye was on Margaret, but she did not see me in the crowd on the dock. As she stepped off the gangplank I caught her in my arms. Looking up, she recognized me and broke into tears of joy.

Hers was one of the bitterest of those many bitter tales. Her father had died before the outbreak of the war, and she and her mother had been turned out in the cold with not a hundred francs on which to subsist and return home.

A Weed That Steals Oysters.

A seaweed has invaded the oyster beds of France and carried off 400,000 oysters. It has carried them off bodily, as a thief would do. The minute seeds of this weed float up the English channel in the current of the gulf stream, they settle on oysters in the Breton beds of Morbihan, Quiberon and Belle Isle, and they grow to the size of a duck's egg. They are full of water, but at maturity the water evaporates, and air takes its place. The egg shaped seaweed is then a balloon, and, like a balloon, it lifts its oyster from the bottom and bears it out to sea.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Conditions in Bulgaria.

Bulgaria is said to be approaching the ideal state of latter day social reformers in that it has neither a very poor class nor a very wealthy class. In the towns there are cases of individual want and misconduct, but these cases are few and insignificant. There is no need to make any public provision for the relief of the poor; there is no question of the conflicting interest of workmen and employers; strikes and trade unions are alike unknown.—Argonaut.

ENGLAND MADE GREAT BY KAISER, SAYS BARRIE

SIR JAMES M. BARRIE

In Sir James M. Barrie's play "Der Tag," the chief character, the German Emperor, sleeps and dreams there is no war. He is awakened by the booming of guns. The Spirit of Culture tells him of what has happened to Belgium. "In my dream," he says, "I thought England had grown degenerate and would not fight." To which the Spirit answers: "She fought you where Crecy was, and Agincourt and Waterloo, with all their dead to help her. The dead became quick in their ancient graves, stirred by the tread of the island feet, and they cried out, 'How is England doing?' The living answered the dead upon their bugles with the 'All's well.' England, O Emperor, was grown degenerate, but you have made her great."

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Napoleon's Pantaloons.

According to the biographers of Napoleon, his breeches were always of white cashmere. It often happened that two hours after leaving his chamber the breeches were spotted with ink by reason of the Corsican's habit of wiping his pen on them and of shaking ink all around him. It was a favorite trick of his to strike his pen against the edge of a table, and of course the breeches suffered. Furthermore, it appears that, however the great man dressed in the morning, that was his dress for the whole day, since he would not change his toilet until nightfall. The inside of his boots was lined with white flannel.

POVERTY.

Poverty is unendurable, as I can testify, but nine times out of ten the best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself. In all my acquaintance I never knew a man to be drowned who was worth saving.—James A. Garfield.

HOW AVIATORS HELP

Elaborate Code of Signals Worked Between Artillery and Aircraft

That the close co-operation between aircraft and artillery is one of the most remarkable developments of modern warfare must be admitted by everyone who has followed the progress of the great European conflict. We read of how flying machines, scouting for the enemy's positions, have enabled the artillery to locate batteries and regiments, with the result that the latter have been decimated or forced to retreat by the big opposing guns.

To the layman it may seem a very difficult matter for an aviator at a height of perhaps 3,000 or 4,000 feet to communicate at once to the artillery any discoveries he may have made. The method employed, however, is really simple when properly understood.

As soon as the artillery commander to whose batteries the flying machine is attached has secured his position, he explains to the pilot and observer—presuming the machine is a two-seater—the direction of the enemy and what he wishes to be discovered. The aeroplane at once rises to the necessary height and flies out over the battery to find out the exact position of the enemy's guns. Meanwhile, two large strips of white cloth are laid on the ground to indicate the supposed direction of the enemy.

There are three kinds of observation to be carried out by the aeroplane before the battery can bring its fire to bear on the exact point desired. These are, direction or line of fire, ranging or distance, and calculation as to the point at which shells should be timed to burst. To determine the direction of fire the pilot steers his machine in the form of an elongated ellipse, closely watching the burst of his battery's shells on each outward journey, and signalling the result by means of colored lights or by dropping messages on each return over the battery.

The course of his flight will always be on that side of the battery which is farthest from the sun, in order that his signals will be easily seen. The direction having been satisfactorily reached by these methods, the observer receives a signal from the battery, communicated by strips of white cloth laid in certain combinations on the ground, to observe for range.

He now steers his machine in the form of a figure eight, always turning toward the target, signalling the result in the manner already described.

The timing of the fuse is then observed from the same position, and when this information is obtained and communicated to his battery the observer will fly to a position vertically over the target and watch the general results of the fire, reporting his observations from time to time by flying over the battery and dropping messages.

The code of signals from aeroplane to battery is formed of red, white and green lights in various combinations. As an instance, one white light signifies, "I am over the target," and one red and one green indicate that the range, direction, or timing of the fuse, according to whichever is being observed, is correct. The code of signalling from battery to aircraft is equally interesting; the white strips of cloth already mentioned are roughly arranged in the shape of letters with their heads to the direction of the enemy's lines, each of which conveys a different meaning.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

Toronto, Monday, Jan. 4.—What will the year bring forth? Looking back over the past year we believe that Canada withstood the shock of war well, all things considered. For years we have been a borrowing nation and debts have accumulated to the point where our interest amounts to $12,000,000 a month. Then our expense of borrowed capital dried up over night. Canada quickly adjusted itself to changed conditions, but present strength shows faith in future rather than present development. In a few years the productive forces that we have built up at so great an expense, will make our position secure. The more immediate effect of the war is the slackening in the volume of business, and the outlook for the present year is not a pleasing one. We, however, must expect to suffer along with others as a result of this almost world-wide war. The situation, so far as farm produce is concerned, depends largely on the length of the war. For staple commodities there will be a good market so long as the war lasts. Its close is apt to cause a slump in prices.

"MAD" HEROISM

Young Trumpeter Disobeyed Officer to Save Non-Com's Life

During a retirement I saw a very brave act, writes Private D. Thomas, of the 2nd Staffordshire Regiment. A battery had lost all its gunners, and there were only left a lieutenant, the battery sergeant-major, and a young trumpeter. The lieutenant and the trumpeter escaped to the cover of a wood, but the sergeant-major got hit in the shoulder and leg by a piece of shell, and fell by the side of one of the guns.

The trumpeter said to the lieutenant, "I'm going to fetch my sergeant-major out of the firing line." The officer replied, "No, my lad; it's madness to go out there, under that murderous shell fire." The boy insisted that he was going, so the officer took his horse from him. Then the trumpeter ran to the back of the wood, where the limber horses were under cover. Seizing one, and throwing off the harness, he jumped on its back and galloped through the wood out into the open, where the sergeant-major lay. All the while shells were bursting all round, but he picked up the sergeant-major, put him across his horse, and galloped back with him through the wood to the field hospital.

We all cheered him as he galloped by, and the officer said he would get the V.C.

Second Lieutenant Chas. Shergold — of the Royal Canadian Engineers. He was recently promoted to the rank and was mentioned by Sir John French in despatches for bravery under fire. He received the Military Cross.

Tea in the Trenches

Water sterilization by heat in South Africa was impossible by reason of the lack of fuel on the high veldt. In France, an army surgeon at the front tells the "Hospital," there is abundance of fuel everywhere, and these commanding officers who take a lively interest in hygiene prohibit the consumption by their men of any water except that which has been boiled—that is, by being made into tea. In the trenches this excellent rule may be a counsel of perfection difficult to carry out in its strictest letter. But the fact remains that hitherto the army has been extraordinarily free from water-borne diseases.—The "Westminster Gazette."

One thousand British chauffeurs are at the front.

Germany wanted a place in the sun. Now she finds it rather warm.

Isn't it about time that the Kaiser was running short of iron crosses?

LONDON DIRECTORY LESS.

For First Time New Edition Shows a Shrinkage of Two Ounces.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—For the first time in years a new edition of London's city directory shows a shrinkage. The 1914 directory weighed exactly fifteen pounds. The directory for 1915 has wasted away to 14 pounds 14 ounces. Part of the two-ounce loss is due to the disappearance of German and Austrian firms.

This directory contains the names of business houses, professional men and householders, but the population living in hotels or boarding houses is not mentioned, so that it is difficult to ascertain the shrinkage due to enlistments.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. [illegible], Lumber Inspector, Tamworth Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble, wasted nerve cells.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The pretty little dress illustrated is made of white rep and trimmed with bands of colored embroidery. The construction is very simple, the sleeve cut in one with the body and the fulness merely belted in at the waistline. This dress can be easily laundered, too. In blue or brown linen it would be a little more practical or in checked gingham with bands of plain gingham. The pattern, No. 6,992, comes in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years.

Smocking is very dainty for soft little dresses and has a way of lifting the dress into a certain exclusiveness, probably because many people do not know how to smock and because it must be done by hand. Therefore the cheaper machine made dresses are never smocked; only the nicer qualities of handmade wear. A dress for a girl of eight years had the yoke and the top of the sleeve elaborately smocked, a beading dividing the two, and where the black velvet belt stopped a few inches each side of the centre front the space was filled with smocking. It is quite the thing to do the smocking in thread of a contrasting color, say blue on white, and then to make the little collar and cuffs of blue material to match.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

Moving On Altkirch

Heavy Fighting Reported In Neighborhood Of Alsatian Town

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, Jan. 7.—Heavy fighting has been reported in progress in the vicinity of Altkirch, Alsace to-day. The French made an attack in force on the German lines on the hills west of the city, and were reported to have made slight gains.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—There is general fighting all along the French front from the Belgium line to the vicinity of Altkirch, and from announcements given out by the War Office, the allied forces are more than holding their own. Nowhere are any reverses reported.

In Flanders the Germans are striving desperately to prevent further gains by the allies. They are bombarding the French positions with their heaviest available field artillery. King Albert of Belgium is personally directing the return fire of the allied artillery.

The cannonading is heaviest in the section about Zillebeke, which is near Ypres. Two attacks by the Germans southeast of St. Georges and in the region of the dunes were repulsed with a heavy loss to the attacking force.

Gains in the Argonne.

There has been heavy fighting in the Argonne region also, and here again the French have proved their superiority. Not only have they maintained their positions at every disputed point, but they have regained some ground which they lost recently in the forest of La Grurie, recapturing from the Germans about 300 yards of trenches at a point having high strategic value. Two full German regiments delivered a spirited attack in the vicinity of Fontaine Madame, and each of these was thrown back, while the daring of the French mining and sapping corps enabled the allies to blow up 600 yards of German trenches near the ravine of Courte Chaussee. A charge on these trenches, following the explosion of the mine, revealed that about 400 yards of them were fit defences, and this section was accordingly occupied by the French.

French Bayonet Triumphs.

Further down the line extending into the province of Upper Alsace, the French troops engaged in a hot clash with the Germans in the woods of Shirtsbach, not far from Altkirch. The fighting was at close quarters, and the French charged repeatedly with the bayonet. After hours of fighting, in which losses on both sides were considerable, the Germans were forced to break ground, and the French ended the engagement with a substantial gain in territory to their credit.

The battle for the heights to the west of Cornay (Bennheim) continues.

Advance Near Altkirch.

Paris, Jan. 6.—To-night's official bulletin says:

"The only noteworthy incidents that have been reported from the front are: In the nuorth a vigorous artillery action in the region of Zillebeke; the maintenance of our positions in the Argonne, and a slight advance by our troops in the Shirtsbach woods near Altkirch."

The following official statement was given out this afternoon.

"In Belgium the enemy delivered, but without success, two attacks in the region of the dunes and to the southeast of St. Georges.

Cannon Duels in Belgium.

"On the rest of the front, to the north of the Lys and from the Lys to the Oise, there has been nothing except artillery fighting.

"In the valley of the Aisne and in the section of Rheims our batteries gained the upper hand over those of the enemy, reducing them to silence. At a point northwest of Rheims it is reported that certain of our troops have made an advance of about one hundred yards.

"In the Argonne there developed a very spirited action, which permitted us to retake 300 yards of trenches in the forests of La Grurie, at the same place where there was recently a slight giving away, as previously reported. From Bagatelle and from Fontaine Madame there were delivered two violent German attacks, each of which was repulsed. A complete German regiment was engaged in each movement.

"Near the ravine of Courte Chaussee we blew up by exploding a mine 300 yards of German trenches, half of which we subsequently occupied.

"From the Argonne to the Vosges the bad weather has continued. There have been fog and mud. At different points along this front there have been fairly spirited artillery exchanges. In the forest of Le Pretre, near Pont-a-Monsson, we have continued to gain ground.

Hold Steinbach Gains.

"In the region of Thann, in upper Alsace, in spite of a violent cannonading, we retained the gains achieved the night before at Steinbach, as well as in the trenches to the southwest and to the northwest of this Village. The enemy succeeded in recouppying one of his former trenches on the eastern flank of a nearby height, the summit of which, however, remains in our possession.

"It should be set forth that in the Argonne, near the ravine of Courte Chausse, at the point where we blew up the German trenches, the attacking regiment commanded by Lieut.-Col. Garibaldi, delivered a vigorous assault against the breach made by the explosions. The Italians captured 120 prisoners, including twelve under-officers, and took one machine gun and one caisson.

The chief Adjutant of this regiment, Constantine Garibaldi, brother of Lt.-Col. Garibaldi, was killed during this attack."

Charges Against French.

Berlin, Jan. 6.—The German military authorities to-day gave out a statement on the progress of the war as follows:

"In the western arena of the war the French continued yesterday their systematic bombardment of villages situated behind our front. They seem indifferent to the killing of their own countrymen and to the destruction of French homes. In any event, this bombardment causes us very little trouble.

"At Souain and in the forest of Argonne we captured several of the enemy's trenches and made prisoners of two officers and 200 men.

"The French again obtained a foothold early yesterday on the much-fought-for height west of Sennheim (Cernay), in upper Alsace, but they were again driven off after a strong bayonet attack. They have not dared to attempt further advances. Fifty Alpine chasseurs were taken prisoners by us."

COUNTERFEIT TEN DOLLAR BILLS

Are on the Bank of Toronto—A Clever Reproduction

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—Within the past few days three counterfeit $10 Bank of Toronto bills have been taken by tellers in city branches of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the Dominion Bank and the Bank of Montreal. The faces of the notes, according to bank officials, are a clever reproduction, but the backs of the notes are such that an experienced person would at once stamp them as counterfeits. The counterfeits at present detected are marked as signed by "D. Coulson, President, and J. Paquette, H. D. Mallette and O. Notre Dame, for General Manager." Genuine Bank of Toronto bills do not carry the signature of the General Manager of the bank.

Italy Wants An Apology

Special to The Examiner.

TURIN, Italy, Jan. 7.—The newspaper Stampa says that the Italian Government has demanded from Austria an explanation and prompt reparation for the arrest of four Italian subjects at Belgrade, who have been held as hostages by the Austrian army.

BRITISH ANILINE INDUSTRY

Large Company is Formed, with the Government Supplying Funds.

LONDON, Jan. 6—No official statement has been issued regarding the scheme for a national aniline dye industry, but committees have been formed and a company organization mapped out.

The company, it is understood, will be capitalized at £3,000,000 sterling ($15,000,000), on which the Government will advance £1,500,000 at four per cent. interest, principal repayable in 25 years. The interest and sinking fund to repay the loan will come out of the Company's profits, and not touch the capital.

The stock is subscribed by textile manufacturers, the principal users of synthetic dyes, and by contracts binding users to purchase their supplies from the Company for five years after peace is declared. By that time it is believed that all the dyes needed for home use at least will be British made. Heretofore Great Britain has been almost as dependent on Germany for aniline colours as the United States is.

DIDN'T MATTER; IT WAS STILL A GAME.

It was during a golf game in Scotland. The first player who drove off was bow-legged. The second player, unmindful that his opponent was directly in front of him, struck the ball and it whizzed between his opponent's legs.

"Hoot, mon," said the bow-legged one in anger, "that's nae golf!"

"Aweel," said his opponent complacently, "o' 'tis nae golf 'tis gude croquet."

RUSSIANS CONTINUE TO ADVANCE

In Bukowina, Leading by Direct Route to Transylvania

LONDON, Jan. 7.— The Russians with all their other fronts to cover have found another army with which to take the offensive against the German position at Mlawa, on the east Prussian frontier, and to-night report the capture of a village on the road to that town.

The Germans are still hammering at the Russian line drawn directly across the road toward Warsaw from the west, but it is reported, with less force behind them. In western Galicia, however, where they have reinforced the Austrians, they have held up the Russian advance near Gorlice.

In southern Poland wet weather has intervened and put a stop to the fighting. Neither side is able to move there, owing to the high water and the mud.

The Russians continue to drive the Austrians through the snow-covered passes of the Carpathians and out of Bukowina, opening the way to Transylvanie, where 5,000,000 of the population are of Roumanian stock, and may unite with the Russians.

The Russian Official Report.

Petrograd, Jan. 6. — An official statement from the General Staff issued to-night is as follows:

"In the Mlawa region, Poland, our troops on January 5 made a sudden attack against the village of Rosorowa, to the west of the road from Prasnysz to Mlawa, near Groudousk. The enemy, who occupied this village, were almost entirely bayoneted. We also took some prisoners.

"On the left bank of the Vistula the usual cannonading and rifle fire are continuing. Fighting of secondary importance is proceeding in the region of Boljimow and near the Moghely farm.

"In Galicia the situation is unchanged.

"Our offensive is proceeding in Bukowina, where we have occupied Sypot and Kameral, south of Seletin and Illischeatie, on the roads to Gura Humora and Pleskatchik. On January 4, after an engagement, we occupied Gura Humora and Boukshoia. The latter two places are situated on the best and most direct route to Transylvania by way of Bukowina."

Germans May Retreat.

Telegraphing from Warsaw, the corespondent of The Bourse Gazette states that the Germans along the Bzura and Pilica Rivers in Poland are preparing to retreat.

"Russian progress in the Carpathians seems to have made the Germans afraid of a wile turning movement," the despatch adds. "They are preparing to retreat, apparently in the fear that the Russians will cut them off from their base."

Berlin Reports Advance.

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—An official statement to-day says:

"In the eastern arena of the war there were no changes yesterday on our eastern frontier or in northern Poland. In Poland, west of the Vistula, our troops penetrated as far as the branch of the Sucha River, after having captured several of the enemy's points of support. One thousand four hundred prisoners and nine machine guns were left in our hands. The situation on the eastern bank of the River Pilica remains unchanged."

Przemysl Sortie Fails.

The Novoe Vremya says that a recent sortie by the Austrian garrison which is defending Przemysl resulted in the complete annihilation of the Austrian force.

It is said that not one of the force which made the sortie regained the fortress. The temperatue at Przemysl is close to zero.

ACTION IN THE NORTH

Russians Are Moving Strongly Against Mlawa

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 7—With all the aggressive operations in Southern Poland checked by unprecedented wet weather, which has made it impossible for the combatants to move their guns or transports, the theatre of action has been shifted to the North. A new Russian army has taken the offensive against Mlawa, on the East Prussian front, and is moving steadily against that town. The Germans have heavily reinforced their lines here and it will probably be a couple of days before this offensive materializes into real fighting. In the preliminary skirmishing a number of outpost positions have been taken by the Russians.

The Turkish rout in Caucasus continues.

For the Time Being.

Ardent Admirer—Dearest, I have brought you no paltry Christmas gift. I ask you to take me for the present.

Chicago Widow—Well, if it is to be only temporary, you are mine.

G. T. R. Flyer Is Cut Off

Official Announcement is Made by the G. T. R.

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—The Grand Trunk announced to-day another reduction in the passenger train service on the Ontario lines that affect Toronto. The reduction, which takes place January 17, has been under consideration for some time past by the three general superintendents of the G.T.R., Messrs. H. E. Whittenberger for Ontario lines, U. E. Gillen over the western lines, and W. G. Bowker, general superintendent of eastern lines.

To-day's announcement involves six trains. They are, Toronto to Hamilton, both ways; Toronto to London, via Stratford, one way, and Toronto-Peterborough flyer, both ways. The eight o'clock local to North Bay will only go as far as Huntsville, and the opposite train will start out from Huntsville instead of North Bay. This will put twenty-five trainmen and engineers out of employment, but the Grand Trunk will take care of the men, as some are the oldest men in the service.

Since the G.T.R. has been cutting down their train service, thirteen trains in all have been discontinued on the Ontario lines. There are other minor time-table adjustments to be made that will fit in with the new time card. The G.T.R. are taking off one train between Toronto and Hamilton. It is rumoured more will follow.

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN TRAIN SERVICE — CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

Commencing January 17th, 1915 the following changes will take place and remain effective until further notice:—

Zeppelins Seen Near Calais

With One Exception The Airmen Threw No Bombs

LONDON, Jan. 7.—A despatch to The Times from Flanders says that three Zeppelins were reported seen early this morning off the coast between Calais and Gravelines. The news receives substantiation from repeated visits by German airmen to Dunkirk during the day.

With one exception, the airmen threw no bombs. They may posibly have been scouts sent out to attend the airships on their return home or to report their progress.

Five times the aviators came in sight, but they did not always come above the centre of the town. Once a shell from the aircraft guns at Firminy burst within 50 feet of a German machine, upset its balance, and sent it away down the wind into safety.

Twice Chased Away.

Twice airmen of the allied forces went up and chased the intruder away. One German airman dropped two bombs in the suburbs, but they did no damage.

Prompted by the heavy loss of life resulting from their last visit, the Mayor had issued a proclamation warning the inhabitants to get under cover as soon as hostile aircraft were reported. A blue and white flag was hoisted as a signal from the belfry, and the streets were quickly deserted.

The municipal treasury being empty, bonds were issued to raise the money, a third of which must be paid at once. The Germans are said to have requisitioned $5,000,000 in money and goods near Hooglade.

VALUE OF COW TESTING

industries of Canada, there is reported to be a gross return of ninety-three dollars; in agriculture there appears to be a gross return of seventeen dollars. Can we do better? Dairy records, through giving what is absolutely essential to every manufacturer, a knowledge of cost of production, have paved for many men the royal road to larger returns; the successful business dairymen to-day make each cow they own stand her trial by the impartial jury of scales, test and record form. The sentence is soon passed, and several reformatory inmates now pay good dividends.

A fifth evidence is found in the largely enhanced profits and increased yields of milk and fat obtained by those well-informed men who persevere in acquiring knowledge charted in their own stables on the record form. The unit, whether cow or acre, is being studied and developed as never before because of dairy records. Cow testing is not hedged about by any trade secrets or any copyright formula. No red tape binds one in making his own simple totals. There is no selfish or sinister competition; but on the contrary there is the greatness of true co-operation is securing results that count very materially in building a better home-farm, supporting loyally the near-by factory, advertising the locality as a good dairy section, while adding in no small measure to that needed efficiency which makes true prosperity for the Empire.

This chart indicates graphically the yearly returns from a herd of 16 cows where some selection has been practised and all cows put on a paying basis.

With an average yield of 4,850 pounds of milk, 3.5 test, and 170 pounds of fat, with feed valued at $35 per cow, there is a clear average profit of $16. But it will be seen that the five best cows, yielding 204 pounds of fat, make $28 profit as against the $4 average from the five poorest. Then on comparing the worth of the poorest cow, age eight, giving only 128 pounds of fat with the twelve-year-old giving 247 pounds of fat, we see clearly that it is not a question of one cow returning just twice as much profit because she gives twice as much fat, but the profit is actually twenty times as great.

May I venture to submit that clearer proof could not be wanted of the practical utility of dairy records.

What additional sum is within our reach as direct gain from cow testing? Considerable light is shed by the fact that in one creamery in Prince Edward Island over thirty patrons, members of our cow testing association there, took in double the amount of money per cow last year that they did four years ago, while the other patrons show little or no increase. So it is in many districts. There is nothing to prevent any factory of 500 cows, if its patrons take up cow testing in earnest, handling extra money annually to the extent of $8,000. We have men by the score in Ontario and Quebec now obtaining 1,000 and 1,500 pounds of milk more per cow than two years ago. Scattered all over, we find instances like this, the man who has been cow testing now milks eight cows and gets $400 or $430 more cash than the man who does not weigh and sample, but who contentedly or discontentedly (which) fusses round with eleven unselected milkers.

This grand old province of Ontario could be getting at least another twelve million dollars' income from the cows now milking, and when cow testing is still better appreciated, she will obtain that sum.

Canada expects every cow to do her duty; "what we have," in the way of good cows, "we'll hold"; what we have not, let us see that we get, and we'll get them because cow testing clearly points the true path of progress.

GERMAN AERIAL RAID FRUSTRATED

PORTION OF COUNTRY IS INUNDATED

INFANTRY MOVEMENTS HAVE BEEN SUSPENDED OWING TO THE FLOODED CONDITION OF COUNTRY

In Certain Sections of the Country the Water is Several Feet Deep--Troops Posted on the High Ground to Guard the Flood Trenches--Germans Checked in the Vicinity of Watwiller and Kolschlay.

BRITISH STEAMER HAS BEEN SUNK

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, January 7.—Uninterrupted success at every point of contact with the enemy is claimed by official and unofficial reports received from the front to-day.

A determined German aerial raid directed against Dunkirk and the ammunition and the supply bases in that vicinity is reported to have been defeated by the accurate fire of the French aerial guns mounted about that city.

In the entire region between the Lys and the sea, the French artillery has been uniformly successful, and has silenced several of the German main batteries. There have been no infantry movements in this section because of the floods. Rains continue and the entire country is inundated to a depth at certain points of several feet. Only on high ground can the troops be retained, and they are simply guarding the flooded trenches.

Desperate fighting took place last night and to-day in the vicinity of Lille. The Germans made a determined attack against a line of trenches under cover of mine throwers and artillery. The onslaught was so terrific that the allies were compelled to abandon the trench, but later when reinforcements were brought up, they attacked in force and recovered the ceded territory.

To the east of Rheims the Germans have been checked in a determined advance by the explosion of mines directly in their front in the Woevre region; attacks near Watwiller and Kolschlag have been repulsed. The allies, it is stated, continue to make progress in Alsace and to-day are holding the woods, three miles to the west of Altkirch. The general movement to take that town continues, and though the movement is necessarily slow it is declared to be none the less certain.

PARIS, January 7. — The French are continuing their advance near Herzbach, having taken a line of outpost trenches in a series of night assaults. The Germans are admitted to have gained some of the trenches from which they were driven last week south of Thann, but the heights commanding their positions are still held by the allies. Fighting is also in progress in the Argonne region, where the Germans have undertaken a series of counter assaults in an attempt to recover the positions lost to the allies. The fighting here is of the most desperate character and frequently resolves itself into hand to hand combats because of the nature of the country, which is heavily wooded. In the north there has been fighting in Belgium which has been well sustained by the British, but which has resulted in practically no change in the situation.

THE HAGUE, January 7.—The correspondent of the Nieuwe Courant, who has been allowed to visit the French headquarters in Belgium, asserts that the allies have made substantial gains along the Yser front, which for strategic reasons have been concealed. He asserts that during December they gained a distance of two miles along the entire front; behind their lines they have rebuilt all of their roads, and have also aided in the re-building of villages which were burned during the general fighting. He states that it is plain that the allies are being concentrated in readiness for a general drive so soon as the weather conditions will permit.

WANT CARDINAL RLEASED

LONDON, January 7.—The Rome correspondent of The Daily Mail asserts that he has learned that the Vatican has requested information from Germany regarding the reported arrest of Cardinal Mercier in Belgium. The correspondent adds that he believes the Pope will make a demand on Emperor William for the Cardinal's release at once.

STATES WILL NOT INVESTIGATE THE CHARGES

That Manufacturers Have Been Selling Dum-dum Bullets Unless Sufficient Evidence is Produced

REPLY FROM GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Secretary of State Bryan informed the German Government through Ambassador Von Bensdorff to-day that the United States in its effort to maintain a strict neutrality will be obliged to refrain from an investigation of the charges that American manufacturers have been selling dum-dum bullets to the Allies, but will act immediately whenever Germany produces evidence that this is being done.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The first building permit of the year has been issued to V. W. Lancaster for the construction of a brick veneer dwelling on Monaghan Road. The cost of the work is estimated at $1,800.

The Inaugural Meeting.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend the inaugural meeting of the Board of Education, which is slated for this evening. The Board Room can be entered by one door if the Chamber street route is taken.

In Ottawa.

The Mayor, accompanied by a handful of his picked warriors, are in Ottawa to-day pressing their claims for recognition as a military centre, on behalf of the city. They expect to wait upon the Premier.

With Other Councils.

Robert Maw Beal was elected Mayor of Lindsay by a majority of 660 votes. This is his fourth year.

Deputy Reeve.

Newton Smale was the choice of the Lindsay electorate for the position of deputy-reeve. He had 240 votes to the good.

Ottawa's New Mayor.

Mayor-elect Porter will guide the destinies of the Ottawa City Council during the year 1915. He was elected by a large majority over ex-Mayor McVeity.

Exit McVeity.

So confident was McVeity that he would be re-elected in Ottawa, that he did not wait till after the election to take his oath of office for the new year, but took it when he was signing his declaration of qualification as a candidate.

London's Stiff Problem.

Mayor H. A. Stevenson and the 1915 council are up against one of the stiffest financial problems that ever faced a London city council. Despite the increased assessment of $6,000,000 — put through last year, and which should increase the city taxes about $125,000 a year—it will be impossible to secure the slightest reduction of the tax rate, and only astute financing will permit the same rate to be struck as last year, namely 28½ mills.

BIG INCREASE IN BANK CLEARINGS

The bank clearings for the week ending January 7th amounted to $334,607, an increase of $125,570 over the previous week. The corresponding week last month the clearings were $406,260.

DEPUTATION IN OTTAWA

Mr. Burnham Refused to Accompany a Representative Body of Citizens Who Will Wait Upon the Premier

THE PERSONNEL

It seems hardly possible that a deputation of Peterborough's influential citizens should wait on the Premier of Canada and the Minister of Militia, regarding matters pertaining to Peterborough, and the Federal Member, the representative of the people, not accompany the delegation, but such is the case. If Mr. Burnham had a scrap of sympathy with the endeavours that are being made to secure consideration for Peterborough in the matter of making it a mobilization centre, he would have taken the deputation under his wing, and placed it in the proper channels for consideration of the material they have to place before the heads at Ottawa.

An invitation was given to Mr. Burnham, but he absolutely refused to go.

At the bewitching hour of midnight there assembled at the C.P.R. Station a representative deputation composed of twelve citizens. Their objective was Ottawa, where they propose to wait upon Premier Borden and the Minister of Militia, in an endeavour to convince the authorities that Peterborough would be a logical centre for the mobilization of troops, and that it possesses superior advantages over Belleville, which has already been selected for that purpose.

The personnel of the deputation was as follows: His Worship Mayor Butler, Ald. Johnston, Ald. Green, Ald. Duffus, Ald. Stratton, ex-Mayor Bradburn, ex-Ald. Duncan, Lieut.-Col. Young, Major Eastwood, Mr. W. H. Denham, Mr. E. G. Patterson and Mr. Roland Denne. The Federal member was strangely and conspicuously absent. Nobody seemed able to give a very satisfactory account of Mr. Burnham's action in absenting himself from the party.

"Is the Federal member going with you?" the Mayor was asked.

"No," was the monosyllabic reply.

Enquiries directed at other members of the deputation elicited similar replies.

Refused to Go.

"We tried to get him to come but he wouldn't agree," said Ald. Johnston. "He seemed to think that he had done all that was necessary and that a deputation would have no weight with the authorities at Ottawa. We intend to see the Premier and, if possible, wait upon the Minister of Militia, who, at present, is confined in the hospital." Ald. Johnston was not prepared to state what they were prepared to offer to the Government by way of inducements.

The party, as a body, was decidedly reluctant to discuss the circumstances that had brought about Mr. Burnham's refusal to pilot the deputation to the Capital. They were somewhat comforted by the prospect that Mr. Borden had been acquainted with the fact that a deputation from Peterborough was about to visit Ottawa. They left on the 12.15 train, confident that they would, at the very least, receive the Premier's assurance "that the matter would receive due consideration."

DESERTER PUT UNDER ARREST

Local Man On Leave From Kingston At New Year's Did Not Return

Sergt. Sam. Thomson, in charge of a guard, composed of Ptes. McKim and Batley, arrived from Kingston this morning to place under arrest, Pte. P. Tobin, who had overstayed his New Year's leave. Pte. Tobin had returned his uniform to Kingston, not intending to resume his military duties. He was arrested as a deserter and was taken back to Kingston on the 1.30 G.T.R. train. He may be able to get his discharge later on, if he so desires, after serving a certain length of time.

Recruiting Is Still Going On

Medical Officer at the Armouries Every Afternoon and Evening

There seems to be an impression abroad that recruiting here has stopped owing to the fact that mobilization may not be here. Such is not the case. The 57th Regiment is recruiting volunteers for the Third Contingent at the Armouries every afternoon rom 3 to 5 and every evening rom 8 to 10. In regard to the complaint of the recruit regarding the medical officer not being there, it might be stated that the medical officers of the regiment are giving their services free, and that one is present at the Armouries every afternoon and evening.

YOUTH GETS SEVEN YEARS

Donald McLaughlin, a pale-faced youth of 21, was found guilty by Judge Costsworth of assaulting Arthur Sangster, a guard at the Central Prison on October 14, and sentenced to seven years in the Kingston Penitentiary. The boy took the sentence without a murmur. This sentence will run concurrently with an unexpired sentence of forty-two months in the Central Prison and a term of three years to be served in the Penitentiary.

In the witness box Sangster said he was on guard in one of the towers when McLaughlin entered for the purpose of replacing a broken window pane. While his back was turned he said he was struck with a blunt instrument and knocked unconscious. A three-foot length of iron pipe wrapped in felt was exhibited by the crown with a longer piece of iron pipe cased in cloth as the weapons of assault.

In the confusion that followed the assault, four prisoners, J. Spence, J. Mulhall, McLaughlin and E. Schwier escaped. McLaughlin was captured some time later at Bracebridge.

J. Spence, J. Mulhall and E. Schwier, together with McLaughlin, were found guilty of escaping from custody, and given an additional six months in the Central.

GRADE BUTTER AND CHEESE TO REDEEM THE ONTARIO CREAMERY TRADE

Dairymen This Morning Discussed The Creamery Industry—Ontario Has Fallen Behind And Needs Immediate Attention

MR. PUBLOW'S REPORT

Thursday morning's session of the Dairymen's convention closed in Stygian darkness as the result of electric power trouble. The break came fortunately at noon when all the speakers had completed their discourses and the meeting had drawn out to the final discussions on the question of butter grading.

The tenor of the convention has been significantly practical. Yesterday, the careless cheese factory patron was denounced as one of the present obstructions and the advancement of the cheese industry. To-day the question received further attention. The redemption of Ontario creamery business was considered at length with the grading of butter proposed by several speakers as the most promising way out.

Chief Inspector's Report.

Mr. Publow presented his 12th annual report as Chief Dairy Inspector.

The total number of cheese factories operating last year was 846, just 36 fewer than in 1913. Eight factories were destroyed by fire and five were closed because of the shortage of milk. Sanitary conditions have been much improved. In 435 factories repairs costing $70,000 were made. During the year there was a marked falling off in the supply of milk. There are three reasons for this condition. First there were 33,000 cows less than in the previous year; second a dry season which burned the pasturage and cut off the water supply; and third the heavy shipments of cream to the cities.

Decreased Milk Supply.

The supply of milk for 1914 totalled 843,629,539 lbs. One satisfactory condition for the year is an increase of 170 lbs. of milk per cow. The make of cheese was 77,086,867 lbs., showing a shortage of 9,194,768 lbs., or allowing 86 lbs. per box, a decrease of 107000 boxes. Nearly 900 new silos were built last year in the 22 districts of Eastern Ontario. The average fat test for Eastern Ontario has been lowered by .02%; it has taken two-tenths of a pound more milk to make a pound of cheese than it did a year ago.

The better patrons are asking "what is the use in our cooling our milk when our neighbours do not and it all goes into the same vat? This is something which an attempt must be made to solve; that is a workable method by which the milk of all patrons will be cooled and properly cared for before it reaches the factory. This is undoubtedly our greatest dairy problem and the one to which to further improve in both the quality and quantity of the cheese output.

Better Quality of Cheese.

The quality of cheese this year has been improved. That is, there have been fewer inferior cheese. The finish was better and there was a great decrease in sour cheese. The most noticeable defect was that openness due mostly to the unsound condition of the milk.

There were 35 creameries operated in 1914. From May 1st to November 1st they made 3,091,825 lbs. of butter, which sold for an average price of 24½ cents per lb., about one cent per lb. less than last year. The quality is not what it should be and this has been clearly demonstrated when Ontario's butter has gone into competition with butter from Quebec and some of the western provinces.

Grade Cream and Butter.

If a system of grading cream and butter were adopted it would seem to be the proper method of overcoming the difficulty, and while such a plan may have its difficulties at first, others are already reaping its advantages, and what others can do we also can do. I would suggest that a conference of the creamery men be held at some early date to consider this method or any other than may produce the desired results.

Inspectors More Inquisitive.

To reach the farmer sending out poor milk, Senator Derbyshire suggested that inspectors should get out and live with them in order that the root of the trouble may be reached. Mr. Publow had done excellent work and

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JAN. 7, 1915

THE SNUB DIRECT.

Peterborough is doubtfully fortunate in having a representative that does not represent anybody but himself. Mr. Burnham, M.P., takes original views of representative responsibility. Time after time he has argued the uselessness of sending deputations to Ottawa to urge Peterborough's claims to favours, if not rights. He takes the ground that the Government is a law unto itself—that "what it says goes"—and that there is no use of presenting arguments and appeals against its autocratic rulings. This might do in Germany, where the authorities are everything and the people nothing. Mr. Burnham goes even further than that. He holds, or practices the idea that not only is the government to be left undisturbed in the exercise of its high mightiness, but that he, himself, can wash his hands of responsibility; that his responsibility to his constituents ended when in the exercise of rather dubious judgment they elected him as our member. Instead of actively cooperating with the City Council and other citizens in bringing influence to bear on the government to secure a mobilisation camp in Peterborough, he has thrown cold water on the proposal, inferably holding the idea that he had presented our case to the government, and if he can have no influence, it is useless for anybody else to make an attempt. He not only discouraged the journey of the deputation, but absolutely refused to accompany it and do the little courtesy of introducing it and making its way easy as possible. The members of the deputation previous to their departure for Ottawa, did not express their opinion of Mr. Burnham's action, possibly because words of sufficient force and pungency were not at their command.

Our member's action in turning his back on a deputation of his constituents, and refusing even the courtery of a formal cooperation, establishes a new, but not unexpected, precedent. Some of the members of the civic deputation are Liberals, and that might, from a purely partisan point of regard, justify indifference, but the majority of them are Conservatives, who not only feel that they are the objects of scant courtesy from a member they have helped place in a position, where he refuses to exercise the common courtesy that his position demands; but that in his refural to personally assist in advancing the interests of his constituency he has forfeited confidence.

Mr. Burnham may disparage the usefulness of a deputation; but it seems to be necessary; for, according to his own statement printed yesterday, the government, or at least, the Militia Department, does not know its own mind. It was evidently decided by somebody in authority that Peterborough was to be made a mobilisation centre. As Mr. Burnham himself says, "orders were issued and bills posted for all sorts of supplies for the camps at Peterborough and other towns." If the deputation that is only acting after decision has been arrived at, finds its journey to Ottawa fruitless, it will largely be the fault of our civic authorities. Five or six weeks ago The Examiner, expressing a general sentiment, in behalf of the city, urged the sending of a deputation. If this had been done we might have had the camp in Peterborough. They then had nearly as much reason for feeling that the local member would not second their efforts, as they have now, after the snub direct of to-day.

NICKEL-PLATED PATRIOTISM.

It is learned on good authority, the New York Journal of Commerce, that Canada can outsell the United States in the matter of steel rails. This authority says that the Algoma Steel Company has been awarded an order for 15,000 tons of standard section rails for shipment to Ohio at a price from $1.50 to $2.00 lower than the figures of United States manufacturers.

The fact that Canadian manufacturers can meet on even terms an industry that the United States is supposed to have highly specialised, indicates that with a fair field Canadian industries need not greatly fear competition from our neighbours.

This incident furnishes encouragement for Canada to enter boldly upon the work of the industrial capture of new markets created by the war conditions. We cannot specify all the openings that are presented to Canadian enterprise. One, however, obtrudes itself; and this is the enterprise of refining in Canada our own almost exclusive deposits of nickel.

Canadian nickel, has assumed of late, an international importance; and the circumstances indicate that Canada is in duty bound to take a prominent and compensatory part in waging the war, for she has contributed largely, if indirectly to the strengthening of the common enemy. Germany has been a large consumer of Canadian nickel. This was not so bad when we did not know that we were furnishing a whip to beat ourselves with; but when we see that Canadian nickel is still in a way of finding itself in Germany, the situation changes.

We do not produce an ounce of refined nickel in Ontario, but we send thousands of tons of it in the form of matte to New Jersey to be refined, and from there distributed throughout the world. There is reason to believe that large amounts of Canadian nickel can find their crooked way to Germany to be used against Canada and the Empire. Sam Hunter, in the Toronto World, had a cartoon of the destruction of the Formidable in the English Channel, labelled "Done by Canadian Nickel." No doubt Canadian nickel had a share in its destruction if the ship were sunk by a German submarine.

Now that we know what we know, we should provide that no more Canadian nickel should find its way to Germany. What course to take to secure this end is the concern of our governments.

Our government has also a more important duty to face. If it had done this duty sooner we should have been saved the necessity of some deep thinking and decided action to prevent being contributing agents to the murder of our own fellow-citizens. If in years past our nickel ores had been refined in Canada, we should now have had a control of their shipment and destination, that would be worth millions to have now.

The Examiner has for years advocated the policy of the manufacture in Canada to the ultmiate form as nearly as possible, of all our natural resources. It has been thought that we could not refine nichel in Ontario; that there was some exclusive magic process which we could not employ. It is, however, asserted on good authority that nickel can be refined in Canada. If this assertion is correct, we can at once adopt the policy of refusing to permit a pound of ore to leave Canada, (not even for Wales), in an unrefined condition.

That we have not done so sooner is a shame and an outrage on Canadian interests. Providence has endowed us with the most, if not the only, considerable deposits of nickel in the world. We should gain the fullest possible advantage from their exploitation. This we have not done. The Toronto World, which is taking a finely patriotic interest in the nickel question, says that the International Nickel Company, of New Jersey, using solely Canadian nickel matte, declared dividends last year of nearly four and a quarter millions—$4,337,906—on nine millions of preferred stock and thirty-nine millions of common stock. The Mond Nickel Company, of Wales, operating exclusively on Canadian nickel ore, has made immense money, and so profitable has been this enterprise since the opening of the present war, that more capital is demanded.

The princely profits made out of Canadian nickel by companies outside of Canada suggest the idea of giving this country the lion's share of the benefit of the development of our own, and only our own, mines. If the New Jersey concern made nearly four millions last year, and the Wales concern a similar profit, there we have—or don't have—nearly ten millions that should have been left in Ontario, in one year.

Those who know the relation of the amount of wages and expenditure for supplies to profits, can form some idea, how labour would have profited by the refining of our nickel ore in this country. If manufacture, chiefly labour, adds ten times to the value of a cord of pulp wood as sold in the log, would not a relatively greater value be given our nickel matte refined in this country than we get from its being exported as matte? As things are now going, outsiders get the cream and Canada—Ontario—gets the skim-milk, and—Germany gets the nickel.

The World places a good deal of emphasis upon a percentage of the profits going to the government. There is no objection to that, but it seems to us that the employment of labour, and a share of the profits going to the working people of Ontario, who own the mines is, a more important consideration. The working man and the purveyor of supplies directly, and through them the entire community, would indirectly, benefit.

We do a great deal of talking about the patriotism of keeping the dollar at home. This is mere fustian when we let the dollar by millions be shipped out of the country; when our unemployed workmen stand idle and see trainload after trainload of their own nickel matte passing out of the country to give employment to alien workmen and swingeing profits to alien money-suckers. And not only that, but our in-one-sense stolen nickel is allowed to find its way to strengthening an enemy whom we are pouring out blood and money to defeat.

Canada for Canadians is an empty cry when we permit Canadian resources to enrich foreigners and put weapons in the hands of our enemies. We and our rulers should talk less buncombe and do more business. Unless we and our rulers wake up to some feasible and practical policy our patriotism is mere nickel-plate and a mighty poor sample of made-in-Canada goods.

Grade Butter and Cheese, etc.

should receive the very best assistance from his inspectors. Senator Derbyshire asked that special attention be given next year to the producer of indifferent milk.

The Sediment Test.

"The Milk Sediment Test as a Means of Improving the Cheese Factory Milk Supply" was the subject taken up by Mr. Frank Herns, Chief Dairy Instructor for Western Ontario. Clean milk and well cooled milk, he began, covers the fundamental principles underlying sanitary production. There is no reason why the comparatively small percentage of those who deliver over-ripe or tainted milk should not be expected to produce milk equally as fit for cheese making as the factory. In justice to the careful patron every effort should be made to have all milk arrive at the factory in equally good condition. Large numbers of bacteria may be carried into milk, the organisms clinging to substances such as bits of straw, hay, hairs, dust, etc., and that some definite relation exists between the keeping quality of the milk and the amount of sediment it may contain.

Cooling the night's milk to at least 65 degrees is absolutely necessary and if greater care can be exercised in the milking the number of troublesome organisms which have to be controlled should be less.

Patrons Understand It.

The sediment test is something that the patrons can see and understand. It appeals to the producer's sense of pride. When presented with the "disk" on which was shown the quantity of sediment filtered from a pint of the milk delivered by them the producers were astonished and could hardly believe that such an amount could possibly be true.

As evidence that most of the sediment may be kept out of milk by the exercise of reasonable care, some of the disks were quite free of sediment. Many disks indicated extremely careless methods.

How Sample is Taken.

The sample is not taken from the milk in the bottom of the milk can, but from a fair average of the milk, obtained either at the weigh can after the milk is poured in or at the end of the milk conductor.

Judging from the practical work of the season which included several thousand tests, it looks as though the continued use of the test is bound to give good results.

The test places the responsibility on the individual patron and leaves little chances for argument on his part. Patrons usually take a reasonable view of the test as it is something they can see and understand. Good judgment must be exercised by the operator in making use of the test, offensive comment withheld, and an effort made to get the patron to understand that all that is intended is to point out the facts with the desire of getting his cooperation. Let the appearance of the disk do most of the talking at first; it will eventually appeal to the patron from a logical standpoint.

Pay For Quality.

Better money for better work, said Geo. H. Barr in his talk, promised a solution of some of the difficulties experienced in cheese production. As in every other business, the good cheese maker should be paid proportionately and the patron who delivers first class milk should receive more returns than the careless patron. Mr. Barr also declared that milk should be paid for, not on the basis of quantity altogether, but particularly for quality. He presented a chart illustrating the accuracies of the fat, the casein, the fat x3, and fat cal. casein tests, and urging the use of any of these four methods to be used in dividing factory proceeds. Mr. Barr was strongly opposed to the pooling basis which he declared to be most unfair.

Mendy They Don't Earn.

His chart, for instance, showed that a 3.10% fat milk brought that patron 10.6 cents more than he should have received, whereas a patron sending in a 4% fat milk received 11.4 cents less than his milk should have brought. For this reason the pooling basis of factory profits division is unfair to the producer of the best milk, and the man with the small percentage of fat in the milk he provides is receiving money which belongs to the former patron. Mr. Barr said he felt strongly on this point and hoped to see some one of the first four methods adopted throughout the Dominion.

Mr. Zufelt's Address.

Our patrons all want to get the same price per 100 lbs. of milk, and our factories all want the same price per pound of cheese, said Mr. Zufelt. They do not want to stand alone and each on his own feet. We began with a co-operative system and we are now almost on a socialistic basis. We are not only pooling milk at factories but pooling our cheese in selling it. Salesmen dispose of the output of 15 or 20 factories. They all go together on this pooling idea and poor cheese receives the price of the best. There should be individual responsibility if we want to bring about permanent results that will improve our cheese. Each factory should stand on its own quality of cheese, and the milk of each patron should stand upon its own quality.

Butter Industry Shaky.

The butter industry in Ontario today is in a very critical condition. Our butter has to be consumed locally. We have no foreign market. The Canadian west did buy from us, but foreign butter had to be brought in to complete the supply. To-day our butter has to be sold in British Columbia at a discount. It does not stand out in quality above foreign butter. It is too bad we have to copy the example of other countries, but let us do this if we cannot assume the lead.

Mr. Zufelt supported the idea of grading butter. Like cream and any other product butter should be sold on its merits. In Alberta they have four special grades of butter. In 1914 they produced 71 p.c. of these special grades; 19 p.c. of first grades, 8 p.c. of seconds and about 1-2 p.c. off grades. Five years ago Alberta butter was second to Ontario. To-day they occupy our position and Ontario is second to them. One Alberta factory after launching into the grading method lost only four of its old patrons, but this number was counter-balanced by many new patrons. The method was most successful in this Alberta factory and came home to the individual producer in dollars and cents.

Capt. Ingles Buried.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The late Capt. Ingles of Toronto, chaplain to the forces, who died recently at Netherawon Hospital of cerebro spinal meningitis, was buried at Bulford with full military honors. Majors Piper, Beattie and Scott and Capt. Warner officiated. The church was crowded with the hospital staff, and officers and men of the Third Battalion, who laid a beautiful wreath on the grave. The street around the hospitals is over a foot deep in water which has risen to within an inch of the floors. Some of the hospitals have been closed until further notice.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

VALUE OF COW TESTING IN DEVELOPING A DAIRY HERD

An Unquestionable Example Presented by F. R. Mallory at the Wednesday Afternoon Session of the Dairymen's Convention—Reasons Why Every Farmer Should Know the Milk Producers of His Herd.

ROTATION OF CROPS, TOO

At the Wednesday afternoon session of the Dairymen's convention, the practical value of cow testing was set forth in the plainest and at the same time the most striking address on this subject that has been heard here in a long time. It is a subject that has been treated exhaustively at institute meetings, and the keeping of milk production records is fast becoming general throughout the dairy districts of Peterborough county. But farmers who needed convincement of the value of the practice, and incentive to adopt it among their own cattle should have heard Mr. R. F. Mallory's talk. He adopted the conversational style in his address, with the belief that the narrative of what has been accomplished under his own vision would be the most emphatic method of presenting the facts as he knew them. His story embraced the development of cattle which his father owned thirty years ago. It was back in 1885 that the old gentleman became dissatisfied with the milk production of his cattle. He worked out his ideas for six years, when he died. His son put his dairy ideas into practice with the herd for the next fourteen years when he handed them over to the present owner who, during the past ten years, has achieved results in milk production that are simply wonderful when compared with the figures his grandfather's early records present.

Produced Only 2,000 Pounds.

In 1885, Mr. Mallory began, my grandfather's herd were producing 2,000 pounds per cow during the factory season. The herd consisted of brindles, spotted and other nondescripts. My grandfather purchased a pure bred bull and cow. The factory books show she produced 1,200 pounds of milk in a factory season. We have to-day 100 head of Holsteins and throughout Ontario there are 300 descendants from that cows. My grandfather kept all his calves together. There was no weeding, and but little improvement in the herd except perhaps in colour. He picked individuals on appearance. He was not a feeder, not a weeder, only a breeder.

At the end of six years my father took over the herd. We find he handled it 14 years. Dozens of females went to the butcher, pure breds with pedigrees. At the end of 14 years the herd was averaging 7,000 pounds of milk in a factory season. That was an increase of 5,000 lbs. average producing was due to the weeding my father had done. I don't think the feeding was much better than before.

What Feeding Did.

Mr. Mallory stated that at Guelph O.A.C. he had taken up scientific feeding and decided to put the principles into practice. In individual cases he [illegible] trebled the production. There was one cow in that herd that gave 12,000 lbs. in a year; the next year by milking three times a day I got 24,000 lbs. of milk, and this progress was made, I believe, with feeding that was economical. Thus, the herd was built up by breeding, next by weeding and lastly by feeding, and the latter two ideas were based on testing and record keeping.

Mr. Mallory did not announce the present production, but he gave an idea of what had been accomplished by testing. Continuing his subject of building up a dairy herd he declared that there are available short cuts today that were not at hand in 1885. The development depends upon the means, object and ideals of the individual. Applications to the Department will put a protective purchaser in touch with pure bred herds.

Mr. Mallory dealt in detail with the selection of sires, and spoke in favour of good pedigrees behind stock. He cautioned against freaks, the cow with no ancestory and leaving none. It comes from nowhere and goes nowhere. He said that the cow with small teats and udder is a timewaster. Buy a cow with large teats, an easy milker. He found that the cow that takes the large quantity of rough food is more economical than that requiring much grain. Mr. Mallory spoke strongly in support of cow testing. He declared that many farmers to-day are selling cows, the dairy value of which they are ignorant.

Prof. Grisdale.

The dairyman's profits was Prof. Grisdale's subject. Thinking makes for progress more in agriculture to-day than in any other business, he said. Our farmers restrict their thinking to merely local conditions. Until we waken and are inspired to do better I think our prospects are poor indeed. And at the present time we have more cogent reasons for progress than we have ever had. As part of our Empire we must be up and doing, to not only send soldiers but to produce food for the needs of the Mother Country. If every one of us would do his best we could double our production of foodstuffs next year.

Dairy Essentials.

It is of great importance that a farmer should have well ventilated and lighted, spacious, clean and comforable accommodation for his cattle. This does not necessarily mean costly barns. Glass is not expensive. Give your cattle lots of light and lots of air. This will be as good to them as five pounds of meal a day. A stable sufficiently warm can be built with two ply of boards and paper. This will cost you $150 a cow, and you cannot do better than that. Another consideration is the feed. Good feeding is such a factor as even the most experienced of us cannot over-estimate. Mr. Publow said that by good feeding you could double the return of milk. I know positively that it can be done. We took a number of heifers from farmers around Guelph. They had been yielding from 2,000 to 3,000 lbs. on the average. We gave them better feed and the results showed an average yield of 5,000 lbs. of milk. At a farm of ours in Quebec a similar experiment produced results quite as convincing. Prof. Grisdale cited cases of a trebled output and the cost had been no more than doubled.

Abundance of Feed.

Cheap feed means abundant feed at all times. This may not appear logical to some men, but we know that it is logical. And he must get the feed provided at the lowest possible cost. Common feeds are clover, alfalfa, straw and concentrated meal. The average farmer cuts off feed in May. The decent farmer provides some other feed during summer than pasture grass.

Pasture Overestimated.

We should make pasture a secondary consideration. It looks like the cheapest feeding, but it is really the dearest, practically without exception. Pasture is very much overestimated. Cattle should be pastured through the summer, but entire dependence should not be placed upon this forage.

Rotation of Crops.

We must adopt crop rotation to produce the cheapest feed for our cattle. The government has some 25 farms now and on all of them rotation has brought lower cost of producing forage crops and increased returns. With proper rotation you can double the output of your land. The average ton of ensilage, ton of hay and bushel of grain is produced at a loss in Ontario. This is proved by the statistics and is possible because we are satisfied to work under existing conditions. We are certainly not getting anything like the profit and returns proportionate to our labour.

Let a hoed crop follow a grain crop, and a hay crop follow a grain crop. A rotation I found was hoed crop, grain and hay.

Larger Implements.

"The large implement is the implement of the future. I am sorry it is not the implement of to-day."

Prof. Grisdale mentioned the wide harrow and wide seeder, showing how they lessened the cost of production by the greater amount of work done. With binder, horse, rake, etc., the same principle holds. With a heavy crop of grain, however, a large binder may prove heavy for horses, but use the largest you can. They are great contributors to farm profits.

The use of traction power on the farm I have no hesitation in saying is not satisfactory to-day.

O. A. C. Made Profits.

By folling a proper rotation and using large machines, in spite of the increased cost of labour at the Guelph farm, we have lowered the cost of growing an acre of corn, an acre of hay, and an acre of grain, as compared with the cost sixteen years ago. To-day, with $2.25 wage for united help we can do it more cheaply than we could when we were paying $1.25.

Explanation Seems Simple.

We are getting larger crops than before. If you take a crop of 4 or 5 tons of clover off an acre this year, next year you will likely get no more than one ton or a ton and a half. Thus the average for two years would be three tons, whereas with rotation you get four or five tons each year.

Prof. Grisdale followed this idea out in corn and grain, showing similar results in each case. This is an evidence of what can be accomplished under proper, systematic rotation and is an evidence of how production and profits can be increased.

We have to do our farming with our heads. In the old country we do not find the farmer with an assistant son working his farm as is too often the case in this country. The average farm in this country should have at least two hired men, if it were being worked properly.

An Illustrated Address.

Mr. J. A. Ruddick concluded the afternoon with an illustrated address on the dairy industry in Switzerland, where he stated cooperative cheese factories had been in existence over 200 years. The Swiss have been keeping records of their herds for forty years. One herd of seventy-two cows, for example, showed a recent average of 8,723 pounds. Mr. Ruddick's address and slides produced ample evidence of the advanced dairy methods followed in Switzerland.

ALLIES GROW STRONGER WHILE GERMANY WEAKENS

Galleries in the House of Parliament Are Filled With Peeresses in Mourning as Secretary for War Discusses Present Situation and Recounts the Events of the Past Six Weeks.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The House of Lords met yesterday, a month earlier than the House of Commons, chiefly to hear from Lord Kitchener a review of the military operations for the six weeks since Parliament was prorogued. While the speech of the Secretary for War contained nothing of a sensational character and little not already known, it was listened to with rapt attention by a distinguished gathering of peers and peeresses, members of the House of Commons and public men.

The peers, as usual, were in their robes of office, but beyond this the scene was lacking in the usual color, for the long rows of peeresses in the gallery virtually every one was in mourning for some relative killed at the front.

Lord Kitchener read his speech from a typewritten document and referred briefly to the operations in every sphere, laying particular emphasis on the Turkish defeat in the Caucasus and on the defeat in Galicia and what he considered more important, "the severe check of German aspirations in Poland."

The War Secretary also spoke of "the noteworthy progress" made by the French east of Rheims, and in southern Alsace, the "extraordinary achievement" of the Servians, which he characterized as "one of the brightest spots in the military operations during December"; Gen. Louis Botha's "masterly handling of the situation in South Africa"; the advance of the Indian army in Mesopotamia and the successful campaigns in East Africa and Kamerun, the German colony of West Africa.

He paid a tribute to the smallest of the allies, Montenegro, which, he said, "advanced into Bosnia and captured important positions in the face of considerable Austrian opposition."

Lord Kitchener, criticizing the recent German naval raid on the east coast remarked that "no military advantage can be gained by these wanton attacks." He continued:

"The great advantages which Germany enjoyed by reason of her superiority of numbers and extensive war preparations have certainly diminished, while the allies daily are increasing their resources in such a way as to enable them to prosecute the war to a triumphant end."

He expressed satisfaction with the progress of recruiting which, after the anticipated decrease at Christmas has now been almost restored to its former satisfactory level.

Speaking of anxiety felt at the beginning of the war at the dearth of officers, Lord Kitchener declared that all vacancies had been filled and there was now a considerable surplus. Although the training of the men had been carried on under the worst weather conditions, a great deal of extremely good work had been done during the past month.

Lord Curzon, who spoke for the Opposition in the absence of the Marquis of Lansdowne, who is ill, described as amazing the number of men the War Office had been able to send to the front. He thought, however, that a more definite statement should have been made as to the progress of recruiting and as to the military operations in the remote parts of the Empire. It was his opinion that the best service which the War Office could render would be to concentrate its efforts on the equipment of men who have been sufficiently trained, and to send them to the front with as little delay as possible.

As to the number of men who would be wanted for the foreign service and home defence, Lord Curzon said that he imagined that the War Secretary would require considerably more than 2,000,000 and possibly nearer 3,000,000.

After eulogizing those who had fallen, Lord Curzon expressed unfaltering confidence in Gen. French, Admiral Jellicoe, and the forces under their command.

The Marquis of Crewe, replying to the question raised by Lord Curzon, said that every vacancy among the officers of the expeditionary force had been filled promptly. He asserted that there was no ground for saying that troops had been kept back because they were not equipped sufficiently.

ADDRESS AT THE EVENING SESSION

Minister of Agriculture is Not In Favour of Local Demonstration Farms

The evening session of the Dairymen's Convention was the crowning chimax of a strenuous but intensely interesting day's work. The Opera House was not crowded to capacity. This was not expected. What the gathering lacked in numbers was more than exceeded by the interest and enthusiasm manifested by the delegates and others who availed themselves of the opportunity to hear the various addresses respecting the agricultural interests of the country.

Mayor Buller opened the meeting with a dissertation upon the unrivalled possibilities of Peterborough, into which destiny had guided the 1915 convention. He concluded his remarks by extending the freedom of the city to the delegates.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., was next introduced by Hon. Senator Derbyshire, chairman of the meeting. The Senator characterized the Federal member as a "beautiful man."

Mr. Burnham, M.P., said that he would deal with a brief comparison of life and the means of life as it exists among British peoples now, and as it existed some centuries ago.

It will no doubt seem strange to many people that in the early centuries agriculture was not a calling by itself as it is now, said the speaker. Everybody raised his own food. Plots of ground belonged, on payment of a tax-rent to the lord of the manor, to even the meanest serf or slave in the parish. The rights of common supplied pasturage. In England and in some parts of continental Europe there was a desire for and a knowledge of comfort that is not surpassed even at the present day. But there were no slums and no pauper class then. An idle man was an object of suspicion because there was no need of his being idle. There were no vast aggregations of crowded and horrible tenement houses. The people lived on land in the open and the children had all the benefits of sunlight and fresh air. When the blacksmith had no work at the smithy, or the carpenter or the mason or the wood cutter, he went on his plot of ground and cultivated it, securing to himself and family all that was necessary for life and even comfort. The sheep of those days were small and yielded a pound of wool instead of 9 or 10 as at present. Cattle weighed from 700 to 800 pounds. Cows were poor things in comparison with our Ayrshires and Jerseys and other selected breeds. Horses were not much better than Shetland ponies. Recognizing the supreme value of selective breeding and centuries before Lamarck or Darwin thought of their doctrine of evolutionary development, the owners bred from those best suitable to their needs and to-day we have the Southdown and the Leicester, the Berkshire, splendid cattle and fine horses. There was, then, no unemployment in those days, nor would there be now if people could do as the mechanic did then, go to his plot of ground or farm and expend his energy and spare time in drawing from Nature what he could get from Art.

UNEMPLOYMENT A NIGHTMARE

But modern unemployment is not only a curse, it is a nightmare. It is for us to learn the history of it, the history of the past, and to discover the possibilities of the immediate future. There is no need for unemployment. Then let us provide against it. Let it never be said again, at least in Canada, that with all that has been provided for us in this magnificent country we cannot find a living for a large number of willing people. It is a scandalous thing that we should devote our hearts and souls to finance, to speculation, to promoting, to subsidising while we virtually neglect this whole problem of unemployment. Science is not at fault. It is performing miracles. Trade is not at fault. It is overspreading the world. Transportation is not at fault, nor invention, nor shrewdness. What is it then? It is humanity itself that is at fault, in that in all its wide expanse of learning and discovery it has not found a way to help men to earn a living when they are willing and eager to do so. It will take a long time perhaps to work this great problem out, but if I have health and intellect enough I will do something towards it. Your experts are doing wonders. They are here to-day in force. Your big men in the business know their business and its needs down to the smallest detail. They will tell us in this district what we need to do to catch up with the times.

CONVENTIONS ARE IMPORTANT.

Such conventions as these are of vast importance and value. They may mean and can mean, taken in conjunction with farming as a whole, the doubling of our productive efficiency. It is a lamentable thing, however, to see the production of grains per acre falling off. We have a glorious country, and must live up to our opportunities. We must have more of what the Englishman calls pride and the American, ambition. Men without loftiness of purpose and nobility of spirit are not what the great stuff of the world is made of. They are only groundlings and parasites. We have inherited the pride in being great of our great ancestors and we must live up to our heritage. We must beware of self-complacency of letting well enough alone. Life is worthy living only when we put our mental and physical energies into it. Even a willing horse is a source of pride to us. The sense of fairplay suggests that no man shall get what he does not earn. That is one thing. The next is to see that he gets what he does earn or is willing to earn.

In Peterborough County we are, so farmers say, in need of a demonstration farm. From what they tell me, local demonstration farms are worth all the lectures many times over. The Minister of Agriculture for Ontario is here and the Deputy Minister for Canada is here, and I trust they will agree with the opinion of our farmers and add to their local lectures and local school fairs the cap sheaf of their usefulness, viz., a local demonstration farm.

Mr. C. C. James.

The next speaker was Mr. C. C. James of the Department of Agriculture. Referring to Great Britain's need for help, Mr. James said:

"Send us not only men, but send us food," is the call that has come over the water. We have here in Canada as fine an agricultural country as the sun ever shone on. Now as never before the farmers of this country are going to be put to the test. Are the farmers going to respond to the call of the Motherland? It is not for me to say, or anybody else, that you should go to the front. The Britisher does not have to be told. If we do not go let us stay-at-home people decide what is our duty in Britain's hour of need.

The farmers have been told for years and years how they could produce more grain, butter and other farm products.

Sometimes the advice has been followed and sometimes it has not. We are facing duties and responsibilities that were never presented to the people of Canada before. If the producers know how to produce more agricultural products and don't do it they ought to be classed with the man who drops his rifle and runs for shelter.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture assisted by the Provincial Department, propose during the month of January to inaugurate a series of conferences. Men will be provided who are qualified to discuss better methods of farming. The department is about to issue an agricultural handbook known as an agricultural war book. It deals with the productive possibilities of Canada as well as of those countries at present engaged in the war.

Upon the work of the farmer is to be built the great industrial life of Canada. Out of the soil is to be produced the millions of dollars of wealth that will go not only to feed the starving Belgians but to liquidate the debts that we have incurred during the last twenty-five years. While you are helping to feed the Empire and to put this country upon a sound financial bases you will at the same time, be helping yourselves.

Hon. James Duff.

During the month of September there had already been an organization formed in Toronto for the purpose of working out some form of relief to those who were thrown out of employment as a result of the war, said Mr. Duff, the Minister of Education.

If there is one occupation more than another that requires a man to be in love with his work, it is farming. I never knew of a successful farmer who was not in love with his farm. We have circularized this province and during the past few months, have been successful in placing a large number of men.

In reference to the question of local demonstration farm as advocated by Mr. J. H. Burnham, I would say that we have gone into the matter very carefully. I am thoroughly familiar with the workings of the Ontario Agricultural Farms. You would not have to go very far from this model farm to find a number of poorly tilled farms.

A local demonstration farm would be of very material value to the farmers of any district. On the other hand we have adopted the system of district representatives. This has worked out very successfully.

The War.

We are at war and we feel proud to think of the number of young men who have responded to the call to arms, continued Mr. Duff. It remains for those of us who remain at home to bend our efforts towards increasing the production of this country. Prior to the fall wheat season, a circular was issued by the department advocating a larger acreage. The result has been an extended fall wheat acreage amounting to approximately twenty or twenty-five per cent.

Solos were rendered by Mr. F. Myles and Miss Hanson. The meeting closed with the rendition of the National Anthem.

IS NOW PRESIDENT AND MANAGER OF A MANUFACTURING BUSINESS

New Canadian Industry Created as a Result of the War

TOY-MAKING

TORONTO, Dec. 28—Hard times have not daunted Herbert Corey of this City. Three months ago he was night watchman on a down-town clothing warehouse. It was the only work he could find to do. To-day he is President and Manager of a nice little manufacturing business.

Many years ago Corey was taken from his native town (Lindsay) to the United States, where his father apprenticed him to a small manufacturer of mechanical toys. Family connections finally forced Corey to return to Toronto, leaving a fairly lucrative position behind him in this city. Being crippled with rheumatism, he was unable to engage in ordinary work. He tried to find a firm of toy-makers here who would employ him at his own trade, but owing to the fact that most Canadian toys have been imported hitherto, he found no field for his abilities.

When the war broke out a certain firm, owning a large department store in Toronto, with branches elsewhere, was unable to get in one of its last toy shipments from abroad, including great quantities of mechanical toys. Corey learned of it, showed his credentials as a master toy-builder, and was given orders for a thousand single-cylinder toy engines. The store advanced him money for his workshop, taking his real estate as security. Corey then gathered a number of young men who were out of employment and taught them the practical side of toy-making. His factory is in a wood-shed covered with tar-paper, yet he has given employment to twelve persons for three months. Other stores have turned orders Corey's way and a small company, of which he is the principal stockholder has now been formed to erect a slightly more roomy shop for next year's trade.

"Because Canadians were importing their toys, three months ago, I had to take any sort of work I could get," said Corey, in an interview, to-day. "Now I feel better. Canadians are buying a Canadian product and supporting what will some day be a decent-sized Canadian industry."

ELSIE JANIS NEAR DEATH

Prominent Theatrical Star Had Narrow Escape From Drowning While Making A Photo-Play

"Elsie Janis drowned!" This was the exclamation of horror that came from the lips of the rest of the company, as they stood upon the banks of the river wherein the plucky little woman had plunged while making one of her first pictures, "Betty in Search of a Thrill," for Bosworth, Inc.

Fortunately Miss Janis overcame the conditions which threatened for some moments to send her to her doom. In this scenario, written by herself, Miss Janis—disguised in boy's clothing—jumps into a canoe to escape the pursuing officers of the law, but in her hurry the canoe, in midstream, upsets and she strikes out for the opposite shore.

Miss Janis, not realising how clothes would impede her swimming, sank in the struggle; her boy's coat closed over her head nearly smothing her, binding her arms so that she could not swim, and the terrified group on shore stood paralysed waiting for her to come up.

"It was the narrowest escape of my life," said Miss Janis afterward as she explained the accident. "I wasn't frightened, but was simply wondering how I could possibly extricate my arms so as to strike out, not spoil the picture, and incidentally not drown."

As it was, Miss Janis ridded herself of the impediments, struck out for the shore, and finished the picture as scheduled, but the onlookers declare that it was a very cold and quite subdued little Miss Janis that emerged from the icy waters, was wrapped in warm blankets and carried back to the studio, where she admitted that the seconds under the water were the longest "working hours" she had ever spent.

A CLEAR NATIONAL AIM

To have a clear national aim is one of the first requisites to building a nation. Haphazard and pot-luck has ruined many a home and community. If we in Canada are foolish enough to admit that we are mere juveniles in the business of self-development, then the rest of the world will take us at our own valuation.

Suppose we take a leaf out of the book of Russia; that vast Slav Empire which Germany cynically calls a barbarism. What is Russia's outlook? As clear and definite as the wart on the end of a man's nose. Russia aims to become the greatest areas of unfarmed land on the globe; to make the desert blossom as the rose; to keep eighty per cent. of her people on the land; to buy manufactured goods from other countries.

Very well. We believe Russia understands her own national business. We have nothing to teach her. But Canada will have vastly more to do with Russia after the war is over than selling her a few thousand self-binders every year. Russia expects to buy her manufactured goods from the countries that are of the most use to her in the present crisis, which has for its aim the putting of Germany in her place. Russia will be open to buy goods from Canada, over both the Atlantic and the Pacific. But she will never take the trouble to bother with us, if meanwhile we don't settle it among ourselves that we intend to do our own manufacturing for our own people. If we let foreigners supply us with more than half our manufactured goods, what chance have we of selling Canadian-made goods to Russia?

It is the great immediate business and privilege, it is the economic duty of the present moment and for all time to come, for Canadians to buy Made-in-Canada goods. But this duty only applies when they find that Made-in-Canada goods are at least equal value, for the manufacturers' duty is to produce them as such.

ONE VILLAGE IS CAPTURED

Germans Are Hammering at Russian Line Which Bars the Way to Warsaw, But Their Force is Less

MOVING ON MLAWA

LONDON, Jan. 7. — The Russians, with all their other fronts to cover, have found another army with which to take the offensive against the German position at Mlawa, on the East Prussian frontier, and last night reported the capture of a village on the road to that town.

The Germans are still hammering at the Russian line drawn directly across the roads to Warsaw from the west, but it is reported with less force behind them. In western Galicia, however, where they have reinforced the Austrians, Berlin claims that they have held up the Russian advance near Gorlice.

In southern Poland wet weather has intervened and put a stop to the fighting. Neither side is able to move there owing to the high water and the mud.

The Russians continue to drive the Austrians through the snow-covered passes of the Carpathians and out of Bukowina, and simultaneously are dealing in detail with the remnants of the Turkish armies in Transcaucasia, which are reported either to have been routed or surrounded.

The Turkish dash into the far-off province of Russia is described by military men here as having been an unwise manoeuvre. Military operations in the winter in that part of the world would be difficult at any time, they say, but this year, with a particularly severe winter raging, there was little chance of the poorly-equipped Turkish troops succeeding in their efforts.

Altogether the Russians engaged the Turks in ten pitched battles, in many cases while knee-deep in snow, and at an altitude of from 6,000 to 10,000 feet.

It is felt in England that the reported rout of the Turks invading the Caucasus, with the defeat of their plan to seize the Russian fortress at Kars, gives the Ottoman forces such a setback that the much discussed invasion is now virtually out of the question; at the same time the pressure on the Russians at least has been so far relieved as to preclude any necessity of withdrawing Russian forces from the Polish and Galician fronts for service in the Caucasus.

AMSTERDAM, January 7.—Ten persons have been arrested in Brussels for singing "Die Wacht am Schwein," it is reported in uncensored information received here. The bitter feeling between the Belgians and the Germans in the Belgian capital is increasing, and the neutrals there fear a violent outburst.

SCARBOROUGH, Eng., January 7.—The Britsh steamer Alfreida was sunk by striking a mine off Scarborough to-day. The crew took to the boats and nine of them arrived here to-day. The captain and 12 others are still missing, and a steamer has been sent in search for them.

PETROGRAD, January 7.—The fleeing Turks are reported to be abandoning their supplies, and their regiments are now said to be little more than disorganized mobs vainly fleeing for places of safety. The Turks were lured into a trap. Poorly equipped they were led to believe that they had defeated a Russian advance guard, and the latter skilfully fell back on the main Russian position. The Turks followed them. Finally the Russian infantry withdrew and the Turks found themselves confronted with strongly entrenched positions heavily armed with artillery. Before they could withdraw they were met with an annihilating fire while at the same time the Russian reserve infantry and cavalry were hurled on their flank.

ROME, January 7.—(Delayed by the censor.)—The special train of Garabaldi started through the streets of Rome to-day. The red shirt of the famous patriot was spread upon the coffin of his grandson, who died in France fighting for the allies. This brought the war spirit to the front as never before or since the opening of the war. All the way from the railway station to the Verano cemetery the funeral procession moved through triple ranks of Italians who alternately wept and cheered for the success of the allies. No one in official life made any attempt to minimize the demonstration. It proved once for all that so far as the rank and file of the Italians are concerned they are for the allies and against Italy's former ally, Germany. It was plain from the beginning that this was not a mere funeral of a hero, rather it was to emphasize the fact that the dead man represented the sympahies of thousands, who had brought to them the fact that Italian soldiers are now fighting in alien uniforms for a nation for whom Italy deeply sympathized.

LONDON, January 7.—Added precautions have been taken by the authorities which would indicate the belief that an important aerial raid by Germany is expected in the near future. Additonal men have been sent to the coast guard observatory stations. The crews of the aerial guns are on duty in renewed strength, and the police have been instructed to enforce to the very letter the dim-light regulations. The precautions follow the discovery that German Zeppelins have been seen cruising near the Straits of Dover escorted by armed German bi-planes. It is believed that their appearance indicates that they may have been sent up to determine the air currents and the like as a precautionary movement to a general attack on England, and probably on London.

BI-PLANE WAS HIT

The Zeppelins, it is stated, were plainly seen from Dunkirk, although they did not come close enough to come within range of the fort guns. The escorting bi-planes however did and were driven back by a fusilade in which one was hit although the aviators escaped.

Both Zeppelins and bi-planes have mounted light machine guns, according to the latest word received here.

IN RETALIATION

It is believed that if a German raid materializes it will be directed alone on the big naval bases in attempted retaliation for the British raid on Cuxhaven, when one of the super-Zeppelins was put out of commission on Christmas day.

The British aerial squadron is in readiness for any hostile visit. There are plenty of aeroplanes along the coast at points of vantage, and all are armed with machine guns and also carry bombs in readiness when needed.

Fiske O'Hara in "Jack's Romance"

A New Play by Augustus Pitou, Sr., Here Next Monday

"Jack's Romance," the new play written by Augustus Pitou, Sr., for Fiske O'Hara, and which will be presented by the clever singing star at "The Grand" next Monday, Jan. 11, has for its principal theme a romantic love tale, in which the characters are mainly Irish gentry of the 18th century. Jack Connolly, a young gentleman of the County Wicklow, has had a quarrel with his elder brother and has spent several years in voluntary exile in Canada just previous to the opening of the story. Seized with a desire to see his brother without being recognized, he returns in disguise to his native place. He meets with exciting adventures on every hand, in which highwaymen, cattle traders and various other picturesque characters figure very prominently. He meets and woos and wins her. Manager Pitou has sent out a splendid company in support of Mr. O'Hara and the stage pictures are said to be more than usually handsome.

A Voteless Mother Combs Down "Citizen"

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I was glad to know from the letter of "Citizen" in last night's issue of your valuable paper, that he at least does not belong to the class of people which claims that women would not know how to vote. He claims that women "vote much the same as men do." This is one of the finest appeals we have noticed in the Peterborough papers on behalf of the enfranchisement of women. There are many kinds of women as there are many kinds of men, and as no person of right understanding would claim that all men vote as they should, so no person would claim that all women would vote as they should.

But so long as the fact remains that every man can vote just so long will every man and woman with any sense of justice claim that women should have the same right. In every place where women have the vote it has been proved that the laws have been improved, and the votes of the mothers have helped to raise moral standards. "Citizen" quotes the cases of Toronto and Peterborough in the recent elections as showing conclusively that the women's votes did not "turn" the elections in certain directions. He must remember that in Toronto only the widows and spinsters have the vote. Ask "Citizen" to wait till the mothers, who have families growing up now, get a chance. He won't have to wait long. Ten years from now let us hear from "Citizen." Let us hope he is progressive and will by that time also be grateful for what the mothers' votes have done for Canada.

Mark Twain, who, as we know, was no weakling, said: "I would like to see the ballot in the hands of every woman. It would drive corruption out and each party would be compelled to put up good candidates or go down to defeat."

Yours truly,
"A Voteless Mother."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Robt. Haggerty, aged 46, of Yarker, Ont., was struck by a train on the Canadian Northern Railway near Newburgh, and killed. A wife and one son survive him.

Jacob Barteusk, a stalwart young Russian, aged 19, six feet two inches tall, applied at the Kingston armouries to enlist with the third contingent. He was passed as satisfactory.

Arrangements are being made by the various trainmen's unions affected by the recent proposed wage cut on the G. T. R. and the G. T. P. to get a conference with representatives of the company.

President Wilson declined yesterday for the sixth time since he entered the White House to support a federal constitutional amendment for woman suffrage. He said it should be brought about state by state.

Dr. Eugene Haanel, director of the mines branch at Ottawa, has been elected vice-president of the Faraday Society of England, a scientific body devoted to the study of electro chemistry, electro metallurgy, etc.

GERMANS FIGHTING HARD TO STEM THE ADVANCE

French Offensive Directed Against Cernay and Mulhausen Is Meeting With Stubborn Opposition

LONDON, Jan. 7.—Interest in the war is again centred in the stubborn fight which the French and Germans are carrying on for the roads to Cernay and Mulhausen in Upper Alsace.

The battle in that region, which has been raging for a week, is described in a Berlin despatch as the most violent of the war. This is borne out by the statement that the Kaiser has gone to Alsace to cheer his troops.

There is general fighting all along the French front from the Belgium line to the vicinity of Altkirch, and, from announcements given out by the War Office, the allied forces are more than holding their own. Nowhere are any reverses reported.

In Flanders the Germans are striving desperately to prevent further gains by the allies. They are bombarding the French positions with their heaviest available field artillery. King Albert of Belgium is personally directing the return fire of the allied artillery.

The cannonading is heaviest in the section about Zillebeke, which is near Ypres. Two attacks by the Germans southeast of St. Georges and in the region of the dunes were repulsed with a heavy loss to the attacking force.

There has been heavy fighting in the Argonne region also, and here again the French have proved their superiority. Not only have they maintained their positions at every disputed point, but they have regained some ground which they lost recently in the forest of La Grurie, recapturing from the Germans about 800 yards of trenches at a point having high strategic value. Two full German regiments delivered a spirited attack in the vicinity of Fontaine Madame, and each of these was thrown back, while the daring of the French mining and sapping corps enabled the allies to blow up 300 yards of German trenches near the ravine of Courte Chaussee. A charge on these trenches, following the explosion of the mine, revealed that about 400 yards of them were fit defences, and this section was accordingly occupied by the French.

Further down the line, extending into the province of Upper Alsace, the French troops engaged in a hot clash with the Germans in the woods of Shirtzbach, not far from Altkirch. The fighting was at close quarters, and the French charged repeatedly with the bayonet. After hours of fighting, in which losses on both sides were considerable, the Germans were forced to leave ground," said the French ended the engagement with a substantial gain of territory to their credit.

The battle for the heights to the west of Cernay (Sennheim) continues.

The French War Office issued the following yesterday:

"The only notable incidents which have been reported this evening are:

"To the north a rather lively cannonading in the region of Zillebeke, the maintenance of our positions in the Argonne and slight progress by our troops in the wood of Hirsbach near Altkirch."

"In Belgium the enemy delivered, but without success, two attacks in the region of the dunes and to the southeast of St. Georges.

"On the east of the front, to the north of the Lys, and from the Lys to the Oise there has been nothing except artillery fighting.

"In the valley of the Aisne and in the sector of Rheims our batteries gained the upper hand over those of the enemy, reducing them to silence. At a point northwest of Rheims it is reported that certain of our troops have made an advance of about one hundred yards.

"In the Argonne there developed a very spirited action which permitted us to retake three hundred yards of trenches in the forest of La Grurie, at the same place where there was recently a slight giving way, as previously reported. From Bagatelle and from Fontaine Madame there were delivered two violent German attacks, each of which was repulsed. A complete German regiment was engaged in each movement.

"Near the ravine of Courte Chausse, we blew up, by exploding a mine, 800 yards of German trenches, half of which we subsequently occupied.

"From the Argonne to the Vosges the bad weather has continued. There has been fog and mud. At different points along this front there have been fairly spirited artillery exchanges. In the forest of Le Pretre, near Pont-a-Mousson, we have continued to gain ground.

"In the region of Thann (in Upper Alsace) in spite of a violent cannonading we retained the gains achieved the night before at Steinbach as well as in the trenches to the southwest and to the northwest of this village. The enemy succeeded in reoccupying one of his former trenches on the eastern flank of a nearby height, the summit of which, however, remains in our possession."

DYING FROM STARVATION

Ten Thousand French Peasants in Meuse Valley Absolutely Without Food

[illegible], Jan. 7. — [illegible] C. Hoover, chairman of the American commission for relief in Belgium, returned to London yesterday from a tour of inspection of the work being done for the commission in Belgium. In a statement issued last evening, Mr. Hoover said:

"An appalling situation has been presented to the commission with regard to the French peasantry in the valley of the Meuse, just south of the Belgian frontier, where there are 10,000 persons absolutely without food. Our investigation showed that a large number of deaths already had occurred there from starvation.

"Despite the shortness of the rations in Belgium, our Belgian colleagues agreed that we must share the last crust with these people. We therefore sent them food out of our limited Belgian stores."

The report concludes as follows:

"Despite the columns of food which has been placed at our disposal, we can provision only until Feb. 15. Great as has been the generosity of the American people, it is well to bear in mind that if we fail after that date the world will be faced by the greatest tragedy it has yet witnessed in the possible extinction of an entire nation. Strenuous as the efforts that we, our countrymen and countrywomen have made, they cannot for one moment be relaxed if this gigantic catastrophe is to be prevented."

Spratt and Moynes To Play To-morrow Night

For the First Time This Season the Hockey Club Will Have Its Full Line-up

The Hockey Club has been lacking an experienced right wing player, and consequently the team has gone on the ice in the three games played more or less disorganized.

Spratt has assured the management that he is now in condition and will be on the team to-morrow night. This will be welcome news to the fans as well as to the management. Another man, who will be a new man to the public is Moynes, a friend of Janes, but whose hockey ability has not been known to the local team officials until a day or two ago. It is said he is as good as any man on the team, and if his certificate is back in time will be in the game to-morrow night. With Kelly better of his illness, and Park on the team, and the rest of the seven going as well as they have been, the balance of the games in this district should all go to the home seven.

To-morrow night's game, however, with Belleville in the Brock St. Rink, will give a good line-up as to the outcome.

MRS. BELAND VERY ILL.

Maj.-Gen. Hughes Tries To Secure Release

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.—Hon. Dr. Beland, ex-Postmaster-General, who, according to the last advices received here from him, is a prisoner of war, held by the Germans in Antwerp, is likely to be among the list of British prisoners exchanged under the arrangement now pending between the allies and Germany. Maj.-Gen. Sam Hughes, on learning of the probable exchange of prisoners and of Hon. Dr. Beland's detention as a prisoner in Antwerp, promptly cabled Lord Kitchener, asking consideration for the Canadian member of Parliament. Lord Kitchener was also informed that Dr. Beland's wife is seriously ill in Holland.

According to a letter from Dr. Beland, received here a few days ago by an ex-Cabinet colleague, the former was at the time of writing assisting in looking after wounded Belgians in Antwerp, but was not allowed to leave the city. It was intimated that, in company with other captured belligerents, he might be taken shortly to one of the camps for prisoners of war in Germany.

Hon. Dr. Beland has the rank of Surgeon-Major in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Turkish Cruisers In Action.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 7.—(Via London.)—An official communication issued yesterday says:

"Two Turkish cruisers were in action Jan. 5 in the Black Sea against a Russian fleet of 17 units. Despite the Russian's numerical superiority our ships were not damaged."

PRAISES CANADIANS.

Lord Kitchener Refers to Dominion

LONDON, Jan. 7.—Lord Kitchener made a slight but highly interesting reference to the Canadian regiment already in the field in his speech in the House of Lords last night. His lordship read his speech, which summarized operations taking place since last he spoke in the Lords.

The following was his reference to Canadians in the field: "Although, as I said, there has been a continuous series of trench operations, the only important engagement between the British forces and the Germans was on the 20th of December, when the trenches held by the Indian troops were violently attacked at Givenchy. The Indians were to a certain extent surprised by the enemy and their trenches were captured, only to be retaken the following day with considerable loss to the enemy by the first army corps, which had been in reserve. The line thus reassumed has since been entirely maintained, and the Indian units have enjoyed a period of relief from the trenches. Sir John French's force has been increased by a number of territorial units and by another division, attached to which is a fine Canadian regiment."

It will be noticed that Lord Kitchener made no reference to these latest reinforcements having been under fire.

The final paragraph of Lord Kitchener's speech was as follows: "The training of the Canadian contingent and the new armies has been carried on lately under the worst weather conditions, but in spite of this a great deal of extremely good work has been done during the past months. Discomforts and hardships, due to the storm and wet mud, have been cheerfully met and both officers and men are imbued with the one common thought, that of preparing themselves as thoroughly and rapidly as possible to take their part in the field, where I am sure they will worthily support their comrades in arms."

KAISER NOT RATIONAL.

He Has Quarreled With His Advisers About His Health.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 7—The Kaiser is mentally impaired by the strain under which he has been suffering since the war began and constant friction exists between him and the German General Staff.

This statement is made by an American engineer who has just reached this city after a two and a half months residence in Berlin.

The Kaiser is now in Berlin, but he is restrained with difficulty from returning to the front. His physicians have advised him that an operation on his throat will be necessary and that he will have to rest and regain his strength before it can be undertaken.

This necessity for inaction has so irritated the Kaiser that he has quarreled with his military and medical advisers and has announced his intention of returning to his soldiers without an operation. It is feared that he may carry his intention into effect at any time and nothing short of physical restraint will prevent it.

Petes Bound To Redeem Themselves Tomorrow Night

Team Is Working Hard To Get Into Shape For The Battle With Lawsons Whitehead's at Brock St. Rink—Many Candidates For The Right Wing Position

The change in the weather to-day will ensure a good sheet of ice for to-morrow night, when Lawson Whitehead's Belleville aggregation will clash with the local team. The Petes are not at all downhearted on account of their defeat at Picton, and will endeavour to improve their position in the League race at the expense of Belleville. They will have a battle royal, but with a stronger line-up they should be able to send the visitors back with a reverse. The Petes had a lively practice last night with a big squad out. The management is giving every one a chance to make good on the forward line, and last night there were three new candidates for the right wing position, Blewitt and Hill, who used to play for the Lakefield City League team, and a young fellow named Moynes, who hails from down Cavan way. The latter looked the best of the three suburbanites, and made a very good impression on his first turnout. The management could do worse than give him a trial in the position on his form last night. The whole team worked hard, and they should be in the best shape of the season when they tackle Belleville to-morrow night.

Picton Good Says Marsh

Referee Discusses Tuesday's Defeat of the Petes

PICTON, Jan. 6.—Picton is hockey crazy to-day. Last night the Cannery Town youngsters applied a 3 to 0 coat of whitewash to Peterborough's formidable team of intermediates. Picton scored once in each period. After Peterborough handing Toronto Rowing Club seniors a beating in Toronto the Picton fans were very much afraid of Peterborough, but on last night's play on soft ice the Picton youngsters certainly looked much the best. They jumped into the fray on their toes, and, crowding the Petes down on their nets, bombarded them steadily for fifteen minutes before they notched the first goal. They were pretty much on top of Peterborough the other two periods, too, and only the superb goalkeeping of Janes in the Peterborough nets stopped Picton from running up a big score. He must have stopped three-score shots which were dead on.

Picton showed up with a grand little team, and have now won three straight games. They play great combination, and will be hard to beat out of the district championship. Bert Burns and Hubbs were the stars of the local team, though all the rest of them played top-notch hockey.

Peterborough were shy Spratt and Parks. Janes in goal, Pethick, and Halpin looked best for Peterborough. Captain "Ack" Hunter started out at right wing, but could not get going. The slow ice and smaller rink bothered Peterborough greatly. It was a clean but hard-contested game, and Peterborough were decidedly dangerous many times, though they failed to score.

Oshawa Beat Bowmanville 5-4

BOWMANVILLE, Jan. 6.—In the intermediate hockey match played here to-night between Bowmanville and Oshawa, the visitors won by the score of 5 to 4. The line-up:

Bowmanville: Goal, Spry; defence, Davie and Jones; rover, R. Williams; centre, F. Williams; wings, Higginbotham and Hooper.

Oshawa — Goal, Smith; defence, Freeman and Bowen; rover, Fair; centre, Hall; wings, Canning and Jacobs.

Referee—Tackaberry.

Score by periods — First period: Oshawa 1, Bowmanville 1; second — Oshawa 5, Bowmanville 3; third — Oshawa 6, Bowmanville 4.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

Toronto Star—The coach of the Picton Hockey team, which leads the eastern intermediate O.H.A. district, is none other than Walter Knox, of Orillia, the Canadian and American all-round champion and coach of the British Olympic team until the war broke out.

Knox's ability as a coach and conditioner of athletes is well known, but his ability to handle a hockey team was an unexpected display of versatility. He certainly had that Picton team going in smooth style against Peterborough last night. He has every man Jack of the outfit sticking to his position and chasing the puck to the exclusion of all else—and that is what wins hockey games. There were only four penalties at Picton last night, and all were for very trivial offences.

Cobourg Hockey Club has given another player to fight the cause of the Empire, George Duckett, of last year's intermediate O.H.A. team, having joined the second contingent and is stationed at Montreal. This is the tenth Cobourg hockey player to enlist. Duckett was one of the best hockey players ever turned out by Cobourg.—Toronto Star.

The Review, in a defence of Referee W. M. Tackaberry, would give the impression that the Examiner is trying to blame that official for the defeat of the Petes the other night. Nothing of the kind. The local youngsters played away below form, and would have been beaten under any referee. The Examiner merely expressed its own opinion of the official, an opinion that was shared by both teams and by the Port Hope Guide as well, which remarked that "Mr. Hewitt would confer a favour by keeping the official in Toronto in future." Mr. Tackaberry was impartial but incompetent, his knowledge of the rules being on a par with that of the Review man's, who would rule a player off for loafing offside because he was attacked by one of the visitors near the Port Hope nets, and could not get back. The contention that a referee should let a fight continue because a team has broken away towards its opponents' goal and should be given an opportunity to score is ridiculous. The rule that the Review man has a hazy notion of is as follows: "If in the opinion of the referee a defending player has deliberately committed a foul to prevent a score, he shall not stop the play until that play is completed." That means if a Port Hope man was carrying the puck in on the Peterborough nets and a Peterborough man fouled him, the referee should not stop the play until it was completed. It does not mean that a Port Hope man, or both, should jump into a couple of Peterborough forwards and hold them at one end of the rink while their own forwards break away and score, and that the referee is bound to let the play be completed before he stops the fight—if he should happen to see it.

The group standing in the Intermediate Series is as follows:

	Won	Lost	To play
Picton	3	0	7
Oshawa	2	1	7
Whitby	2	1	7
Peterborough	1	1	8
Bowmanville	1	3	6
Belleville	0	3	7

Church League Opens To-night

Rev. Mr. Rollins Will Face the Puck —Three Games

For some time the readers have been learning of the Senior Church League, which was revived last year, and though started late; had a very good season, the cup being won by St. Paul's. This year this League is being run on a more organized basis, and the constitution of four rules of last year has been increased to twelve to overcome difficulties and develop good clean play among the young men of the different churches. For the purpose of paying expenses, referee, rink, etc., 250 season tickets are being sold and from this the League is able to obtain one night a week from eight to whatever time they are finished, thus playing three games.

To-night, at 8 o'clock, the League will open, the following teams playing, St. John's drawing the bye this week. Rev. Mr. Rollins will face the puck:

St. Luke's vs. St. Andrew's.
Charlotte Street vs. George Street.
Murray Street vs. St. Paul's.
Admission 15c.

HAVE WITHDRAWN.

The following has been handed in for publication:

"In view of the high-handed action of the executive of the Senior Church Hockey League in refusing the certificates of Smyth, Huycke and Murray, the Charlotte Street team has decided to withdraw from the League. Therefore there will be no game to-night between the Charlotte street team and George Street."

Former Local Boy Receives Good Promotion

After a service of nearly two years in the employ of the Allan-Cummings, Limited, J. P. McNichol, the advertising manager, leaves for Saskatoon, where he has received an appointment in a similar capacity with the J. F. Cairns, Limited. Mr. McNichol has been the recipient of many congratulations upon his step up the ladder, and he takes with him the best wishes of a large circle of friends in the city.

Mr. McNichol came to Moose Jaw when the Allan-Cummings firm opened business here. He resigned the advertising managership of the Cressman Co. at Peterborough, Ontario, and to come and take over the reins of a departmental store at Allan-Cummings involved no small responsibility. However, by his unfailing tact and business acument Mr. McNichol justified his appointment, and his departure from the city is regretted by the staff.

During his stay in the city Mr. McNichol has been actively interested in social duties, and has worked assiduously in this respect with friends at St. Joseph's Church. Mrs. McNichol will join her husband in the course of two weeks.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. McNichol, 22 Alberta Avenue, was raided by a surprise party, and the jollifications were kept up until midnight. During an interval in the proceedings Mr. McNichol was presented with a handsome club bag by his friends.—Moose Jaw Times.

Milk Vendor Will Be Prosecuted

For Bottling Milk in a Lane—Was Caught by Sanitary Inspector Spence

Sanitary Inspector Spence has instituted police court proceedings against a milk vendor whom he found bottling milk in a lane, contrary to the regulations. The case will likely appear on Saturday next. When the Inspector swooped down on the unsuspecting milkman, the latter was in the act of filling seven quarts. He made no attempt to deny the charge.

Sanitary Inspector Spence states that for some time he had had reason to believe that milk was being bottled on the streets consequently he has been on the lookout.

DEVELOPMENTS IN ROUMANIA

Meeting to Take Place Between King of Roumania and Czar of Bulgaria

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 6.—A telegram from Bucharest to The Berlin Vossische Zeitung confirms the report that a meeting is to take place soon between the King of Roumania and the Czar of Bulgaria, on Roumanian soil. Both Monarchs will be attended by their Foreign Ministers.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—A despatch from Paris states that developments "of the highest importance" are imminent in Roumania.

A dozen French and British newspaper correspondents left Paris today for Roumania, by way of Bulgaria.

Lloyd's to-day quoted 65 guineas per cent. against war between Roumania and Austria or between Roumania and Turkey within the next three months.

Roumania's entrance into the war is now regarded as absolutely certain.

Roumania has not yet abandoned her neutrality, but a warning has gone out to her reservists to hold themselves in readiness for service and developments soon may be expected. The advance guard of Russians along the Roumanian frontier has been selected of men who speak the Roumanian language and have Roumanian sympathies.

CELEBRATION OF GREEK CHRISTMAS

In Russia, Greece and other countries where the Greek Catholic Church is the state religion, Christmas will be celebrated to-day.

Christmas in Russia continues for a week, and during that week business people give themselves over to religious rites and later to merrymaking.

In Greece Christmas will be celebrated by thousands of newly weds for the Sunday preceding Christmas is the day for "committing matrimony."

Several local Greek employers are giving as many of their employees as possible a holiday to-day in honour of the day.

Next Thursday, a week from to-day, will be New Year's Day in these countries also.

Willie's Frankness.

Some time ago Percy Claude called at the home of his beautiful beloved, and while waiting patiently for hr to appear little Brother Willie bulged into the parlour.

"Come here a minute, Willie," happily remarked the young man. "I am going to tell you a very great secret."

"All right, Mr. Smith," responded the youngster, going over to the caller. "Let her slide!"

"At the garden party last night," softly confided Percy Claude, "I proposed to your sister, and she has consented to marry me. Doesn't that amaze you?"

"Well, I should say not!" was the startling rejoinder of Willie. "That's what mamma gave the party for."

ATTACK PROVES FATAL.

Lieut.-Col. Strange Dies at Salisbury —Lieut. Briscoe Killed.

KINGSTON, Jan. 7.—News of the death, of cerebro-spinal meningitis, in London, Eng., of Lt.-Col. Frank Strange, formerly staff ordnance officer of the 3rd Divisional Area, Kingston, who, on Sept. 21 last, left with the first Canadian contingent for England, where he was attached to the base of supplies, came with a great shock to his family. Word of his illness first came in a cable yesterday afternoon, but this morning another cable said he was improving. Yesterday afternoon word of his death arrived.

Deceased was born in Kingston in 1864. He had been connected with military life for the past thirty years. In 1908 he entered the permanent service with the ordnance corps, and in 1911 was made staff ordnance officer of this district.

Killed at Target Practice.

GALT, Jan. 7. — Lieut. Ross D. Briscoe, of the 111th Edmonton Regiment, with the first Canadian contingent, who was accidentally killed at Salisbury Plain, was formerly a member of the 29th Regiment, Galt, and was a son of R. A. Briscoe a prominent dry goods merchant here.

GERMANS BATHE MORE.

Brewery Vats Behind Lines Do Duty For Plunge Baths.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 7.—The German headquarters command has issued orders on the northwest front that on account of the heavy weather lately the soldiers must be given bathe at every available opportunity. The first opportunity came a few days ago at Roulers, where the Germans seized a brewery, ran off the dregs of stale beer and refilled the vats with water, which they used as plunge baths and left the battlefield mud at the bottom. The troops have been sent long distances to Roulers especially for baths in the brewery vats. A whole division of one of the German army corps of reserves left Thielt and marched five miles to Lichtervelde, where they entrained for Roulers. They marched from the station in Roulers to the brewery, where the men waited two hours for a ten-minute bath.

Second Contingent For France?

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 7.—It is reported here that the full second Canadian contingent will go direct to France and complete its training there, instead of in England.

Cardinal's Letter Under Ban.

LONDON, Jan. 7. — Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent says:

"The arrest of Cardinal Mercier has created a profound sensation throughout Belgium. According to reports received here the Germans also arrested the printer of the cardinal's pastoral letter, who until recently was the burgomaster of Malines, but released him on bail.

"It is stated that the reading of the pastoral letter had been prohibited. Fugitives from Antwerp say that all the rectories around Malines and Antwerp are guarded by sentries."

WISE'S GIGANTIC HOME-GROWN LEMON

Peterborough may not be in the banana belt, but it is certainly in the lemon belt. Mr. Frank Wise, superintendent of Little Lake cemetery, has shown that there is more life and initiative there than the environment would suggest. He has also shown the Examiner a lemon grown in the cemetery green-houses, of the extraordinary weight of 23 ounces—more like in size a grape fruit than the ordinary lemon.

The lemon tree upon which this ponderous fruit was grown, was procured from Mr. Benj. Cooney, a well known amateur florist, when he dismantled his private greenhouse. This tree, of a variety not known, but well deserving the name of Wise's Gigantic, has borne fruit for several years; some years four or five lemons, but this year only two. It is only about 2 feet high and 30 inches spread of branches. Mr. Wise says the fruit makes excellent lemonade, but would not commit himself to a recommendation of it as an excellent ingredient in a bowl of punch. He will present it to Mr. W. H. Moore, President Little Lake Cemetery Company; but the Examiner's military expert suggests that owing to its size, and the significance attached to its place of growth, it is just such a lemon as should be handed to the Kaiser.

Labour Short In Britain

All Manners of Work Held Up by Lack of Men

A SUGGESTION

LONDON, Ja. 7.—Shortage of labour and congestion of railways with military work continue to cause trouble here. London docks are chockablock with goods which cannot be distributed owing to shortage of hands. Coal is steadily rising until it is now 5s. a ton above the usual, because of the difficulty in distribution. This is also largely responsible for the rise in food prices.

The above despatch from London shows the fact that work can be had by numbers of men if the men were there to accept it.

A suggestion has been made to the local Relief Association to look into the matter of getting in touch with organizations in England requiring help and arrange with them to send over men as wanted. There are numbers of Britishers here who would go back if they had the means of taking them there. If their fares could be advanced they would repay the amount back through the employer and could send assistance to their families here as well. In the long run this would be cheaper than relief. The suggestion was made in all seriousness, and is well worth considering.

The man who has learned to take things as they come, and to let go as they depart, has mastered one of the arts of cheerful and contented living.

TO CAPTURE LILLE NEXT

The Objective of the Allied Offence in Southern France is the Taking of the City

TO STRIKE HARD

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 7.—The two objectives of the allied offensive as disclosed in the official communique issued by the French War Office to-day are undoubtedly the recapture of the city of Lille, in Northern France, and the occupation of Alsatian towns on the road to the Rhine and the important German cities in Baden.

At the present time the allies are advancing slowly along the high-road from Armentieres to Lille with the object of interposing a strong force across the lines of communication between Lille and Roulers. They have constructed trenches to the east of Armentieres on the great highway and are getting ready for the moment when the word comes to strike at the German lines in France. The Germans have been sending counter-attacks against the allies in this region, but, according to the War Office announcement this evening, have been repulsed after meeting with some initial successes.

The advance from Armentieres is not the only one which the allies have attempted. At different times they have advanced against the Roulers-Lille line from points further to the north and severe fighting has been reported at Beauclaire, Cheluvelt, Passchendaele and other towns in the neighbourhood of Ypres. The War Office report issued to-night indicates that the military authorities here have received no word from General Joffre of the action to-day with the exception of a general offensive by the Germans at Lassigny, in the Oise region, in the Argonne, near Verdun, and in Alsace.

STRIKE HARD AND QUICKLY.

As to the status of the French advance against the Alsatian strongholds it is believed here, although the backing of official statements is at present lacking, that the grand plan of the French leaders is to push through Haute Alsace as rapidly as circumstances and the weather will permit and to strike hard and quickly against the cities on the Rhine. This, so the military experts argue, will have the effect of drawing the attention of the German generals from the western fields, where still the action continue fiercely, and will compel them to send new forces to the protection of Baden, with the consequent weakening of their lines from Alsace to the sea. In the region of Steinbach the allies continue to hold the heights which they won on Tuesday, and which are now being organized. The Germans attacked yesterday to the west of Wattweiler, north-west of Sonnheim (Cernay), and at Kohlischlagmin, the same neighbourhood, but were beaten back.

Further to the south, and as part of the southern movement against the Rhenish provinces, the French advanced further in the direction of Altkirch, occupying the forest west of the town and silencing the German heavy artillery.

In Flanders the weather is still so deplorable that no effort has been made at continuing an offensive. The action has been largely confined to artillery engagements and to operations designed to check the activity of the German mine diggers and sappers. The German air attack on Dunkirk is thought to have been largely a part of the diverting tactics, and not of particular significance.

NICKEL AND NIKELS

Thousands of tons of Canadian nickel are at the present time in the armour-plate of German warships, as well as of British and French and Austrian and Russian. From our mines near Copper Cliff, Ont., we have shipped out this nickel to the United States in a crude form, to be refined and reshipped by American companies to the markets of the world. Up till the past couple of months nobody could have raised any objection to this as a matter of business. Canada had a corner on a very useful article. She sold it to the world.

But at the present time there is not an ounce of nickel-plate in any German armament on the Kiel Canal or at Essen or anywhere else that Canad would not gladly take back and the cash price to keep in this country until the war is over. That's practical patriotism; just as selling the nickel abroad was practical business.

If we are so sensibly concerned over the nickel sold to the enemy in times of peace, for Heaven's sake let us be as sensibly and vigorously concerned about the nickels and the dollars we have been sending out of the country to buy things made by foreign labour, paying foreign dividends, for the sake of foreign homes. If we Canadians are really in earnest we can repair all the damage resulting from the export of our nickel to Germany, by refusing to spend our money for foreign-made goods. We cannot get back this nickel; but we can stop the nickkels and dimes and the dollars from getting abroad after the nickel. If, as a matter of business, we helped the enemy in a time of peace, as a bigger matter of business we can help ourselves in a time of war by keeping our own money in this country to keep Canada prosperous.

FRENCH CAPTURE GERMAN TRENCHES AT ST. MIHIEL BY NIGHT ATTACKS

New Position Gives the Allies an Admirable Site for Their Artillery and They Are Bringing Up Additional Heavy Guns--Fighting is Increasing in the Alsace District.

REINFORRCEMENTS FOR GERMAN TROOPS

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 8.—The Allies' attempts to retake the fortified positions at St. Mihiel and thus remove the German wedge extending into their right wing along the Meuse have resulted in serious fighting in that vicinity. It was stated to-day that as a result of a series of night attacks a line of outer trenches had been taken from the Germans. The new positions gives the French an admirable site for their artillery and they have brought up additional heavy guns in order to compete with those mounted by the Germans on the site of Camp de Romans.

These developments and an increase in the fighting in Alsace are the only concrete developments reported this morning. In Alsace the fighting is developing along the line to the east of Belfort, as the German lines at Steinbach and Carnay have held against all attempts of the French to move further forward along the wooded heights commanding the main roads leading to Altkirch. The fighting in the Argonne region is still of an indecisive character. Both sides have made slight gains at certain points, but at none has a decisive advantage been gained.

Advices received here from Dutch sources indicate that the Germans are again moving reinforcements to the west. These are drawn for the most part from the volunteer army which has completed its period of training, and it is believed here that they will be used to bring the units on the fighting front up to full strength. The Germans have "milked" their main army for first line troops to aid Von Hindenburg and now that the French and British are throwing fresh troops into his field, they find themselves forced to strengthen their units in order to cope with them. There has been no improvement in weather conditions, and the situation on the north continues unchanged.

THIS GERMAN CLAIM IS MODEST

SPECIAL CABLE:

BERLIN, Jan. 8, via wireless.—An announcement that ten Russian aircraft have been shot down and crews either taken or killed in the Lods-Lowicz district, was made here to-day. It was stated that the Russian aviators have been unusually active during the last three days, but that because of boldness they have proven easy victims to German aerial guns. The general situation in Poland, it was stated, shows little change.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Miss Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

READY FOR ZEPPELIN RAID

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Further evidences that a German raid probably by Zeppelins, with escorting aeroplanes, is expected, was shown to-day when it became known that Lord Rosebery, acting in his official capacity as Lord Lieutenant of Midlothian, had issued instructions to the population regarding their action in case of a German hostile movement. Civilians are sternly urged to refrain from any hostile actions, but to remain quietly in their homes and let the regular soldiers do the fighting. Other orders, including the mobilization of the home guard, were also included.

It is explained in the accompanying statement that these precautions are intended to get the district into a state of complete preparedness and do no indicate that the attack is considered imminent.

INSIST CARDINAL IS PRISONER

SPECIAL CABLE:

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 8.—Despite the official denials of Germany that there has been the slightest interference with the movements of Cardinal Mercier, all of the local newspapers print extended stories insisting that His Eminence actually is under detention. They assert that armed guards have been posted at the Cardinal's palace and that he and the members of his immediate suits have been prohibited leaving. In addition, Vasdia's News Agency asserts that the Dean and Cure of Cheat have been arrested because they endorsed the Cardinal's utterances that the Belgians were in no way bound to obey the orders of German officials. Advices from Berlin indicate that the report that Cardinal Mercier has been interefered with has created much excitement in Catholic circles.

ATTACKS WEAKENING

German Attempts to Cross Bzura and Rawka Rivers Are Losing Their Strength

A RUSSIAN SURPRISE

SPECIAL CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 7.—The German attacks on the Bzurka and the Rawka Rivers for the last fortnight have been steadily weakening, tremendous losses having reduced their strength.

The Russians on Tuesday took the offensive in North Poland with brilliant success. There have been signs since the slackening of the German attack on the central position that the enemy was intending to move on the flanks of the Russians, but the latter advanced first and surprised the German leading column on the River Rosrova and drove it back with heavy loss.

Before they were able to prepare their resistance many prisoners were taken by the Russians, who are now pressing in force close on the heels of the German northern army.

This victory has great value since it has upset the first move in General Von Hindenburg's new scheme which he conceived after the direct attack along the Warsaw roads was abandoned.

Advance in Bukowina

Bucharest, Jan. 7.—The Russian advance in Bukowina continues with great success towards Dorna Vatro. Thousands of Austrian civilian refugees have passed over Roumania territory in flight towards Vienna.

Only Eight Were Seized

British Embassy Issued a Statement in Relation to Detention of American Cargoes

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The British Embassy to-night issued a statement of facts in relation to the seizure and detention of American cargoes by British war vessels.

The embassy statement follows:

"Out of 778 vesels that have proceeded from the United States to Scandinavian countries, Holland and Italy since the beginning of the war, only eight have been put into the Prize Courts, and one of these has been released, leaving only seven detained for decision by the Prize Court. By far the greater number of these detained for examination have been already released.

"With regard to the purchase of cargoes the British Government has purchased many cargoes of copper, and has not yet condemned or confiscated any neutral cargo or consignment although some are awaiting adjudication.

"Shipments for Italy in Italian steamers of goods placed on the embargo list of the Italian Government and consigned to named persons are free."

A Mutual Arrangement.

Secretary Bryan has received a personal note from Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British Ambassador, stating that inasmuch as the re-exportation of rosin and turpentine, known as "naval stores," would probably be prohibited by Italy and Holland, arrangements would soon be completed whereby these products could be shipped without difficulty to those countries from the United States.

The British Ambassador also issued the following statement:

"Articles for Holland, apart from copper, petroleum and grain (except rice and corn), which must be consigned to the Netherlands Government, should be consigned to the Netherlands Overseas Trust in order to insure non-interference."

Britain's Note To-day.

London, Jan. 7.—Britain's preliminary reply to the American note concerning the interruption of American shipping by British warships was discussed by the Cabinet to-day and will be forwarded shortly, probably to-morrow, to the United States Government. This first reply will be supplemented later by a more detailed note, framed after further inquiries have been made. No response from the United States is expected upon the receipt of the preliminary reply, which will be in the nature of an acknowledgment of the American note, and a general statement of the unusual conditions faced by the allies, and the many new problems suddenly thrust upon Britain.

Surprise is expressed at the Foreign Office at rumours of the detention of the steamer Denver at the Orkney Islands. Specific instructions were given that the Denver, which bears cotton for Bremen, should not be detained longer than was necessary to identify her. She has been released.

Christians Murdered in Asia Minor

SPECIAL CABLE:

ATHENS, Jan. 7. — The Greek cruiser Helle arrived at Durazzo yesterday for the purpose of protecting the Greeks there in case of the insurgent capture of the town. The position of the Greeks in Turkey is daily becoming more precarious. Murders of Christians throughout Asia Minor are of constant occurrence. The latest outrage occurred at Karaoglou, near Manissa, where three notables, including two archbishops, were arrested. Greek Consuls are everywhere subjected to bitter persecution. Graeco-Turkish relations are rapidly becoming excessively strained.

Messages from the Italian frontier say that in Italy all public meetings and demonstrations in favour of Italy's intervention in the war have been forbidden at the Italian Consulates in Switzerland. Italians liable to military service are just now reporting themselves.

THE ABSINTHE BAN WILL BE PERMANENT.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—The Cabinet has approved a measure for submission to Parliament, making permanent the prohibition of the sale of absinthe and other similar liquors. The Government finds that the military decree forbidding absinthe affects the population beneficially.

The Cabinet has also approved a bill which provides that no licenses shall be issued to new establishments for the sale of spirituous liquors, unless accessory to a restaurant.

"THE BATTLE CRY."

Charles Neville Buck

"Ye've likened me to Milt McBriar. . . . That was a lie, too. Ye've said some right-bitter things, an' I can't answer ye. If ye was a man I could."

"And if I were a man, what would you say to me?" she inquired.

"I reckon"—his words came with an icy coldness—"I'd be pretty liable to tell ye to eternally go to hell."

"And if I were a man," she promptly retorted, "I'd endeavour with every ounce of manhood I had in me to see that you, and the others like you, did go there. I'd try to see that you went the appropriate way, through the trap of the gallows."

She saw his attitude stiffen and his face flush brick-red to the cheek-bones. But after a few seconds she heard him speak with a fair counterfeit of amusement.

"Wall, it 'pears like we've both got to be right-smart disappointed—on account of your bein' a woman."

And that time it was she who flushed.

"I don't hardly know why I'm takin' the trouble to make any statement to ye," mused Anse Havey. "It ain't hardly worth while. Ye came up here with your mind fixed. Ye've read a lot of hearsay stuff in newspapers, an' facts ain't hardly apt to count for much. . . . I reckon afore ye decides to hang me ye'll let me have my day in Court, won't ye?"

"Before your own Judge and your own Jury?" she naively asked him. "That's the way you usually have your day in Court, isn't it, Mr. Havey?"

"It's you that's settin' as the Court just now," he disconcertingly reminded her. "I reckon ye can judge for yeself how much I owns ye."

In spite of herself she smiled. "I rather think I can," she admitted. "Approximately at least."

"I think I understand ye, better than ye do me," he went on very slowly. "I think ye're plumb honest in all the notions ye fotched up here despite the fact that most of 'em are wrong. Ye've done come with a heap of money, to teach folks what you 'low they'd ought to know. Ye didn't know that they'd ruther have ignorance than charity. Ye think that you an' Almighty God have gone in partners fer the regeneration of these mountains, where no woman has ever been insulted an' no man has to bar his door against thievery; where all we asks is to be left alone. I reckon every day ye're wonderin', 'is my halo on straight?' It's nat'ral enough that ye should be right scornful of a man that some newspaper reporter has called a murderer."

His voice fell away and Juanita heard again the beating of the hammers out in the barn.

"Is that all?" she asked. But the man shook his head and stood looking down on her until under the spell of his unusual eyes, she felt like screaming out, "Talk if you want to, but for heaven's sake don't hypnotize me. It isn't fair!"

"Mebby ef ye'd stopped to think about things a little more deliberate," he thoughtfully resumed, "ye'd have seen that I didn't have no quarrel with your plans. Mebby I might even have been able to help ye. I could have told ye for one thing that whether the ways here be right or wrong, they've done stood fer two hundred years. Ye've got to go slow changin' 'em. Ye can't hardly pull up a poplar saplin' with one jerk. Thar's a tap root underneath it that runs down half way to h——l.

"If people hyarbouts is distrustful of foreign teachers an' ways, it's because of the samples they've had. A feller came here once from the settlements to teach school. He was a smart upstandin' feller an' well liked. A man by the name of Trevor.

"When folks found out that he was locatin' coal an' buyin' their land fer next to nothin'—robbin' them of their birthright—it looked right smart like somebody might kill him. I warned him away to save his life. Ye've got to make folks forget Trevor afore ye makes 'em trust you."

"Thank you," said Juanita coldly. "I'll try to show them that I'm not another Trevor. Are you warning me away to save my life, too?"

"I'm tol'able ignorant," went on the man, "but I've read a few books an' one of 'em told the story of the Trojan hoss. I wanted ter see what kind of a critter you was a-ridin' into these hills. I come to this cabin the night ye got here to find out."

"I thought so," she quietly answered. "I was to be inspected like an immigrant, and the Lord of the Land was to decide whether or not I should be sent back."

"Put it that way if ye've a mind to," he imperturbably answered. "Ye was comin' to be a school teacher here. Well, I'd done been a school teacher here. . . . I see your smile. . . . Ye're wonderin' what I could teach. Maybe after all it's a right good idea to teach A B C's, before ye starts in with algebra an' rhetoric. Ye wouldn't have me as a friend an' I reckon that won't break my heart."

"Then," said the girl, looking up and meeting his eyes with a flash of challenge, "I shall endeavour to get along without your favour. We could hardly have met on common ground, at best. I shall teach the Ten Commandments, including 'Thou shalt not kill.' I shall teach that to lie hidden behind a bush and shoot an unsuspecting enemy is cowardly and despicable. I would not be willing to tell them that they must live and die vassals to feudal tyranny."

"No," he agreed, "ye couldn't hardly outrage your holy conscience by tryin' to teach 'em things in a way they could understand, could ye? If Little Jeb had a-come to ye, like he came to me, askin' the name of the man he sought to kill, ye would have said ter him, 'It was So-and-So, but ye mustn't harm him, because somebody writ in a book two thousand years ago that killin' is a sin.' An' the h——l of it is ye'd 'low such talk would satisfy him. Ye couldn't do so such wicked thing as to stop an' reflect that he's a mountain boy, an' that for two hundred years the blood in his veins hes been a-comin' down to him full of grudge-nursin' an' hate. Ye couldn't make allowances for the fact that he wasn't hatched in a barnyard to peck at corn-cobs an' berries, but in an eagle's nest—that he's a bird of prey. Ye couldn't consider the fact that the killin' instinct runs in the current of his blood an' was drunk in at his mother's breast. Ye'd just teach barnyard lessons to young eagles, an' that's why ye might as well go home."

"I'm grateful for this teacher's course," retorted Juanita hotly, "and I'm not going home."

Then Anse Havey went on. "But I know that if I'd talked that-a-way he'd just about have gone out in the la'rel an' got somebody. It might not 'a' been the right feller, and he might have found that out later—when he couldn't undo his deed. I reckon ye never had a father murdered, did ye?"

"Hardly," answered the girl with a scornful toss of her head. "You see I, wasn't reared among gunfighters."

"Well, I have," responded the man with imperious steadiness. "I was in the Legislature down at Frankfort when it happened, a-helpin' to make the laws that govern this State. I was fer them laws in theory — but when that word came, I paired off with a Republican so's not to lose my vote on the floor of the House, an' I come back here to these hills an' got that feller. I reckon I ought to be ashamed to tell ye that, but I'm so plumb ign'rant that I can't feel it. I knew how Jeb felt, an' so I held him off with a promise to wait. Of course ye couldn't accept the help of a man like that. . . ."

He turned and withdrew his hands from his pockets.

"I'm through," he added, "an' I'm obleeged to ye fer hearkenin' to me."

Juanita rose and stood before him, and despite his bitter resentment of her scorn, he recognized in her a sort of courage he had never before seen in a woman; a courage of conviction and the crusader's deep purpose. And she was very beautiful and gallant as she stood there and shook her head.

"There is something in your point of view, Mr. Havey," she reluctantly acknowledged. "But it is all based on twisted and distorted principle.

"I don't think myself a saint. I guess I'm pretty weak. My first appeal to you was pure weakness. But I stand for ideas that the experience of the world has vindicated and for that reason I am going to win. That is why, although I'm a girl with none of your physical power, and no gunfighters at my back, you are secretly afraid of me. That is why you are making unfair war on me. I stand for the implacable force of civilization that must sooner or later sweep you away and utterly destroy your dominance."

For the first time Bad Anse Havey's face lost its impassiveness. His eyes clouded and became puzzled, surprised. "I reckon I don't hardly follow ye," he said. "If ye wants it to be enemies, all right, but I ain't never made no war on ye. I don't make war on women-folks, an' besides I wouldn't make a needless war nohow. All I've got to do is to give ye enough rope an' watch ye hang yourself.'"

"If you think that," she demanded with a quick upleaping of anger in her pupils, "why did you feel it necessary to prevent my buying land? Why do you coerce your vassals, under fear of death, to refuse my offers? Why, if my school means no menace, do you refuse it standing room to start its fight?"

The man's pose stiffened.

"Who told ye I'd hindered anybody from sellin' ye land?"

"Wherever I inquire it is the same thing. They must ask permission of Bad Anse Havey before they can do as they wish with their own."

"By God, that's another lie," he said shortly. "But I reckon ye believe that, too. I did advise folks hereabouts against sellin' to strangers, but that was afore ye come." He paced the length of the room a while then halted before her.

"Some of that property," he went on, and this time his voice was passionate in its earnestness, "has enough coal an' timber on it to make its owners rich some day. Have ye seen any of the coal-minin' sections of these hills Well, go an' have a look. Ye won't find any mountaineer richer fer the development. Ye'll find 'em plundered, an' cheated an' robbed of their homes by your civilizer furriner. I've done aimed ter protect my folks against bein' looted. I aims to go on pertectin' 'em."

"Ignorance won't protect them," she insisted.

Suddenly he demanded without preface, "How old are you?"

Her glance questioned his face and his direct eyes told her that there was no impertinence in the interrogation. "I am twenty-two," she curtly replied.

"Twenty-two!" he repeated after her, she thought a little scornfully. "I'm just five years mor than that, but I'm thirty years older than you in everything but years. I've seen enough of all this thing down here not to get wrought up about it. I've got enough lead right here in my own body now," he clapped one hand to his chest and went on with the same fixed expression and the same calculatedly calm voice, "to kill all the leaders of the McBriar crowd, if it were run back into bullet moulds again. Every day's liable to be my last day. I've shook the hands of men thet was warm in the mornin' an' gripped mine in friendship, an' thet was cold an' lifeless at sundown—like his'n." He jerked his head towards the bed and the sheeted form upon it. "Yes, an' I've tried to keep the scores tol'able even. I'm in a fix to lay by theories an' look facts in the face, I reckon. I don't hold out peace offerin's to men that are seekin' to knife me. I fight the devil with fire an' I tries to make it hot."

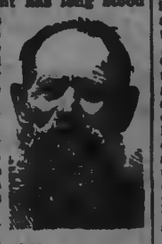
Justice of Peace Praises Dr. Chase's Ointment

After Nine Years of Agony He Escaped an Operation by Using This Great Healing Agent.

As a means of healing sores and wounds that defy ordinary treatment Dr. Chase's Ointment has long stood supreme. It is known far and wide as a positive cure for eczema and piles. Whatever uncertainty there may be about the results obtained by the use of medicines taken internally there can be no question of the healing of the skin when Dr. Chase's Ointment is applied.



MR. HEATH.

You can actually see with your own eyes just what takes place. The sore parts are cleansed, and gradually the new skin is formed and the sore becomes smaller and smaller, until it finally disappears. It is often wonderful the results which are accomplished in a single night by the use of this great healing ointment.

Mr. N. A. Heath, J.P., Fitch Bay, Que., writes:—"Nine years ago I was taken with an abcess, and cannot begin to describe what I have suffered as a result. I was examined by two doctors, both of whom said I would have to undergo an operation to be cured. Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment, it has rendered an operation unnecessary, and has completely cured me. I cannot say enough in praise of this wonderful ointment which cured me after nine years of agony."

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GREY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hairs Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, grey, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

THE SUBMARINE'S EYE

Periscope Has Been Greatly Improved Since First Reflecting Prism

The submarine's two great assets in warfare are her invisibility and the possession of those terrible organs of destruction—torpedoes.

Yet her invisibility to others would be useless if she herself could not see, and this faculty is made practicable by the periscope.

Immense strides have been made in the improvement of this medium of sight. The first one was a short tube capped by a reflecting prism, which threw horizontal rays downwards through the tube on to a focus. This focus was opposite an eye-piece, on which an observer was obliged to keep his eye concentrated.

On the telescopic principle, the periscope's length was increased, and then the introduction of the well known camera-obscura idea enabled a picture of the sea's surface to be reflected on a piece of paper laid flat near the steering wheel.

NEW YORK OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPHER

Escapes Nervous Breakdown —Strength Gradually Ebbing Away. Made Well and Strong by Vinol.

New York City: — "I have found Vinol to be a godsend as a reconstructive tonic for a run-down constitution. I am an official photograher and for a long time I suffered from weakness and general debility, and soon realized that my strength was fast leaving me. I tried different tonics without benefit, but one day I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it. Before I had taken two bottles I had gained in health and strength so I could do 100% more work than before.

"Vinol is the best tonic I ever took and I cannot say enough in its praise to do it justice."—WILLIAM KOHLHOFF, 3 Irving Place, New York.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol which makes it so successful in overcoming such conditions.

If you are weak, sickly, run-down, and overworked try a bottle of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, with the understanding we will return your money if it does not help you.

SECOND COURAGE COMES TO SOLDIERS

Impossible to be Indifferent to Danger But Manhood Rises Superior to Instinct of Self-Preservation

The man who has not been under fire always desires eagerly to know what were the feelings of the man who has been during this ordeal, says the medical correspondent of The London Times, in an article dealing with the psychology of courage. It is probable, says the writer, that he does not frequently find the information given by veterans either satisfying or enlightening. Being under fire for the first time exists, as a psychological problem, only in the most shadowy form until the idiosyncrasies of the individual man have been taken into account.

It has been my good fortune to enjoy many opportunities of talking with soldiers who have been wounded in action. I have visited Belgian, French and British hospitals at various periods, and, as a medical man, have been afforded special facilities for study. These opportunities have convinced me that no two men feel quite the same sensations whilst under fire for the first time, and also that a man is capable of experiencing quite different emotions at different periods of the same day, though his circumstances have not changed.

For examples, from the statement of a man who experienced shell fire for the first time in his life in the neighborhood of Arras, I gathered that his first feeling had been one of great interest and curiosity. A "Black Maria" fell some hundreds of yards away and sent up a great column of smoke, and at the same time shrapnel was bursting at no long distance. But suddenly there came home the realization that these shells were intended to work havoc, and that, in fact, the position occupied was full of danger. "Then I felt exactly as anybody would feel the moment after he discovered that he was in a field with an angry bull. Every instinct of mind and body prompted flight."

Terror of Anticipation

A second man told me that from the moment he came under fire—in a trench—he experienced the most lively terror. "But the feeling passed away after a while, leaving me rather tired and only a little anxious." A third declared that he had been so nervous before going into action that the event put the anticipations of it to shame. He had regarded himself as a dead man, and woke up, under fire, to the realisation that his chances of coming through safely were really very good.

Each of these men acquitted himself bravely; two of them were wounded. Clearly, when physical instinct played the coward (I use the word in no cansorious sense) moral restraint effected victory. There came a second courage a courage open-eyed and of clear vision which, whilst not despising danger, was able to discount it. Under fire these men found a self hitherto unsuspected, that elusive quality which for want of a better title is called manhood.

The achievement of "second courage" is of course a well-recognised stage in the seasoning process of war. I heard a little story from the lips of a British officer which seems to me to illustrate the genesis of it very convincingly—and the story is worth telling for its own sake. At a certain period of the present war some new troops were sent to hold a particular trench. They suffered a really terrible bombardment with shells and shrapnel, and at last about 100 of them evacuated the position and retired. Presently they met a senior officer, who stopped them and inquired what had happened.

Courage by Suggestion

On being informed the officer looked grave and told the men he would be very sorry to have to use any coercive measures with men whom he knew to be brave fellows. He spoke to them for a short time and steadied them. Then he pointed out that the way of duty lay backwards towards the position they had left. "I'll walk back a part of the way with you." He did so. The men returned to their posts and gave a good account of themselves. In the words of my informant, they "were all right after that."

An officer who had himself seen much service told me before the beginning of the present war that the soldier who said he was indifferent to fire was merely a braggart. That is generally true, though I personally know of a few exceptions. But equally true it is that a man develops a certain callousness, or rather indifference. He learns first to control, then to measure, his fear. He learns to discount possibilities just as the ordinary railway traveler does. And the work in hand gradually engages and holds more and more of his attention. There comes a time when, in the words of an army doctor who was wounded near Ypres, "You want to go back not because it is pleasant there, but because staying away is just impossible."

While therefore the man who has not been under fire cannot safely count upon experiencing this or that particular feeling when his hour comes—this depending so much upon temperament and circumstance—he can, I believe, count upon achieving the second courage which is the priceless possession of the veteran. He can count upon "making good" in a moral and spiritual sense;; upon reaching courage even through the deepest valleys of mistrust and fear. Under fire he may lose every preconceived notion he ever cherished or shunned, but it is at least in the highest degree probable that he will find imself. And it is also probable that that self will be worth the finding.

COURAGE WILL COME IF IT IS CULTIVATED

So Says General Baden-Powell in Discussing the Four Big C's a Good Soldier Should Possess

Courage, common sense, cunning, and cheerfulness! The cultivation of these four attributes is, in the opinion of Sir Robert Baden-Powell, quite as important as drill in the making of a modern soldier. The question naturally arises can courage be cultivated? In the opinion of Sir Robert it can, and without it a soldier is practically useless in the field.

He tells a story to illustrate his point of General Nogi, the great Japanese leader, who displayed in his life and in his death the highest personal courage. General Nogi once said that, though timid by nature, he had developed this quality by stern self-discipline. When he found a job which caused him apprehension or fear, he forced himself to face it, and to repeat it again and again until it no longer had any terrors for him. "It is that taking oneself firmly in hand," says Sir Robert in his book: "Quick Training for War," "that enables a man to stick it out against the impulse of his knees to give in or to run away in a crisis."

Courage is born of confidence, and no matter how timid a soldier may be at first, if he knows that he can handle a rifle and sword well, manage a horse, has some good officers, and is healthy enough to march with the best, he can very soon cultivate it.

In regard to the second of the C's—common sense—Sir Robert points out that, although the science of strategy and tactics looks formidable in the text-books, these really only lay down definite principles and examples which serve to guide the leaders when applying their common sense to the situation in hand. "No two situations," he says, "are ever precisely the same, and it is therefore impossible to lay down exact rules that should guide in every case."

They have an effective way of teaching common sense among the South African police. As a rule, the police patrols go about the districts in pairs. When, however, a man is not sufficiently intelligent or self-reliant, he is sent alone on long journeys in order to cultivate and develop his common sense and self-reliance. "Develop," says Sir Robert, "the intelligence of the individual, and the whole unit will be efficient."

One of the secrets of Napoleon's success was his abnormal cunning, which enabled him to formulate plans of his own for counteracting those of the enemy which were reported to him by his intelligence officers. For quick training in cunning the best school is that of scouting. "The first steps," says Sir Robert, "in making a good scout are to teach him observation and deduction, noticing every detail about the enemy and deducing a meaning from the points observed. Then, by a little imagination, the enemy's movements or intentions are read and counteracting steps can be taken with every advantage."

The Boers, during the South African war, won many a fight through their cunning. Like the Germans in the present war, who have scored in the vital manner of concealing their artillery, they were clever in hiding their field guns, when they were able to shell the British troops for a considerable time before the latter could locate the position of the Boers' artillery sufficiently well to reply to it effectively.

"The Hero of Mafeking" lays great stress on the value of cheerfulness. "The spirit," he says, "which possesses the men is a tremendous factor for success in war, and the presence of a few infallibly cheerful men in the ranks, and more especially among the leaders, is of a value that cannot be over-estimated in an arduous campaign or when things are going against you. . . . I have known of more than one officer who was accepted for service, not so much on account of his military ability, as for his indomitable spirits, which inevitably develop a brighter feeling among those around him."

LIFE ON WARSHIP IN BAD WEATHER

Modern Fighting Craft Not Ideal in Case of Storms—Too Low in Water and Lack Buoyancy

"Battened Down" means much more to the modern sailor than to him of Nelson's time. In weather of which the old ships, with their high freeboards and protecting bulwarks, took little notice, the modern ship is battened down. The open, unprotected upper deck is swept fore and aft by high seas, and the smaller the class of ship the more is she affected.

Everything that science can contrive has been done to alleviate the discomforts of "battening down," which is closing all upper deck hatches to keep the seas which sweep over the deck from penetrating to the interior of the ship, but even then the mess decks are often awash. However, it is the lack of exercise and fresh air that tell most heavily on the health of the crew.

The difficulties with which old-time Admirals had to contend, as far as the health of their men was concerned, were not bad weather but lack of fresh provisions and fresh water. These do not affect the modern seamen at all, as plenty of fresh water can be distilled and fresh provisions can always be replenished at the same time as the coal bunkers are refilled. An old-time sailing ship would ride out the heaviest of gales without taking much water on board, and even when forced to batten down the discomforts of between decks were infinitesimal compared with those of to-day.

It may not be generally known that with nearly every new type of ship the living space afforded to the men has grown less and less. This is due to a multitude of causes—increased speed, increase in the size of guns, and the multitude of auxiliary engines with which a warship is fitted—so we no longer find the great, airy mess decks of even thirty years ago, but a multitude of iron boxes which, at the best of times, have to be artificially ventilated. When all natural ventilation is stopped the iron beams and sides begin to sweat and the atmosphere becomes foul and rank. Yet it is doubtful if in a general way the men trouble much about these conditions; cards and other games are played or sleep is wooed; the sailor now has a little motto of his own: "Hard wind—less work," and it really works out like that when the upper deck is merely a mass of tumbling waters.

As a spectacle a modern fleet in a gale of wind is an imposing sight, and one hardly knows whether to give the palm to the stately leviathan or the perky torpedo craft. A battleship can hardly be called an ideal sea-going craft; she is much too massive to be buoyant and too cumbered with top hamper to recover herself easily. So she staggers along butting at the seas but never trying to ride them; down will go her nose right up to the fore turrets, then, as she rises, hundreds of tons of water are lifted to be flung aft in great torrents. And yet for some reason known only to itself the navy prays that when it goes into action it may be in a gale of wind. Our men believe, rightly or wrongly, that no other navy has had so much sea training as itself, and that, therefore, the worse the weather conditions the better it will be for them in action.

The small cruisers and torpedo craft have nothing to do with weather; their job at sea is to get from one destination to another as quickly as possible. How they live through it is a mystery, for very often the only things above water are the bridge and the funnels; then one may see them poised on the crest of a wave with fifty feet of keel showing at each end. —Navy and Army.

Let Him Die in Peace

Two little groups, one German and one French, were entrenched within a few yards of each other in the Argonne forest. The wounded were everywhere. The Frenchmen ran up a white flag.

"Will you cease firing for an hour?" they asked. "Our lieutenant is dying and the noise pains him."

So the Germans ceased, and in a little more than an hour a young man walked forward from the French trenches and bowed like a courtier to the enemy.

"It is over now," said he. "We thank you, for we loved him."

And as the French soldier returned to his men the German captain rose in his place, his hand at the salute.

Peter II., a famous Vladika or ruler of the Montenegrins in peace and war.

By Richard G. Conover.

The hallowed eve drawn onward. The brothers Martinovic kindle their consecrated torches. They pray fervently to the new-born God. Each draws a cup of wine, and seizing the sacred torches they rush forward into the darkness. Wherever there was a Turk, there came the five avengers. Those who would not be baptized were hewn down, every one. They that embraced the cross were taken as brothers before the Vladika. Gathered in Cettinje the people hailed with songs of joy the reddening dawn of the Christmas morning. All Cmagora was now free.

—"Eve Oslobod" Song of "The Montenegrin Vespers."

MONTENEGRO, the Toy Nation of Europe, has been fighting hard in the present big conflict, even though her deeds of valor have not been flashed frequently in war bulletins. Bulk of territory and size of armies have so spotlighted the operations of the giant combatants that the battling of the Tom Thumb kingdom of the Balkans has been overshadowed and overlooked. But man for man, crosses and medals are as much the due of her soldiers, as they are of the fighters of the mightier war machines.

Who is Montenegro? What's she done? In the big row now on, what's her "kick in" based upon? What excuse was there for a mean bully of a nation to slap her? Bad enough it was for Austria to set after little Servia, but why spank Montenegro? Where is she, anyway—what particular section of the map shall we find her on, she is so small? All natural questions. Montenegro has satisfying answers for them, very satisfying.

During this stupendous war, when the spirits of soldiers heroes nephyr into the shadowy Hall of Valhalla, there may be one entrant at whom the glory winners of the earth already resident in these famous shades will look askance.

"Who is this that claims a right to join the group of the brave and the great?" perhaps may inquire the spirit aids of Napoleon or Alexander or Frederick. Then will follow a formal challenge for credentials, and the report:—

"He is a Montenegrin private, shot a few moments ago while charging an Austrian redoubt."

"Why comes he here from such an inconsequential nation to dwell among the dead of mighty countries?" a sepulchral voice of authority may inquire from the dais down the aisle.

"He says he has had to fight for his independence all his life, and his forefathers for five hundred years before him have done likewise. He knows not the meaning of the word peace. He has not bowed his neck to the vassal yoke these five centuries, although every other nation of the Balkans, and many others on the Continent, have kissed the rod of subjugation. He has been defeated but never conquered or annexed. Yet he numbers but 500,000, and his earthly home comprises but 4,500 square miles."

"He is of us; admit him!" no doubt the spirit voices of the brave departed breathe out in unison.

For the Montenegrin soldier has not a counterpart as a never discouraged, aggressive battler among all the fighting men of the globe. Tally up his fighting ratio to fighting material that is available, and his superiority is apparent. Think of it, in a population of 500,000 this Toy Nation of Europe is able to put under arms 125,000 soldiers! This means that of every four human beings in Montenegro—women, children and babies included in this census, mind you—one is an armed and ready fighter. They figure in this martial Black Mountain country that the business of life is to fight. True, there are those who engage in trade—a few here and there—but in bulk the Montenegrin is a man who from babyhood loves to fondle firearms.

A Montenegrin must serve his flag in uniform at least forty-four years. Some of them insist on extending this service to an even half century, for they beg to march, thousands of them, when they are but twelve years old, and insist at seventy that they are good soldiers as ever they were in their lives. But the government feels compelled to keep the "too-younge" and "too-olde" in somewhat strict leash, so this has been the military law:—

Class 1—Recruits. All males eighteen to nineteen years of age. Forty-eight days a year at drill with the army and fifteen days a year at manoeuvres.

Class 2—All males from twenty to fifty-two years of age constitute the active army. It is a straight thirty-three years of service.

Class 3—Reserves. All males from fifty-three to sixty-two years of age.

And the men of sixty-two invent lies to stay in the service longer.

Repeatedly, in time of Montenegro's dire need, it has been demonstrated that she could arm and send forth to fight, in addition to her three levy provided classes, 17,500 youths between the ages of thirteen and eighteen and 38,500 old men between the ages of sixty-two and seventy-three.

Montenegro has whipped Turkey so many times that history is monotonous with the record. Her fame as a fighter, in fact, comes from the workmanlike way in which she polished off one Sultan after another. Bulgaria, Servia, Greece, Albania and Macedonia failed in this formidable task many, many times, but the free steppers of the Cmagora country have been doing it for 500 years, and they have always counted a renewal of the job. To slip a few shots across the frontier into Turkish troops stationed in Albania has always been deemed an allowable—in fact, commendable—performance even in the piping times of peace. No Montenegrin king has ever been able to stop the practice. He might lose his throne if he tried over hard. He looks the other way.

Eagerness to get at the Turk was evidenced in the first Balkan War of 1912. Many months had been spent by Bulgarian, Servian and Grecian diplomatists whispering and bobbobbing and arranging for trouble. The share that Montenegro had in the formation of the confederation destined to trim the Turk was comparatively small. Yet in the last analysis, who started the war? Montenegro, of course. October 8, 1912, she issued formal proclamation of the commencement of hostilities, the more cautious Balkan States holding themselves to the issuance of an ultimatum, giving the Sultan ample time to answer. He answered October 17, 1912, with a declaration of war against Bulgaria and Servia, and Greece thereupon declared war on Turkey. It was plain that Montenegro knew her Turk better than her subsequent allies, and deemed the best diplomacy that which struck the first blow. She did it when she was not at all positive what the other three States would do through haggling diplomacy.

The pretext for the Montenegrin declaration was ample—for Black Mountain war purposes. The Turks had besieged a Montenegrin post, somewhere, and the apology of the Turkish Minister at Cettinje was not accepted. So nine days ahead of all the allies the Toy Nation sailed in. Down the mountains the Montenegrins marched. Men with a gun always in hand are ever ready. King Nicholas ordered an immediate advance into Turkish territory, and almost immediately the Albanian or Turkish frontier was reached and the first shot of the war fired.

Seven months of bombardment and siege before the ancient Montenegrin port of Scutari fell. This place had been the capital of Montenegro until 1304, when it passed into the hands of the Republic of Venice. But not by conquest. It was exchanged for a fortress the Black Mountain Vladika needed and an annual subsidy of 1,000 gold ducats. A new Montenegrin capital was established. But from that day to this Montenegrins have hankered after the port. Turkey got it as a result of wars with Venice. The more hot-headed Montenegrins have a habit of stating that had Scutari been wrested from them by force they would have had it back long ago.

The Montenegrin soldier covered himself with glory and honor during the siege of Scutari. He reached his bombardment points after sharp fights at Rerune and Tusi and the capture of the Turkish fort at Chipchanik. The big guns opened on the port town October 27, less than three weeks after war had been declared. Batteries kept hard at it on the north, the west and the south, as well as from the island of Vranjina in the Lake of Scutari, where King Nicholas watched this action. This kept up with intervals of cessation, when the infantry was employed, until April 2, 1912.

On that date a general storming was ordered. The Montenegrin troops assaulted tier after tier of intrenchments in concert with a bomb throwing plan that brought them a notable but sanguinary success. Two hundred picked soldiers, each carrying a bomb, clambered up the mountain on which the defences were located, cut the wire entanglements and, getting to close quarters, threw the bombs in among the Turks. So deadly was the fire of the Sultan's soldiers that every man of the 200—selected from different battalions to divide up the glory—was killed outright.

But they had accomplished their task. The way had been opened for the rush of the storming party. The Montenegrin infantry poured into the trenches. For one more desperate hour the Turks held their ground, but the Montenegrins finally planted their flag on the ramparts, losing 300 killed and wounded in addition to the bomb throwers. Nothing more heroic was done in the war by the soldiers of any of the warring States, although the Montenegrin attack on the 2,000 feet high Tarabosh Hill from the valley upward, and again the assault of the Turkish post on Shiroka Mountain during the earlier part of the campaign, were valorous performances, indeed. The winter had also tried the mettle of the Black Mountain troops. The snowfalls were unusually heavy, the drifts being knee deep. One memorable storm lasted thirty-two hours, the wind blowing a furious gale while a Montenegrin battalion was posted 3,000 feet up Mount Kraja. The men were without tents or shelter, with the thermometer below zero. It is recorded that many of them sacrificed their greatcoats to protect the guns and ammunition.

With Scutari within his grasp, King Nicholas was halted by the arrival of the war ships of six great Powers off Scutari and an armistice. They didn't scare Nicholas. He waited a decent length of time, and that means a very short time for a man of the Montenegrin breed, and when he saw the dickering meant nothing of advantage to his country he assaulted again, April 4. The admirals came ashore at the instance of the Sultan and told Nicholas he should "lay off" the fighting until they had settled new boundaries.

"Do I get Scutari in that new boundary arrangement?" demanded the Montenegrin king, curtly.

The admirals begged him to wait a few days and see. They didn't know themselves and were mortally afraid of doing something with their big guns for which diplomacy would court martial them afterward. King Nicholas waited until April 10. All he got then was a long communication from the Powers, meaning nothing in particular for him.

At once he ordered the bombardment of Scutari resumed and the admirals out in the harbor were scared out of their cabins as they heard the siege guns going at it again. They hurried ashore to the fighting king again, crying, "Stop it! You shouldn't do it, you know!"

They persuaded him to let up until the very latest desires of the allies—Bulgaria, Servia and Greece—could be ascertained.

King Nicholas waited. His three allies finally notified the Powers that they regarded the last propositions submitted to them as an acceptable basis for the arrangement of peace. The Montenegrin monarch diagnostedly ordered an immediate assault on Brditza and Bardonjolt, the last positions to be taken in front of the coveted Scutari. On April 21 Esaad Pacha, the Turkish commander, hoisted the white flag, declaring that as he had no more food he must give up. Nicholas agreed to let him march out with the honors of war. The Montenegrin standard was run up on the citadel, and the soldiers of the Black Mountain poured in. Scutari had fallen.

The admirals and the diplomatists were aghast. Here was the Toy Nation of Europe openly flouting them! Although they had let Nicholas do it all alone, the Balkan States went wild with approval when they heard the news. And at the Montenegrin capital, Cettinje, the populace were in a delirium of joy.

But the diplomatists got busy. They brought pressure to bear from every quarter. They suggested compensations in another way that would not mean the acquisition of Scutari. The Montenegrin King gave them this dignified and patriotic reply:—

"In the five hundred years of darkness in the Balkans, Montenegro did not exist by the good will of European diplomacy. Montenegro may die without Scutari, but she will die with honor."

Finally after Austria, Italy, England, France and Germany had warned Nicholas, in varying form and language, that he would be destroyed if he held on, Russia added her perhaps reluctant advice. She wanted Montenegro to keep Scutari and Nicholas knew it. But she counselled that he let go—just now—and knowing Russia for a powerful ally he gave in. Montenegro gave up hard won Scutari, receiving in its place an extension of territory to the south in the newly created State of Albania and a liberal extension on the east in the Sandjak of Novi-Bazar. The campaign cost the fighting Tom Thumb country 11,200 dead and wounded. The Montenegrin soldier proved himself in 1913 the same valiant battler that he was in 1413.

A battle that the Montenegrin fighter is proud to remember was fought in the spring of 1712 in the neighborhood of Podgorica, where many another encounter took place century after century with the Turk. Sultan Achmet III. sent a picked army of 60,000 men into the Black Mountain country to reduce Cmagora to subjection. He did this because the Montenegrins had invaded Hersegovina and Albania to aid the Russian Tsar in protecting the Christians in the Sultan's dominions. The little nation was outnumbered ten to one, but they fell upon their enemy so suddenly and impetuously that he was completely defeated and driven back into Albania with a loss of eighty-six standards.

As a following of this memorable battle Montenegro within the next twenty years was three times invaded and the Turk beaten back each time. One battle during these invasions lasted seven days, during which 1,500 mountaineers put 20,000 Turks to flight, because of their advantageous position, good marksmanship and great staying qualities. The epoch was a counterpart of the Montenegrin soldier's feats three hundred years before. It is authentically recorded that between the years 1424 to 1436 there was a constant war with the Turk and no fewer than sixty-three battles fought and sixty-three victories won over Ottoman troops in these twelve eventful years.

In Montenegrin annals there is no more important event than the "vespers," so called because of their similarity to the famous Sicilian vespers. It is the St. Bartholomew's Eve of the Montenegrin Moslem, for there are plenty of this faith within the borders of the toy kingdom. The date of the Montenegrin vespers varies, according to three chronicles, the years 1702, 1703 and 1711 all being given. But all agree that it was on Christmas Eve.

The Code Danilo provides that any Montenegrin who shall show cowardice in any way shall be compelled by law to garb himself in a woman's apron during the rest of his life. As the farmer said about the giraffe, "There ain't no such animal," and why the code provides for such punishment where men glory in fighting is hard to understand.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Fair One With the Golden Locks

By RYLAND BELL

I first fell in love with Gwendolin Winchester's hair. We hear much of golden hair, but I have never seen but one head of hair the real color of gold. That was Miss Winchester's. She wore it as loose as any hair can be dressed. Indeed, it resembled a halloon in its shape.

Having fallen in love with the young lady's hair, I proceeded to fall in love with the girl herself. We boarded in the same house; consequently I saw her often. But she kept very much to herself, and none of us became familiar with her. Sometimes she would sit with me after dinner for a short while, but none of the other boarders was so honored. At such times, especially when we sat side by side, I noticed a dampness in the air which seemed to come from my companion. I once asked her how she made each individual hair stand out by itself, and she said that she washed it very often. There was a great deal of dust floating about, and it got into her hair. This was the cause of the frequent washings.

After giving her a number of invitations I finally succeeded in inducing Miss Winchester to go to the theater with me. When at the raising of the curtain she took off her hat and displayed her wealth of hair many persons turned their eyes upon it admiringly. It seemed to me that not only its hue was golden, but that in one or two places it had a golden sparkle. I asked her if she ever used a gold powder. She looked at me in a startled way and said:

"No. What makes you think so?"

"Because there is a place in your hair which sparkles as though you had put gold powder on it."

She put her hand up and asked me where was the spot I referred to and was not satisfied till I directed her to it.

Miss Winchester held a position of some sort, but she told none of us where or what it was. She went out about 8 o'clock in the morning and returned at 4. On her return she went into her room and locked the door. I understood that she wished to rest till dinner. I could not understand why, if she needed rest, she took the trouble to wash her hair so often. Women usually make a great ado about washing their hair, and when they do are usually to be seen sitting about with it hanging loose. Miss Winchester would wash her hair between 4 and 5 o'clock and come down to dinner with it done up at half past 6. I once asked her how she dried it so rapidly and she said by fanning it. This added to my wonder that she should take so much trouble after a day's work.

I asked the young lady on several occasions to give me a lock of her beautiful hair, but she always declined. One evening when we were sitting together a lock came loose. My business requires me to carry a small pair of scissors in my vest pocket, and I surreptitiously cut off the strand without her being aware of what I had done.

When I went to my room I held the strand near the gas jet to examine it. On it I noticed a particle of a substance that reflected the light. Among my [illegible] I kept a magnifying glass—not a scientific instrument, but such as could be carried in the pocket. I brought it to bear on the particle and saw that it was either stone or metal. I judged that it was metal, since one of its minute faces reflected the light. Moreover, moving the light about on the lock I detected other particles, though most of them were much smaller than the first.

I don't know what prompted me to do so—idle curiosity, I suppose—but I put the lock in a glass of water and stirred it to separate the particles. They settled to the bottom of the glass. I poured most of the water off, and the rest of it, including the particles, I poured on to a sheet of white paper. This I held over the gas jet till the water had evaporated and the particles stood out on the white paper infinitely small bits of yellow sand or metal. Fishing a little horseshoe magnet out from among my other trinkets, I picked one of the particles up with it. I then knew that it was metal.

I said nothing to any one about the matter. Indeed, I thought very little of it till one afternoon, being in a building, I saw Miss Winchester coming out of an office on the door of which, under the firm name, was the word "Assayers." Assayers may be expected to handle gold dust, and a suspicion at once came to me that the particles I had found in Miss Winchester's hair were golden. I had preserved them and made a further examination to find that my surmise was right.

I ceased my attentions to Miss Winchester, but I dreaded to have it discovered that she was carrying away gold dust that did not belong to her in her hair and, asked for a private interview with her, told her what I had seen and how it had revealed what she had stolen.

She was dreadfully cut up; begged me to keep her secret, and I agreed to do so on her solemn promise to abstain in future.

I never met Miss Winchester again. Somehow after that when I came near a girl with golden locks I could not avoid looking to see if there were scintillations of gold dust.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE IS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

Made from fruit—Can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has caught cold or is feverish or has a sore throat give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs," to evacuate the bowels no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

A Vegetable Freak.

A wonderful growth discovered some time ago in the sandy dry plains of Mexico seems, after all, not to be such a wonder as it was at first believed to be. A species of cactus, the fouquiera, growing in the shape of a tapered column, is rather commonly found thirty feet or more in height. One specimen, however, was found bent into a huge arch, both ends of which entered the soil at a distance of six yards from each other. In the centre of the arch a shoot grew out, which is now more than ten feet long. How did this oddity grow thus? The question was answered in a very simple way the other day. An old herder related that when he was young he and other cowboys lassoed for fun the highest of the tall cactuses they found, and, pulling it down, they buried the top of the column in the sand. This end grew roots, and a few years after the superabundance of vitality of this cactus forced for itself a way out in the new shoot, although this species never grows branches ordinarily. Now the plant looks like a gigantic spar.

LIEUT. ERIC GREENWOOD HAS A LEG AMPUTATED.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—Lieut. Eric Greenwood, of the Royal Engineers, son of Lieut.-Col. Greenwood, of the Canadian forces, successfully underwent an operation to-day for amputation of the leg and is doing well, though not yet out of danger. Lieut. Greenwood was received into a private hospital here over a week ago and has since been in personal charge of the eminent surgeon, Sir Alfred Fripp.

Sir Alfred stated to-night that as a matter of fact the operation had been decided upon several days ago, but they had to wait until the patient had made sufficient blood to undergo with any chance of success such a heavy ordeal. Only two days ago it was feared he would die of hemorrhage. The limb, added Sir Alfred, had become entirely mortified, despite all efforts they had made to save it.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

6980

These coats, while more or less the same in general character, differ in details, some having a belt at the back, others with loose back and belted front, still others without any belt. Those in yoke style are new and very smart looking, as well as the plain coat that buttons right up to the neck. The coat pictured may be closed in this way, as the small view shows, and finished with a turn down collar; or, if preferred, the regular coat closing may be substituted. The pattern comes in four sizes, fourteen to twenty years, and is numbered 6980.

Many of the fur coats are made in this style, and those of fur fabric also. The redingote is not so good for fur and fur cloth, probably because the joining at the waistline would be too bulky for looks and for comfort, but broadcloth, silkaline, velvet and lapels of plain and mixed woollens are well adapted to the redingote features. Most of them have very wide belts, of the material or of velvet or fur cloth, straight, deep cuffs and big buttons. Not a few have collars and cuffs of fur, and those of broadcloth and velvet are frequently bordered with fur at the lower edge. It is a matter of choice whether there are revers or otherwise.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

FARMERS ARE EXPERIENCING A SHORTAGE OF FEED

According to Mr. G. A. Gillespie—Closing Meeting of the Dairymen's Convention Was Favoured With a Slim Attendance—The First Principles of Dairying

The 38th annual convention of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario was brought to a fitting close at the meeting that was held in the Opera House last evening. The attendance which was even smaller than that of the previous evening, was very discouraging to the directors and is hard to account for.

Mr. J. R. Dargvel, M.L.A., Hon. Pres., occupied the chair, and after a few introductory remarks, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., was called upon for the first address of the evening.

G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A.

Mr. Gillespie was very much disappointed in the attendance, as the meetings had been thoroughly advertised and they meant so much to the farmers. He stated that the farmers in the district surrounding Peterborough were experiencing two of the worst years in their time. They were probably feeling it so much that they were probably too discouraged to come out.

The speaker said there was practically no feed in the country and many farmers were compelled to buy enough to keep their stock.

Butter Very Scarce.

Mr. Gillespie made the interesting statement that everyone had practically shut down from butter making in the City of Peterborough and butter may have to be imported into the city before spring.

H. H. Dean, O.A.C.

Prof. H. H. Dean of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, gave the address of the evening. It runs, in part, as follows:

"There is danger in Ontario at this time of getting away from the first principles of dairying. In striving after new things we may forget the fundamentals of the industry which has placed this province in a foremost place among the producers of agricultural goods. It is well that we should, from time to time, take a survey of those things which are essential for the continued growth and welfare of dairying, and in which all we who are met at this time and in this place, are so much concerned.

We find a great many different classes, and great variety of industries more or less concerned in dairying. The stream of milk from a cow's udder, as they touch the bottom of a milk pail, start in motion lines of manufacture, trade and commerce in nearly all parts of the world. Manufacturers, merchants, and transportation companies are concerned in maintaining a healthy dairy trade.

Details of First Principles.

Good fertile soil is the basis of sound agriculture and is the first and most important principle in dairying. Lean soil means lean, hungry stock, and a man who carries a lean pocket book.

The kinds of soil found on Ontario dairy farms may be classed as clay, loam and sand, with various grades and mixtures of these. With any of these classes of soil, experience indicates that soils of a clayey nature are best adapted for dairying. Whatever be the nature or class of soil used for dairying it must be fed, preferably with animal manures if we should hope for success.

Feed a Principle.

In spite of all that has been said and written on this question of feeding cows economically, we appear to be making very little progress. The cost of feed is increasing each year, without corresponding increase in the price received for milk and milk products. This winter of 1914-15 finds dairy farmers required to purchase large quantities of feed. About the only feed that can be produced at a reasonable price is cotton-seed meal, an imported feed which needs to be fed carefully.

Looking over the whole question of feeds and their relation to cheese it would seem as though it would be a good plan to adopt as a slogan a modification of an English rhyme as follows:

Canada's Capital C's—
Corn, Clover, Cows and Cheddar Cheese.

Like Produces Like.

There never was a time when so much good dairy stock is available for farmers as at present, yet it is difficult to sell good male animals at reasonable prices. These animals would do much to further improve the milk-producing capacity of cows, but farmers are unwilling, or unable to invest in this class of stock. Improved dairy sires is one of the safest means whereby increased production may be brought about on average dairy farms. No farmers should be satisfied with cows which produce less than six thousand pounds of milk or two hundred and fifty pounds of butter per cow yearly. One of the stumbling blocks which has held back the breeding of improved dairy stock is that proverb or maxim so frequently quoted "Like Produces Like." While there is an element of truth in the saying, the newer scientists are recognizing the great principle of variation.

The dairyman needs to be a reader, a thinker, a worker and above all, clean. Brain power is needed on our dairy farms—even more so than other kinds of power. Because farmers in the past, have been content with a cheap brain service and because they think the farm will not sustain expensive grey matter, the tendency is for this expensive material to leave the farm. The whole social and financial system needs reorganizing so as to make it profitable for the brightest minds to be connected with productive agriculture.

J. B. Reynolds, M.A.

Professor J. B. Reynolds was the next speaker. He gave a very able and interesting discourse on "Present Day Agriculture." In dealing with his subject he pointed out how farming could be made more pleasant and the advantages open to farmers' sons deciding to remain on the farm.

Young men were leaving farms on account of long hours, lack of social advantages, etc. The speaker believed long hours of labour were unnecessary. He thought all chores should be done by 6 p.m. and the farm run successfully. That would give the young men a chance at sports and recreation. A man should not enslave himself to his business. It was also a pretty poor business that would not afford the most moderate of modern conveniences to assist in the work on the farm

Prof. R. Harcourt.

Prof. R. Harcourt in dealing with his subject, "What Milk is and its Characteristics," said that milk was one of the least advertised, but one of the most nutritious of foods. There was no one food that would compare with milk or any of its products. Too much milk was fed to cattle and hogs and not enough to the human being. In very few towns could skim milk be bought. It was not offered for sale.

Two quarts and a half of milk was equal to a pound of steak, and two quarts to a quart of oysters. Skim milk and bread would constitute a proper diet.

One pound of cheese would be equal to two pounds of beef or three dozen eggs. Thus cheese is an imported food.

The speaker spent some time with a chart showing the relative values of milk, skim milk, buttermilk, cheese and beef and other foodstuffs to the body as food.

The Opera House orchestra rendered several selections during the evening and the round of addresses were broken by the singing of a male quartette, composed of Messrs. J. Minnicocts, D. Carlysle, T. Ward and E. Hanrahan and solos by Miss Hanson and Mr. Hanrahan.

If You Could Only Be A Stomach

You'd Go to Bed Rather Sore at the Work You'd Have to Do.

Fancy a master that works a horse so long, without rest, that the poor old beast at last has to go to a bone pile.

Fancy yourself doing the same thing with your stomach—the noblest of all our physical organs.

Just imagine yourself devoting hours of ceaseless work to the digestion of a meal which you cannot digest because of wrongful ingredients given to you by the blood.

Is not a man very foolish to imagine a raw sick stomach capable of good work when the juices it receives are so filled with alkali or acid that they actually eat the stomach membrane?

Do you not know from a common sense point of view that to continue such a course means not only the impairment of your stomach but of all digestive organs as well?

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into your stomach just like food. They are so powerful in health giving qualities that almost instantly the work of digestion is improved. They ease up the stomach's work. They go into the blood and balance it perfectly. Thus, when the stomach calls for new juices at your next meal you are able to furnish them.

Your common sense will tell you that so great an aid to digestion as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets could not be in every drug store, unless demanded after trial by all classes of stomach sufferers.

No more are they a doubtful quality. They have passed a rigid examination by all manner of stomach and digestive tests, and they have been awarded the diploma of American patronage. Their's has been the practical test.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists at 50c a box.

A BAD HEART ITS CAUSE AND CURE

Many, Firmly Convinced They Are Dying of Heart Trouble, Have Often the Strongest Hearts.

Sometimes you wake up at night, heart throbbing like a steam engine. Your breathing is short and irregular; pains shoot through the chest and abdomen, and cause horrible anxiety.

Your trouble isn't with the heart at all. These sensations are the outcome of indigestion, which has caused gas to form on the stomach and press against the heart.

Just read what happened to Isaac Malloux, of Belle River, Ont.:

"Three months ago I was a weak, sickly man. My appetite was poor, food fermented in my stomach, I had sour risings and indigestion. At night I would often awaken with gas in the stomach and heart palpitation.

"I consulted my doctor and used remedies that my friends advised. Nothing helped.

"One day I received a sample of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and my cure commenced. To-day I have a vigorous appetite, strong heart action, and no sign of indigestion. I feel younger and healthier than ever before."

Your druggist or storekeeper sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Peterboro' Farmers Few At Dairy Convention

Failed to Take Advantage of Practical Address on Fruits Problems Confronting the Dairy Industry—Prof. Dean's Talk on Experimental Work at Guelph College.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON

"Where are the Peterborough farmers?" asked a prominent dairyman yesterday. "I thought this was one of the leading dairy districts in the Eastern end of the province, but there does not appear to be much local interest in the convention."

The above comment is self-explanatory. The Peterborough convention will be remembered by the excellence of the addresses and the slimness of the attendances. Whatever agricultural and dairy wisdom the speakers imparted, there were not many farmers present from this vicinity to take advantage of it. In this respect alone, the convention was somewhat disappointing. Some of the speakers openly expressed their regret that the farmers were so conspicuously absent. One man remarked that it appeared to be wasted sympathy when efforts were bent toward solving farm problems and the farmers were seemingly too indifferent or lethargic to manifest the slightest interest.

The meetings emphasized two of the greatest difficulties that stand in the line of advancement in the dairy industry. The refrain of some of the important talks was the failure to protect the producer of first quality milk and cream.

Associated with this thought was the noticeable indifference of the best farmers in tolerating conditions which not only prevent them from securing the profits they earn, but which also throw them back on the level of the indifferent patrons. And the convention resolved its discussions into material form when a resolution was passed by Henry Glendenning of Manilla, seconded by George A. Gillespie, requesting a conference of Ontario dairy experts to be held in Toronto in the near future to consider a method of paying for milk and cream on the basis of the weights of butter-fat and solids.

Must Satisfy Farmer.

While considering all phases of the dairy industry, chief attention was devoted by the convention to the source of supply, the farm. The illogical and somewhat ridiculous method of pooling milk was declared to be a prime obstacle to the progress of the best dairy farmers, and at the same time an encouragement to the worst to continue in their indifferent methods. Prof. H. H. Dean sounded an alarm when he said that apparently the cheese industry is on the decline in Ontario, and if present indications are permitted to materialize it will be a great disaster to the dairy industry. This, however, was an extreme view and was probably voiced as a warning. But the dairymen feel that the time for talk is past. Conventions have discussed and resolved, and while much has been accomplished, real impeding problems still invite assaults. Hence the present is viewed as an opportunity for striking at the elemental difficulties with operations directed first at the sources of milk production. The dairymen of Eastern Ontario are hopeful that some method will be decided upon whereby the butter and cheese industries may be freed from the obstacles that have been preventing them from reaching the advanced stage they should have already attained.

Experimental Work.

Prof. H. H. Dean, of the O.A.C. at Guelph, told of recent experimental work and the results observed.

Loss using overripe milk for cheddar cheese—The average loss per 1,000 lbs. milk in twenty experiments was 6.36 lbs. where the average acidity at the time of renneting was .205 as compared with milks of similar composition delivered sweet and set at 17 per cent. acidity. There was also greater loss of fat in the whey from the overripe milk lots, the average shrinkage was over one-half per cent. greater, but there was not much difference in the average quality of the cheese, due to the fact that one or two normal acidity lots of milk, were off in flavour, which showed in the cheese, hence the need for not only sweet milk, but clean-flavoured milk for cheesemaking.

Milks of higher percentages of fat and casein produce more cheese per 1,000 lbs. of milk. We have advised that milk be paid for on the fat and casein tests. The average of 12 experiments in which the milk tested 3.30 per cent fat and 1.84 per cent. casein produced 98.88 lbs. of cheese for 1,000 lbs. of milk; milks averaging 3.38 per cent fat and 2.04 per cent. casein produced 91.41 lbs. of cheese per 1,000 lbs. of milk. It is manifestly unjust that the man who is producing milk showing rich in fat and casein should be paid the same as the producer of inferior milk. Pay the farmer on the basis of the cheese producing value of his milk. Failure to adopt this idea seems to be one of the reasons of dissatisfaction among farmers.

Pasteurized Milk.

I am a strong believer in pasteurized milk for city trade. I don't believe there is any other kind of milk safe to drink, and I hope I am not treading on any person's toes when I say that. However, for cheddar cheese I cannot recommend the pasteurization of milk for cheesemaking, in spite of other reports from the United States.

Moisture in Cheese.

High moisture in cheese for local trade increased the yield very considerably, and the cheese were fairly good when new, but soon became acid and were not liked by the consumer.

Acidity of Whey.

Curds dipped with an average acidity of .149 produced 99.05 lbs. cheese per 1,000 lbs. milk, while curds from similar milks dipped with an average acidity of .175 per cent. produced 98.95 per 1,000 lbs., a loss of 1.10 lbs.

The acidity developed on the milk at the farm causes a greater loss in cheese production than acidity in the vat.

The Use of Salt.

We found with low salting a greater percentage of moisture to be retained in the cheese and the shrinkage during one month was less.

Cheese must be ripened at a lower temperature to reduce the shrinkage and improve the quality of the ripe cheese. Experiment showed that cheese ripened at 40 to 50 degrees lost 2.15 per cent.; those kept one week in an ordinary room (60-65 degrees F.) then moved to an ice cold storage (40-50 degrees) lost 3.36 per cent.; those left one month in the ordinary curing-room lost 3.09 per cent in one month.

Prof. Dean explained work done at Guelph College in the manufacture of soft, cream cheese, and remarked upon the possibility of its manufacture on the farm with commercial success.

The Stirring of Milk.

Results of stirring and not stirring during the cooling of milk disclosed the fact that milk in the can stirred, cooled more rapidly than did the milk unstirred, but the effect on acidity or ripeness of the milk, when tested next morning was the same in both lots on both days of the tests.

Well Waters.

Dr. W. T. Connell, of Queen's University, Kingston, gave a practical address on "Factory and Farm Well Waters." With stereopticon views he illustrated precautions that should be exercised in locating wells and the necessity of securing them against surface water and other contaminating agencies.

Geo. A. Putnam.

There was nothing strikingly new, although it was interesting enough, in Geo. A. Putnam's address on means of improving the environment of rural life.

Medical school inspection, he said, was as necessary in the rural districts as in the cities. With fewer pupils in the country the cost may be somewhat higher, but it is none the less necessary and should be undertaken. We would like to see more libraries in our rural districts and any group of farmers can easily get a travelling library if they express the demand for them.

Industrialism in the cities have drawn too heavily upon the rural districts for labour, but the signs of the times point to a return movement back to the land.

The Women's Institutes.

Mr. Putnam paid a fine tribute to the work the Women's Institutes have done in the betterment of rural conditions, and more recently in their splendid response to the call for Red Cross and Belgian Aid.

Recommendations Adopted.

The meeting recommended that the creamery experts of eastern and western Ontario meet in Toronto to consider the advisability of purchasing cream according to grade. It also recommended the cheese companies to make the cooling of milk compulsory. The adoption of a uniform system for the grading of milk was also recommended.

TO-DAY'S COMMUNIQUE OPTIMISTIC ALLIES MAKE MORE PROGRESS

At Nearly Every Point of the Battle Line, The Allies Have Scored Successes---A German Block House Has Been Destroyed Near Rheims---Advances Made at St. George

FRENCH ARTILLERY GAINS ASCENDENCY

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, January 8.---(Official Noon, Friday.)---Optimistic claims of further successes against the Germans at nearly every point of the battle line were made in official circles to-day. Gains of territory were claimed at certain points while in no instance, it was declared, have the Germans been able to institute a serious offensive. Fighting has also been renewed all along the line to the north and at St. Georges and Lombaertzyde the allies have again been advanced. As for the German claims of successes in the neighbourhood of Arras, the explanation is made that the French themselves voluntarily abandoned a line of trenches, being forced out by the deep mud, which almost filled the fighting ditches. The stretch of highway from La Boisselle to Aveluy is now held by the allies, who have mounted infantry there, and in the woods in the vicinity. According to the official reports the artillery duel in the valley of the Aisne still continues but with the French gradually gaining the ascendancy. West of Rheims a German blockhouse has been demolished.

The Deputation Has Returned

From Ottawa Where They Waited Upon the Premier and the Minister of Militia---Peterborough Will Not Be Made a Mobilization Centre

The civic deputation that went to Ottawa to press Peterborough's claims for military recognition, returned this morning. In the words of Maggie Muller there is absolutely no change in the Government's attitude respecting their decision to confine the mobilization of troops to Belleville and Ottawa. His Worship the Mayor accompanied by Lieut.-Col. Young and Major Eastwood, waited upon the Minister of Militia at the hospital where he is confined owing to an injury which he sustained to his knee some days ago. The "Lion of Lindsay" was submerged in a background of pillows when the deputation appeared on the scene. They were given a cordial hearing and incidentally informed that the Government never had any intention of establishing mobilization camps all over the country. The object is to have the troops concentrated in as few camps as possible. This not only to save unnecessary expense, but to facilitate the handling of the men who are going forth to fight the battles of the Empire.

Lindsay First.

"Besides," added.. Major ..Sam Hughes, "if troops were to be mobilized west of Belleville, Lindsay would be given first consideration. Blood is thicker than water. Any number of towns have as good facilities as Peterborough, when it comes to the question of mobilizing troops."

Peterborough will continue to be a recruiting centre, and the troops will be kept here until they are removed to the concentration camps. They will not be equipped here, but will be allowed a certain sum of money each day, sufficient to cover the cost of feeding the men and horses.

The deputation next proceeded to carry out their intention of visiting Premier Borden, where they were again apprised of the Government's intention respecting the matter in which the deputation was interested.

A Pair of Peterborough "Kiddies" Become Famous

Toronto Saturday Night prints a fine picture of a tableau in which figure as the chief features two Peterboroug kiddies, who are at this moment, in the battle line, or in the King's service. The picture represents a tableau called "The Defenders of the Empire," produced at an entertainment given in Peterborough by the "King's Daughters" on the occasion of the Diamond Jubilee, in 1897, of the late Queen Victoria. The sailor lad, on the night of the picture, at that time aged five years, is now Lieut. Eric Greenwood, of the Royal Engineers, a graduate of the Royal Military College, who left it with the sword of honour, and the silver medal. Lieut. Greenwood was recently wounded in France, and a report in to-day's Examiner, (page six), states that he is in a hospital, having survived the amputation of a leg, but is still in danger. His father is Lt.-Col. H. S. Greenwood, also a Canadian, who served in South Africa, and well-known in Peterborough, where he lived for some years; he is a grandson of Sir Henri Joly, a distinguished Quebecer, and late Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia. The soldier lad on the left of the tableau, also aged five at the time of the picture, is a son of Mr. Peter Campbell, Manager of the Bank of Toronto, and officially known as Gordon Campbell, but is better known to his hosts of friends as "Pete"—(and a credit to his name) Campbell, of 'Varsity, Captain of 'Varsity Rugby team, and one of the most famous of its quarter-backs; a crack hockeyist, and altogether a splendid all-round sport in the broadest meaning of the word. As a member of the 48th Highlanders he promises to make as good a soldier as sport. The picture calls up many interesting memories and emphasizes present events.

PRODUCT OF THE "BABY-KILLERS"

This house is one of a block of seven. It was struck by the last shell that was fired by the German invaders during their raid on Scarborough on December 16th last. The block is owned by Mr. John Bentley, 188 Bank street, manager of the Auburn Woollen Mills. Mr. Bentley's brother resides in house number 168 of the block. The house shown in the picture is number 164. The brother was away at the time of the incident referred to. Fourteen shells were found in a field one mile inland. This field is also owned by Mr. Bentley of this city. No fatalities resulted among the occupants of the house shown above.

THE MANNER IN WHICH THE PETERBORO' PATRIOTIC FUND IS BEING ADMINISTERED

Relief is Available for Those Who Are in Straightened Circumstances---A Practical Organization is Being Created ---Information For Members of the Canadian Contingent.

During the last week enquiries have been made as to the operations of the relief committee selected to go on with the distribution of the funds coming as the apportionment from the Patriotic Fund campaign. It will be recollected that it was promised that of the amount collected and subscribed one-quarter would be retained for the purposes of relief for those in straightened circumstances, brought on by conditions arising out of those provoked by the war. So a considerable sum was set aside for the purpose.

Late in the last month the Peterborough Relief Association was organized, with Mr. H. Rush, chairman, and Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Rev. Jas. Rollins, W. Stocker, Adjt. McElhiney, R. Harstone, D. O'Connell, as an executive committee. After some consideration it was arranged that the services of an executive officer should be secured and this was done. Some relief had been distributed from the funds, by Mr. Miller, but the Association Committee began its work beginning of January, some weeks ago. During the interval every effort has been made to bring the distribution to a methodic and systematic form, and the arrears of work are being rapidly cleared up. In a short time things will be running smoothly and it is hoped, efficiently.

MANY CASES OF HARDSHIP.

That the privation is widespread there is no doubt. All who are in the work are fully aware of this. There is much more than appears on the surface. There are many cases of real hardship among people, ordinarily comfortable, so long as work is procurable, but who are now in most straightened and painful circumstances. For the first and only time in their lives the combination of circumstances has worked havoc. They have hesitated to apply for assistance, as a matter of decent personal pride. The good mechanic involuntarily revolts at such an alternative. But what would you.

It will be observed that the fund is "for relief" people in straightened circumstances brought about by the war." That, while broadly defining the purposes of the Fund, it is sufficiently elastic to allow of the Committee using some reasonable discretion inn cases of real hardship and some necessity. The main thing is to relieve. There is no use splitting hairs while the woman and children are cold, hungry and destitute. At the same time, the one thing to be avoided, so far as possible, is an indiscriminate giving away of the fund. This the committee recognizes and have set themselves out to guard against. And so to do with as little of what may seem a holding back of assistance as possible. It amounts to this that if all who come would honestly state all the circumstances a conclusion could be quickly arrived at. Not to put off relief, for the time being. That is given at once, but of that which will be done for the future. It is not so much misrepresentation as a holding back of some facts that are material. When these facts are known then the proposition can be sized up. We do not want penuriousness in the administration of the fund but a wise economy, that it shall last as long as possible, or at any rate over the winter months.

A thorough system of reports, indexing, investigation, personal records, habits and circumstances of the applicants, together with a set of books of sufficient convenience to ensure accuracy are being opened. It is a tedious job but it must be done. The people who made the fund have a right to expect that it will be expended wisely as it is in trust. That if a fast is desired that it can be substantiated upon investigation.

WILL BE TWO MEASURES OF RELIEF.

It is well to remember that there will be two measures of relief. One the City Board which administers the usual apportionment each winter. There are claims on this and from this source that will be met out of the funds of the regular city grant. The other is the Relief Fund from the Patriotic Fund movement, and it is the dispensing of the latter that we are considering. So far as determined the usage is to afford relief upon the application. Before so doing a card is filled out, carrying when fully entered all needful particulars of the case. These need not be enumerated here, but they disclose the exact state of affairs. Immediately an investigation is made by some one competent to judge fairly of the state of affairs and to draw a reasonable conclusion. This is necessary to prevent imposition, and what is equally important, a duplication of relief. It is not intended that the relief given shall be ample for support. Once given support there is the contingency that reasonable effort to find employment would cease. The relief must be supplemented, as far as possible by what earnings can be secured.

After much consideration the committee made a schedule, to meet the varying conditions that arise. Manifestedly the conditions are different between the needs of a man and wife, and, say, a man and wife and five children. The scale considers this and meets the situation. It is not material as to this scale, but it is as liberal as could be determined considering the number of applicants and the probability of the Fund being made to last so long as possible. It need not be put in print, but can be seen by any one who calls at the rooms.

Several good friends, the Quaker Oats Co., the Peterborough Cereal Co., the Campbell Milling Co., and others, have given very large quantities of food stuffs, a most wise way of making a contribution. These things are the very necessaries of life. While these gifts vary in money value from time to time, it is a great satisfaction that the goods are put in at the very lowest wholesale prices. This is an advantage, as it affords a larger quantity for distribution. These firms are most helpful in the matter; put the goods up in convenient packages; are solicitous that it shall be quite fresh and of the very best, and are assisting in the distribution. As such things are a necessity in every family, portions are given instead of money, and the arrangement is working out nicely. In the case of male members of families coming, they are expected to carry the goods home. In the case of women the goods are delivered.

In the judgment of the committee, and no doubt citizens will agree, it is not desirable that any publicity be given to individual cases. No one should be at all humiliated. These are times that the world, the country, and Peterborough never saw before, and most devoutly hopes never to see again. But it will be understood that all reasonable enquiry will be carefully met. Call at the rooms, or telephone and any question, not an impertinent one—that is impertinent to the recipient from the fund—will be frankly answered. The committee hopes, and is earnestly working to the end that when the Fund has been expended and closed out, that not one act done by it may be the subject of criticism on anyn ground but that perhaps a warm heart has overruled a hard head.

A NUMBER OF ILLUSTRATIONS.

It might be claimed that this enquiry into circumstances is going beyond the bounds of friendly decency. Indeed this is not so. It is no breach of confidence to make a couple of illustrations. Here is one.

The mother of a family approaches the officer for assistance. Sees one or two of the committee to support her application, and for which course there is indeed no need. The personal opinions of the members do not count, it is only a matter of seeing that justice is done. Relief was granted. The statement was made that the husband, (here was a family of husband, wife and several children), had had his wages so reduced where employed that he could bring home at end of the week only $6.50. It was understood that the wife and mother was making what she believed to be a perfectly honest statement. Investigation showed, by following the case up, that the man was earning and geting $16.50 per week. He took home $6.50. Where the difference went to was not stated. Relief at once stopped.

A young man applies for assistance. Said he was a clerk. He stated that he had been out of employment, having been "left off" during last August. Said he had done nothing since. When asked why not, replied "that he had not been sent for." He had made no effort of any kind to secure work of any kind in the interval. He was given some help and told to go out and help himself. In the opposite view to this is the case of a boy or young man, who hearing that there was a batch of wood to chop at Young's Point, borrowed an axe and walked to the village to secure the job and got it.

It may be stated that in the cases of men who have enlisted, and gone with either of the contingents, and whose people apply for assistance, investigation is rarely, if ever needed. The fact that the bread-winner is in the ranks is sufficient. The regulations state what is to be done, although these regulations are not within the purview of the local relief committee except this far. It takes some time to get the wheels of the Canadian Patriotic Fund moving. Certain returns and details must be drawn up and submitted to the Central Board. In the meantime those at home, and of the family, should not be allowed to suffer. In such cases the local relief fund will take care, in a measure, of the family until the regular remittances arrive.

APPLY TO THE EXECUTIVE OFFICER.

Many of our people may know of cases that are deserving and which should be met. There may be extreme reluctance to go and make circumstances known. In such cases the executive officer will supply cards to be filled up, and on which information the committee may act. Phone No. 331, or address to the City Buildings, and cards will be supplied at once. The office hours are from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. The afternoon is given to other

BOARD MAY ASK FOR AN INVESTIGATION

Into Certain Pre-election Statements Concerning the Board of Education---Minister of Education May Be Asked to Appoint a Commission---Mr. G. N. Gordon Favours Appointment of Judicial Officer, Claiming That Commissions Appointed by the Government Are "Notoriously Unsatisfactory."

ACTION POSTPONED ONE WEEK

At the inaugural meeting of the Board of Education, which was accounted for last evening, Mr. G. N. Gordon, the newly-elected member, enjoyed his first baptism of fire at the hands of the Board. The routine business had been disposed of when the motion for adjournment was hailed long enough to enable the Board to consider a motion, asking the Minister of Education to appoint a commission to investigate the affairs of the Board. Mr. Gordon moved in amendment that the County Judge be asked to conduct the investigation asked for. After some discussion it was decided to postpone action for one week so as to enable all the members of the Board to be present. The absentees at last night's meeting were Messrs., V. Eastwood and R. Dynne, who were in Ottawa in connection with the civic deputation.

"A Family Matter"

Mr. John Crane opened the matter by referring to conditions which he characterized as "unparalleled," arising out of certain statements alleged to have been made by Mr. Gordon during his election campaign. "I think," said Mr. Crane, "that something should be done to vindicate the members of this Board who have been discredited by certain pre-election statements. It does not strike me as being possible to conduct an impartial investigation between one member and another. It must be a family matter. Of the monies received by the Board last year, ten thousand dollars was received in grants from the Government. I don't think any member wishes to sit on the Board knowing that they have been discredited in the eyes of the public. I, for one, would be willing to lay my resignation on the table until the Board has been vindicated. I would move that the facts of the matter be referred to the Minister of Education, and that he be asked to appoint a Commission to decide as to whether the monies received from the Government have been improperly spent.

A Seconder.

Mr. W. H. Hill—"I am quite willing to second that motion. The question of insurance has been raised, in which I am interested. It has been stated that Companies represented by members of the Board should not accept insurance from that source. Many prominent men, now deceased, whom I could name, including the late Senator Cox, have accepted insurance under the conditions named. Any reflection that is made on the living in that regard is a reflection on the dead. There can be no exceptions. It may be wrong to do it; I am not admitting that. So far as I am concerned it makes no difference to me whether the Companies which I represent carry one dollar's worth of insurance. The Finance Committee have always allotted the insurance, which usually went to Companies that were governed by a standard rate. I think that some of the statements made by Mr. Gordon are pretty far fetched particularly the one referring to Mr. Robert Fair, in which a large order for window blinds was concerned. This should either be withdrawn or proved. It is a reflection on the man.

"I have been a member of this Board a great many years and have lost, rather than gained. I will say something that may be unique, and that is, I have never spoken to a teacher about his insurance. That is an unusual thing for a life insurance man".

An Amendment.

"The suggestion of misappropriation of monies is not a part of any charges that may have been made," said Mr. Gordon. "There is an objection against any investigation by a Commission appointed by the Government. The proper person to conduct the investigation that has been suggested is a judicial officer, preferably the County Judge. I would move that the County Judge be asked to hold an investigation as per the revised statutes, into the dealings and transactions of the Board for a period of five years previous to date, also to investigate any dealings that may have taken place with teachers employed by the Board, and that Mr. D. O'Connell be named as a special investigating counsel."

Passed to the Family.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Chairman of the Board, in submitting the two resolutions to the members, said that during his connection with the Board he had failed to recall any action that would reflect discredit upon any member of the Board.

Mr. Smith said that in order to "keep peace in the family" he would ask Mr. Crane to accept Mr. Gordon's suggestion to leave the matter in the hands of the County Judge.

"I don't desire an investigation if this matter can be cleaned up in any other way that would be satisfactory to the Board," said Mr. Crane. "I cannot afford to have the Dominion Bank think that my name is discredited in Peterborough." Mr. Crane is local manager of the Dominion Bank.

Mr. Gordon—"I think Mr. Crane is right. If any members of the Board are suffering from imputation or, putting it broadly, from the insinuations alleged, an investigation should be held. Commissions appointed by the Government are notoriously unsatisfactory inasmuch as they are circumscribed in their rights."

A Speedy Settlement.

"I would like to see this thing settled right away," said Mr. Miller. "I am going to remain on the Board and see whether I get one, two or three months. After that I will feel free to hand in my resignation. I am a citizen of Peterborough and, like Mr. Crane, cannot afford to have my name discredited. As all the Judges that I know of I would rather see Judge Hayden called in than any else."

Mr. Crane suggested that the matter be postponed until next Thursday evening, to enable the absent members of the Board to be present.

To this Mr. Hill and other members of the Board agreed.

Mr. Gordon promised to make an effort to have a statement before the Board on that occasion, dealing with things that should be corrected and which are objected to.

Those present at the meeting were Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, Chairman; J. Crane, J. Smith, W. H. Hill, J. W. Miller, Dr. Burnham and G. N. Gordon, and Mr. T. B. McGrath of the Separate School Board.

THE "I WILL" MAN

Opens Most Thrilling Clearance Sale at Grafton's To-morrow

The "I Will" Man, who has aroused your curiosity for the past few days, will give you something to substantially interest you to-day if you read the Grafton & Co. page advertisement in this issue. The "I Will" Man announces that he has come to smash clothing prices and give the public the greatest values they ever thought possible. The Grafton Co. are staking their reputation for living up to whatever promises they make in their advertisements, against statements that seem almost too big to be real, but the "I Will" Man says every word in their ad. is so, and only asks people to call at the store and actually see what a tremendous price slaughter he has made. The garments in this high-grade stock are all new, and fashionable and were bought at regular fall-and-sale prices, but at the clearance sale prices your money will have a double purchasing power. Sale starts to-morrow (Saturday) at 8.30 a.m.

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—There is no danger of any serious friction between Canada and the United States over the shooting by Canadian soldiers of two Americans who were hunting ducks illegally in the vicinity of Fort Erie. Already the Dominion Government through the British ambassador is prepared to pay reasonable compensation to the families of deceased and injured men if responsibility is established. This is not an admission of liability, but what is known as an "act of grace."

COMPARATIVE COURAGE.

Brave men are not equally courageous. Men whose bravery is unquestionable, will funk a trifling danger. A British colonel, who had a record of dare-deviltry in action and had his chest upholstered with medals, had his knees knocking together when he rose to reply to a toast at a little wedding breakfast. A man who will face a cannon's mouth in battle without blenching; who will endure the torture of the trenches in cold nad wet without grumbling, will demand an anaesthetic to have a tooth drawn, as is done in the dental operations at the Toronto mobilisation camp. It is well known that weak women will stand intense pain with less fuss than stalwart men, yet a woman will go into spasms of fright at a mouse. Men who will seek the bubble reputation even in the cannon's mouth, shrink from a dentists' tongs. Courage, like almost every other quality, is relative. Many a man, has the moral courage to do wrong and face the odium that attaches to dishonourable action, who would not have the moral courage to do a little self-evident right thing. It is in the little things that we fail. We buckle on our armour to wage the fight for great things, but often fail in the face of the small duty; we might glory in taking risk to stop a run-away horse, and shrink from being cost help a lame dog over a stile.

THE PRESS AND PUBLIC SERVANTS.

The Globe, under the heading "Secrecy in Public Affairs," has the following comments to make upon the decision of Mr. Justice Middleton in a case of far-reaching importance, the statement of which is found in another place on this page:

> While no fault will be found with the judgment of Justice Middleton regarding the excluding of newspaper representatives from the Ottawa City Hall by the Mayor, there is always a right of appeal from such judgments to the citizens. That appeal has been taken in advance in Ottawa (at the polls), and the verdict rendered dismissing the Mayor. This was the only verdict that could be regarded as satisfactory. A reporter has no more rights and no less rights anywhere than any other citizen. His business is to keep the people informed as to what their elected representatives and employed officials are doing on their behalf and with their money. Representatives and officials have a legal right to keep this information from their principals, the people, and when they do so it is immediately and urgently incumbent on the people to get rid of them and fill their places with men who understand their positions. That is what they did in the case of the secretive Mayor of Ottawa.
>
> When Controllers or Councilmen hold secret meetings the proper and urgently necessary thing to do is to vote them out of office. It is not their business bu the business of the people they presume to conceal from the people. A policy of secrecy ends their usefulness. If newspaper representatives try to curry the favour of a little exclusive information by tolerating and condoning official secrecy they do not honestly serve their clients. As purveyors of information they should demand full and complete knowledge of public business. When it is withheld they should appeal to the public and campaign for the selection of representatives who understand the functions of agency. Such an appeal, based on the right of the people to know what is being done by their elected agents, if made with sufficient force, will always succeed. It is the duty of the Press to wipe out the reproach of secrecy in public affairs.

With all due respect to Mr. Justice Middleton, it is permissible to remark that there's a mighty wide hiatus between law and justice. Technically, of course, newspaper reporters have no more right than any other citizen; no more right to investigate and get information regarding the management, or mismanagement, of civic affairs than any other ratepayer. But this condition is greatly modified, by custom, which in course of events becomes the most righteous law. The Press is universally recognized as the great intermediary between the public and public servants. Its duty is to keep the public informed from day to day of the doing of their servants, entrusted with the management of the most important material interests of the public. The Press cannot discharge this duty effectively if the bars are put up against sources of information, and the extent to which exclusion from information is carried, is the measure of placing the public at the mercy of its servants, making them irresponsible, instead of what they really are, responsible agents.

It is only adding insult to injury to be told that if the elected servants of the people do wrong they can be punished at the polls. The prevention of disease is considered the highest function of medical science; and the prevention of wrong-doing by publicity comes within the same category. What will it avail the public, if their interests are injured; their money wasted by a city council or other body, to wait a year, or, in some cases two years, to defeat them at the polls. And how will the people know how to inflict this punishment, if they are not informed of the facts through the Press?

The Press may have no "legal" right to demand information from the authorities constituted by the peoples' will, but they have the strongest moral right. As a general proposition, when there is effort at concealment, there is something wrong to conceal. If there is wrong-doing going on, who has a better right to know it as promptly as possible, than the public; and how is the public to be informed without the universally proper and legitimate go-between, the Press; and how is the Press to be in a position to do this if the law puts the lid on the unsavory cauldon of wrong-doing? There is such a thing as reason and common sense. If both civic officials, and the agents of publicity, the reporters of the Press, are reasonable and reasonably prudent, there can come no harm from one giving, and the other getting, the fullest, and promptest information regarding public matters and the course of managers of public affairs. There is at times necessity for discretion, and experience has proved that the Press is able to exercise sound judgment, in regard to premature publication, of niformation. But the information should not be withheld. Though it were not used, it would sometimes be important to be able to see if the "goods" delivered, in the case covered by the confidential information, corresponded with the invoice.. The public, the ratepayers of a municipal corporation have a moral, if not legal, right to have the fullest information in regard to the management of their business by their representatives. If the latter feel that they can shut off inquiry —especially when it would be awkward to give information, the way is lubricated for wrong-doing; if the representatives feel that their acts will be closely scrutinized by Burns' "chiel amang the takin' notes," there will be more sqneeze in another Burns' saying—

> The fear o' hell's the hangman's whip
> To haud the wretch in order.

As a general condition there is too much concealment in regard to civic and other municipal administrations. There is too much disposition on the part of the servants of the public to constitute themselves the masters. They do not take the public into their confidence enough in matters of vital interest to the public. Our representatives do not know it all, and public knowledge in regard to some knotty problem, might furnish a "tip" from some member of the public that might be valuable. For instance, the public would like to be enlightened in regard to the local Hydro-Electric situation; it is now, as far as the public, who are the ones interested, are concerned, enveloped in a fog so dense that a hundred watt lamp can't penetrate it. In this and in many other things a public statement would be satisfying to, and an act of official courtesy towards, the public. Publication of such things is what the newspapers are for.

Canadian Municipal Bonds Now and After

The investment business, especially in bonds and debentures, during the early part of and in fact, during the first six months of the year 1914, was fairly good, although in some cases at the expense to a certain extent of prices. The first half of the year, and in fact for some time previous, something seemed to be hanging over the market that was almost inexplicable. No doubt it was largely uneasiness in Europe, the outcome of the Balkan war. The declaration of war by England as, is generally known, not only caused the stock exchanges all over the world to close, which was quite unprecedented, but also practically paralysed all financial business, disarranging the Exchange Market, that is, the sterling exchange and New York funds, in a way unknown ever before. Since then there has been practically nothing doing in the English market. Some business as been done in the United States, especially in one or two issues, and that market seems to be improving somewhat. There has been little or no institutional buying in the Canadian market, but the private individual all over the country, especially throughout Ontario, has been investing in short-term bonds, such bonds as those of the Province of Ontario, free from succession dues, as well as some short-term municipal bonds of the larger places, such as Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton, etc.

While we do not look for any great improvement until the war is over, we see distinct signs of moderate and gradual improvement taking place, even now.

The large financial centres, such as New York and London, Eng., are loaded with money, which can be had "on call" at very low rates, but this abundance of money, to our mind, is more or less superficial, being caused largely by the proceeds of the great war loans being placed in the banks and public depositories until such a time as they are needed. Another cause of this plethora of money is the slackening of trade. Except in a few lines trade is not nearly so prosperous as it was before the war, and consequently less money is required in trade channels. When the war is over trade will doubtless gradually revive and the surplus of ready cash, which the large financial institutions now hold will gradually be absorbed.—G. A. Stinson & Co.

work and investigation. In case of necessity, and if so advised, the executive officer will be at the rooms in the evening by appointment. This that any urgent case shall have attention. There is no red tape, no doorkeepers, no austerity, but a real decent desire to do the very best and to do it now.

While not altogether pertinent to the matter several enquiries have come in with regard to the conditions of enlistment. These are given below for general information. While not of the local fund and its cares they stand alongside.

From time to time additional information will be given of the working and operation of the Association, and presently a weekly statement of amounts expended, that all may know how things are progressing.

For the information of all concerned the following extracts from regulations are published. There is considerable enquiry in such regard:

1. Men are enlisted as privates, but may be granted higher rank in their respective units according to their qualifications, etc.
2. The pay of a Private is $1.00 per day and 10 cents Field Allowance. This is payable from date of attestation.
3. The enlistment is for one year or duration of the war, and six months after the termination of the war if services are required.
4. In addition to pay all soldiers will be clothed, equipped and subsisted.
5. From the time volunteers leave their home until they return, the wives of married men, and the widowed mothers of single men, if such sons are sole support, will receive a monthly allowance of $20.00.
6. In case a man is permanently injured a liberal pension will be granted to him, according to extent of the injury.
7. In case a man is killed or dies of injuries received on service, his wife, and children under certain ages, will be given a substantial pension.

The Press And Its Privileges

In Relation to Access to Sources of Civic Information in the People's Interests

A cat may look at a king, and a newspaper reporter may ask questions of a civic official. Civic officials must not be annoyed by reporters, but reporters are entitled to see, at reasonable times, the City Clerk's records and the auditor's report; they may put to the heads of civic departments that old, old question, "Is there anything new to-day?" But when the civic official requests a reporter to remove himself the reporter must not stand upon the order of his going.

The above is the effect of a judgment given by Mr. Justice Middleton at Osgoode Hall to-day in an action brought by the Ottawa Journal against the exclusive methods of Mayor McVeity who had notices posted on the doors of the Ottawa City Hall: "Newspaper reporters not admitted." Orders were given to the policemen on duty to eject any reporter found on the premises. The electors the other day themselves ejected his Worship from the same premises, defeating him at the polls.

How the Trouble Started.

Mayor McVeity commenced his war against the newspapers last April, by the issuance of a circular to heads of departments to the effect that the giving of interviews and information to the newspapers was incompatible with efficiency of civic service, Reporters were not to be allowed access to civic officials during business hours. This was followed in October by an order that any alderman who was a newspaper reporter was to be regarded and treated as a reporter.

Mr. Justice Middleton holds that the Mayor went too far in excluding the reporters from the City Hall and that the plaintiff is entitled to some injunction. He says:

The Court cannot be called upon to compel the municipal officers to give to the newspapers any information beyond that which the Municipal Act prescribes. The Mayor, as head of the corporation, has the right to require the civic officials to give out no information beyond that pointed out by the staute without his approval and sanction."

Mayor Justified.

As to the issuing of the circulars against reporters, the judgment says: "In all this, I think the Mayor was amply justified in adopting the course he did. His conduct, however, was not unnaturally resented, and he was made the victim of a good deal of persecution at the hands of the newspaper and its representatives. Attempts to compel the Mayor to discuss civic affairs and the items referring to his reprisal under the heading, "Our Daily Chat With The Mayor" cannot be justified".

His Lordship holds that as representatives of the ratepayers and residents of the city the reporters had the right to enter the City Hall. He adds that beyond the Clerk's records and the auditors' reports, the "giving of information rests entirely in the discretion of the municipal authorities." These are responsible to the electorate.

As success is divided, his Lordship does not award costs to either party.

BAR OF ONTARIO MEETS AT BANQUET BOARD

Representatives of the American Association Urge Anglo-Saxon Brotherhood.

Greetings, from the American Bar Association to the Ontario Bar Association, were conveyed by Mr. Frederick A. Fenning, of Washington, in the King Edward Hotel. Some 200 attended. President S. M. Field, K.C., of Cobourg, presided as toastmaster. Those who sat at the guests' table comprised: His Hon. Lieut.-Governor Hendrie, Hon. W. H. Hearst, Prime Minister of Ontario; Hon. I. B. Lucas, Rev. Professor Law, Mr. Justice Bissell, of Buffalo, N.Y.; F. A. Fenning, of Washington, D.C.; Frank J. Lodge, of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. Eugene Lafleur, K.C., of Montreal; Mr. Justice Britton, N. W. Rowell, K.C., G. Surveyer, of Montreal; Mr. Justice Maclaren, Mr. Justice Kelly, Mr. Justice Lennox, Mr. Justice Ward, of Port Hope; Mr. Justice Huycke, of Peterborough; Dr. J. A. Macdonald, C. A. C., Jennings, Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., of Belleville; William Shortt, K.C., of Edmonton; Judge Denton, Judge Coatsworth, Judge Widdifield, of Owen Sound; Judge Fisher, Judge Vance, Judge Gunn.

Mr. Justice Britton, senior in years on the Ontario bench, recalled old times. Hon. Justice Herbert P. Bissell, of the New York Supreme Court, advocated a common jurisprudence for the British Empire and the United States. Hon. Frank T. Lodge, of Michigan, spoke sympathetically towards the British side of the present controversy in Europe. Mr. G. Surveyer represented the Bar of Montreal in a humourous speech. Judge Huycke, of Peterborough, Premier Heart, Hon. I. B. Lucas, and Dr. J. A. Macdonald also spoke. Chief Justice Falconbridge was unable to be present, nor was Sir Charles Davidson, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Quebec. Lady Davidson being ill.

His Honour Judge Huycke of Peterborough, speaking on behalf of the County Court bench of the Province, expressed his pleasure at the evidences of unity and brotherhood between lawyers At all times, he said, members of the legal profession played an important part in moulding public opinion, and in promulgating ideas of justice. For the County Courts, he pointed out, that they administered justice for the weak and the poor. The present troublous times, he concluded, would one day be over, and when the war drums ceased to throb, much would depend upon the legal profession whether or not Canada was to be a great country great in justice and in equity, great in population and in wealth.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, a member of the Executive, was also present throughout the session.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

THE TIDE OF WAR AGAINST THE GERMANS

Col. Swinton, the Observer Attached to British Forces, Says Britain Has a Big Army on the Continent and France's Mobilization is Complete

LONDON, Jan. 8.—"The New Year has opened up on a more favorable situation for the allies than any they had known since the commencement of the campaign," says a report made by Col. Swinton, military observer attached to the British army headquarters at the front. The report is dated Jan. 4.

"So far as the British are concerned," says the report, "the small expeditionary force of four divisions which took the field in August has now been swelled into a great army, which is steadily increasing in numbers, has become inured to war and can look back on a record of hard fighting such as British troops seldom have sustained in the past. The struggle of the last four months has entered upon its fourth phase.

"A slow, but none the less marked, change which has taken place has resulted in the definite passing of the initiative to the hands of the allies. Our advantage lies in the fact that it is now the allies, who for the past few weeks have assumed and maintained the offensive role, while the enemy has been acting on the defensive.

"Really marked progress has been achieved by the allies.

"The German defensive is an active one. It is founded on the axiom of war that the weaker the force is and the more hardly it is pressed the more persistently should it attack. But it remains true that such action is none the less essentially defensive, even though here and there one of their counter-attacks may succeed in regaining possession of a trench or in driving back a small section of our troops.

"If we retain the initiative it will mean that the German soldier gradually will become increasingly conscious that he is no longer marching on Calais or Paris; that instead of pressing forward his work is merely to maintain what already has been won, and that even this limited object has not been attained. Hitherto he has continually been told that reinforcements are about to arrive and that an advance in force is imminent, while reports of startling victories on land and sea are disseminated broadcast. But such fabrications can no longer carry conviction.

"The more thoroughly they are now deceived to the true position, the greater will be the disillusionment if they realize that ultimate victory is unattainable."

After referring to the ultimate consequences of repeated small successes, the British observer adds:

"It must not, however, be thought that this is other than very slow and laborious progress, or that the final result is within immediate reach. Yet every capture by the allies of a trench represents lost ground for which the enemy expended much blood and treasure, and is a step forward in the process of attrition which eventually will bring the war to an end."

The British observer states that he is able to confirm reports that there is considerable sickness in the German ranks. He says that for some time past there has been a good deal of typhoid, and that some German units have even been withdrawn temporarily on this account.

WILL NOT GO TO FRANCE

London Report Re Second Contingent Not Confirmed at Ottawa —Train at Salisbury

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—The London report that the second contingent is to go direct to France is not confirmed at military headquarters, here, nor is it believed. While the disposition of the troops is a matter for the Imperial authorities to determine, the fact that the first division is being subjected to such a long and careful system of training on Salisbury Plain before going to the front, leads to the conclusion that a similar course will be followed in regard not only to the second, but to all subsequent contingents. At headquarters, here it has always been understood that as soon as the first division went into action the second would take its place on Salisbury Plain and undergo similar training.

May Amend Liquor Act

Government May Shorten Business Hours of Hotels of Province—Legislation Forecasted for 1915

TORONTO, Jan 8.—That the Ontario Government will introduce legislation at the coming session of the House, shortening the hours of business of the hotels of the province is the belief of many well informed persons. Premier Hearst has been asked what the intention of the Government is in this direction, but he refuses to discuss the subject. While not denying the rumour, the Hon. Mr. Hearst says that as far as the Government is concerned, there is nothing to be said about the matter.

The members of the cabinet have strong temperance leanings, and in view of the present financial conditions it is argued that it would be a beneficial move on the part of the Government to close the bars of the Province earlier in the evening. The Government percentage from the bar receipts during the last year was much lower than before, and this only goes to show the effect of the financial stringency.

Sometime ago Mr. Hearst was asked if he would deny that the Government was considering new liquor legislation for the coming session, and he replied that he was not in a position to discuss the question. From other sources it is learned that there is some foundation for the story, and it would not occasion any great surprise if the License Act were amended.

WILL ENFORCE THE REGULATIONS

Sanitary Inspector Spence Receives Instructions From The Provincial Board Of Health

Sanitary Inspector Spence has received instructions from the Provincial Board of Health to enforce the regulations respecting proper receptacles for stable manure, approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council on October 5th, 1914.

These regulations are as follows:

1. In cities, towns and villages no more than two loads of manure shall be allowed to accumulate.

2. All manure shall be kept enclosed in a fly-proof receptacle constructed as follows:

The portion below ground including the floor shall be constructed of cement or brick, made water tight. That above ground shall be made of either cement or brick, or of tongued and grooved lumber. The cover shall also be made of tongued and grooved lumber securely fitted so as to be fly-proof. There shall be a suitable ventilator to carry odours above the building or windows of adjacent buildings. There shall be an opening from the stable directly into this receptacle through which all manure shall be conveyed, and when not in use this opening shall be kept closed by a fly-proof door. All manure shall be removed from this receptacle and properly disposed of at least once a week between the first of May and the first of November.

MEET TO-DAY IN LINDSAY

LINDSAY, Jan. 8.—Ald. R. Chambers, who has been instrumental in the movement to have the Grand Trunk Railway Co. retain the Toronto-Peterborough "flyer," has arranged for a representative meeting of citizens to be held this afternoon, when Mr. C. E. Horning, D.P.A., of the G.T.R., and Mr. D. McMillan, Trainmaster at Lindsay, will be present to discuss matters. The G.T.R. will be urged to continue this particular branch of the service.

No Motor Licenses Before February

It has been decided that no automobile licenses will be issued before February 1st. The markers are ready but new forms and new regulations have to be drafted and passed upon by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council. As a consequence of the work of reorganization involved in the change of the dates many persons who went to the Legislative buildings yesterday to get their licenses for the coming year were disappointed.

A CHANGE IN SIGHT

Russian Victory Over Turks Promises Serious Results

ATTACKS ARE WEAKENING

LONDON, Jan. 8. — A complete change in the situation in the near east may be brought about by the Russian victory over the Turks in the Caucasus. If the Turkish defeat is as sweeping as has been officially reported — the virtual destruction of two and the repulse of a third Turkish army corps—the Turkish menace against the Russians in Transcaucasia has been removed.

Military men, however, are taking even greater interest in the Russian invasion of Hungary through Uzsok Pass, in the Carpathians, and their rapid advance on Transylvania, through Bukowina, simultaneously with their movement toward Cracow. These combined operations are the most gigantic undertaken in the war.

In the meantime the Russians are held by the Austro-Germans in western Galicia, and Field Marshal von Hindenburg, the German commander in northern Poland, can move but slowly, because of the mud, in his offensive operations against Warsaw.

Frederick Rennet, Petrograd correspondent of The London News says:

"The German attacks on the Bzura and Rawka rivers for the last fortnight have been steadily weakening, tremendous losses having reduced their strength.

"The Russians on Tuesday took the offensive in north Poland with brilliant success. There have been signs since the slackening of the German attack on the central position that the enemy was intending to move on the flanks of the Russians, but the latter advanced first and surprised the German leading column on the River Rosrova and drove it back with heavy loss.

"Before they were able to prepare their resistance many prisoners were taken by the Russians, who are now pressing in force close on the heels of the German northern army.

"This victory has great value, since it has upset the first move in Gen. von Hindenburg's new scheme, which he conceived after the direct attack along the Warsaw roads was abandoned."

The following statement from the Russian General Staff was issued last night:

"On the left bank of the Vistula on Jan. 6 there was an almost general lull along the front of Bochaczew-Bolimow, where only desultory fighting took place.

"The Germans, with a view to approaching our positions, are endeavoring to apply the [illegible] of siege warfare in certain places. They advanced by sapping, and are resorting for protecting themselves to steel shields.

"In the region of the village of Sochaczew the Germans, who on the night of the 6th captured part of our trenches, were forced out of them in the morning by bayonet attacks. In the course of this fighting we captured five quick-firers and a number of prisoners.

"In Galicia the situation is without important change.

"In Bukowina we continue our offensive."

Turks, Insufficiently Fed, Display Great Fighting Qualities In Defeat

PETROGRAD, via London, Jan. 7. —The reported Russian victory at Sari Kamysh, in the Russian Caucasus, and the recapture of Ardahan, an important junctions point of the mountain roads from the Turkish frontier to Kars and Tiflis, apparently removes whatever menace to those cities was presented by the Turkish invasion. According to the opinion of military men here, the attack on Sari Kamysh was secondary in importance to the wide enveloping movement of the Turks, which was designed to cut off the Russians near the border and place Turkish forces between them and the Caucasian capital.

By December 27 the Turks had established themselves in the village of Upper Sari Kamysh, but on the 30th they were routed there, with the loss of twenty officers and 1,500 men. Meanwhile the Turks had occupied Ardahan, to the northward, one hundred miles from the frontier, and entrenched themselves. They were attacked by the Russians on January 3 and driven out after hard fighting, which resulted in great losses on both sides.

Notwithstanding the snow and the severe cold, the battle is said to have been extremely stubborn. The Turks, although insufficiently fed, showed great bravery and are said to have displayed fighting qualities equal to those of the Russian Caucasian troops.

At the same time the battle of Ardahan was in progress the Turks returned to Sari Kamysh and made another attack, but were beaten by the Russians in the encounter, which ended on the night of January 4. By that time the two Turkish army corps operating in this region were unable to offer further resistance. One of the corps, with all of the staff officers, was captured and the other was transformed into scattered remnants.

A Peterboro' Man Injured

Word has been received from Mr. Maurice Housedy to the effect that he is confined in the hospital as a result of an injury. Mr. Housedy, who left Peterborough about the time hostilities were declared between the warring nations, is engaged with the forces in France. For a time he was assigned to hospital service. He has been through some of the principal battles of the war in connection with the Red Cross service, and is at present suffering from a crushed foot.

Both Maurice and Louis Housedy reached the front within a short time after the outbreak of the war. They are both French reservists from here.

Operation Is Successful

Son of Col. Greenwood, Formerly of This City, Reported to Be Doing Well

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Lieutenant Eric Greenwood of the Royal Engineers, son of Lieut.-Col. Greenwood of the Canadian forces, successfully underwent an operation to-day for the amputation of a leg, and is doing well, though he is not yet out of danger. Lieut. Greenwood was received into a private hospital here over a week ago, and has since been in the personal charge of the eminent surgeon Sir Alfred Fripp. Speaking to the Canadian Associated Press to-night, Sir Alfred stated that as a matter of fact the operation had been decided upon several days ago, but they had had to wait until the patient had made sufficient blood to undergo with any chance of success such a heavy ordeal. Only two days ago it was feared that he would die of hemorrhage. The limb, added Sir Alfred had become entirely mortified, despite all efforts they had made to save it.

A RECOLLECTION OF AN OLD DAVISMAN

Prof. Harry Armstrong, Sr., formerly band-leader with Healey's Hibernica; Burr Robbins, John B. Doris, Great Interocean Circus and others, celebrated his 53rd year in the show business at Summerville, W. Va., last week. All of the members of the Armstrong family were present. Mr. Armstrong would like to hear from his old friends, and sends his kind regards to Jerry Cohan and Pete Conklin.—From "The Billboard."

The late Prof. Armstrong, father of Harry Armstrong, mentioned in the above clipping, conducted what was known as the Armstrong Family Band. Among its members were the late Prof. Armstrong, a well-known circus band leader, in the early fifties, the present Harry Armstrong, Sr., a boy at that time; James Armstrong, and Jobe Armstrong. During their residence in Peterborough the father kept a fruit store in what was known as the Henthorn Block, almost opposite the present location of The Examiner. The last visit of Healey to Peterborough was with Healey's Hibernica Minstrels. That must be fully thirty years ago. He is quite clearly remembered by Mr. Chas. S. Brownlee, who was an employee of The Examiner at that time.

TRIED TO STOP THE WEDDING

Remarkable Scene at the Wedding of a Canadian Soldier

Special to The Examiner.

The Daily Mail reports a remarkable scene at the wedding of a Canadian Contingent soldier at Reading, on Wednesday. On the arrival of the bridegroom and bride at the Church a man in civilian dress, sitting near the Altar rails seized the soldier and said the girl was his. He dared the Canadian to take her. There were prospects of a fight, but friends intervened and hurried the bridegroom into the Vestry. Police arriving on the scene ejected the civilian. The wedding ceremony then proceeded, the bridegroom and bride showing obvious signs of being greatly upset. It is stated that the bride worked at the same place as the man who created the scene, and had walked out with him, but the pair were not engaged.

FRENCH HAVE MADE GAINS IN ALSACE

Allied Troops Have Also Advanced Between Lille and Arras While a British Patrol Occupies Village Two Miles North of Courtrai

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Further progress in Alsace, this time towards Altkirch, is reported in the French official statement of the day's fighting. The allied artillery are now within dominating range of this point, and it is to be expected that a successful advance will be made here at any time. Nothing new has been reported from Steinbach, where desultory fighting, and German advances in force, have being going on in an attempt to win lost ground in frontal attacks, which the Germans do not seem to have realized are fruitless, while the French check to this sort of tactics is an offensive in another direction to straighten their line.

In the north, between Arras and Lille, hard fighting is reported, with allied gains on the whole. In the Wesvre district the success of the allied offensive was followed up by the capture of a part of the German fighting trenches in the district northwest of Flirey. This drive will play havoc with the enemy's triangular position, with its apex resting on the Meuse at St. Mihiel.

In Flanders the British have been confronted by flooded roads and fields, making progress of infantry slow and troublesome. The bulk of the fighting has been confined to long range artillery. An official despatch from Holland says that British patrols have entered Heule, two miles northeast of Courtrai and that the Germans in Courtrai have filled all the public buildings and most of the private houses with sick and wounded. Progress a few miles further may enable the British to surround Courtrai and establish themselves still more firmly in Belgium.

Yesterday's bulletins from the French War Office said:

"Reports were received this evening of violent German attacks in the region of Lassigny, in the Argonne, at the crossing of the roads from Le Four de Paris to Varennes, and that from La Haute Chevauchee, in the region of Verdun, and on the ridge which dominates Steinbach. All these attacks have been repulsed."

"During the day of Jan. 6 these operations were confined to artillery fighting, in which we had almost always the advantage. Our batteries put to flight certain German aviators who were coming in the direction of Dixmude, and they extinguished a commencement of fire of German mine-throwers in the region of Zillebeke.

"The enemy bombarded violently the head of the Belgian bridge to the south of Dixmude.

"In the region of Lille we exploded with success a violent German attack on one of our trenches. This assault, in the beginning, fell by us, was recaptured with great brilliancy and by the exploding of mines we demolished a portion of the German fight works. Between the Aisne and the Aisne there has been nothing to report except artillery engagements.

"To the east of Rheims, on the Alger farm, we exploded some mines yesterday evening. This resulted in the stopping of the enemy's field works.

"In the Argonne, to the west, and to the north of Verdun, there were yesterday artillery engagements in which the enemy did not show much activity.

"In the Woevre district the advance made by us to the northeast of Flirey is more important than was at first taken to be the case. We made ourselves masters of a portion of the enemy's first line.

"At Steinbach and at the adjoining heights the enemy has not delivered a counter-attack. A persistent rain, together with the state of the ground, made any operations difficult. We have retained all the positions conquered by us in preceding days. There were two attacks on the part of the enemy, one to the west of Wattwiller and the other near Kelmsbach. Both were immediately repulsed. We have made progress in the direction of Altkirch by occupying the forests situated four kilometres (2 1-2 miles) to the west of this town. Our heavy artillery reduced to silence that of the enemy.

"During all the day of Jan. 6, the enemy bombarded the hospital at Thann."

HOTEL KEEPER IS CHARGED

Judgment was reserved until Monday by Magistrate Dumble in the case of Mr. Fred Blastorah, proprietor of the Palace Hotel, charged in the Police Court this morning, with having suffered Howard Innis, who is on the prohibited list, to loiter around the barroom in his hotel, while Innis was drunk, on Dec. 31st, 1914.

The accused was defended by Mr. Widdifield of the firm of Gordon and Widdifield, and Mr. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution.

The principal evidence for the prosecution was that the plaintiff, Innis was arrested on the premises on December 31st, and fined $20 on his plea of guilty.

The Counsel for the defendant brought out that Innis had secured his liquor in Port Hope and that he was there in the business of the Palace Hotel on Dec. 31.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The annual election of the directors of the Y.M.C.A. will occur on Tuesday evening, Jan. 19, at 7.30 o'clock. The terms of the following directors expire: J. H. Connal, W. B. Warne, F. J. Mighé, J. T. C. Lang.

A nominating committee consisting of three members of the Board of Directors and three men from the active membership of the Association, have been appointed, according to the provisions of the constitution, to nominate men to fill the vacancies. Any active member of the Association may submit names to the nominating committee within one week of the said election.

At the annual meeting the yearly report of the Association will be presented and any business concerning the welfare of the Association will be presented.

A vacancy on the Board of Trustees is to be filled, caused by the removal of Judge G. M. Rogers from the County of Peterborough.

The war and the consequent financial stringency has affected the Association to a large extent, but as a good work is being done by this institution the officers are optimistic regarding the support that will be rendered by the Peterborough citizens this coming year.

Berlin Awaits News of Victory.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—(By wireless to Sayville.)—The latest German official bulletin verifies the public expectation that a further advance in the direction of Warsaw would be announced this week.

The Austrian official statement is featureless, the bulletin only mentioning the efforts of the Russians to continue their advance in the Carpathian Mountains, and that artillery fighting is in progress on the front to the north and the south of the Vistula river.

WILL BELLEVILLE GET DEMOBILIZATION CAMP?

It is Hard to Believe That Our Advantages for a Camp Will Be Overlooked

It is a fact that Belleville will be made a mobilization centre for 1,000 or 1,200 men in preference to Peterborough, there must be something at fault with the case, as presented by the Peterborough representative.

Belleville city does not require the camp as badly as Peterborough does, owing to this city having so many men unemployed, Belleville not being the manufacturing centre Peterborough is. Then again it is doubtful if any place can show as good accommodation at as cheap a cost as can be had in this city. It is impossible to believe that with the advantages we have, and the fact that Belleville is not affected financially to the extent Peterborough is, that we should be side-tracked by our case not properly presented in the proper time.

SURPRISE PARTY AT LIVERPOOL VILLA

A surprise party was held at Liverpool Villa, the home of Mrs. Thos. Poole, Byersville, on Wednesday evening by the employees of the Empress Hotel, when they presented Mrs. Poole with a beautiful reading lamp. An enjoyable time was spent in singing, dancing and games. They finished in the small hours singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King." During the evening piano selections were played by Mrs. Poole, and Mr. Arnold Wood played violin numbers.

Church League Off To A Good Start

The Senior Church Hockey League opened at Brook St. rink last evening when two scheduled games were played.

Rev. R. Rollins, of St. Andrew's Church, officially opened the League with a few remarks in which he said he hoped all games would be played in a clean sportsmanlike manner. He then threw the puck on the ice for the first game in the 1915 series, between aggregations representing St. Luke's and St. Andrew's.

St. Luke's managed to blank their opponents in a game which was rather rough at times, the final score being 5-0 in favour of the Anglicans.

The line-ups were as follows:

St. Luke's—G. Butcher, Hagerman, Regan, Carter, Butcher, Phillips, Stewart.

St. Andrew's—Hamilton, McWilliams, Swanston, Sharpe, McBride, Evans, Patterson.

In the second game Murray St. Baptists defeated St. Paul's Presbyterians 8-1. The Presbyterians were shy one man and the Baptists dropped one to even up. They lined-up as follows:

Murray St.—Lewis, Eastwood, Brown, Marsh, Webb, Fitzgerald.

St. Paul's — McBride, Panter, M. Turner, Taylor, Mulhern, Loucks.

As the Charlotte St. Methodists dropped out of the league yesterday, owing to three of their players being barred, their scheduled game with the George Street Methodists was not played. As three games had been billed for the evening they consented to play an exhibition game which was won by the northern bunch 4-0.

Peterborough Juniors Won At Cobourg

Showed a Big Reversal of Form and Were Never Behind Beating Lakeshore Team by 8 to 6—A Fast, Clean Game on Heavy Ice

It was a different bunch of Peterborough juniors that performed at Cobourg last night and handed the Lakeshort bunch an 8 to 6 beating on their own ice. Stung by their off colour against Port Hope, the young Petes came back to form and played fine hockey against the kids from Percy Bond's old town. The score hardly represents the play, a fine exhibition of goal keeping by Bulger keeping the Petes from exceeding the double figure mark. Bulger, only a youngster, played like a veteran, handling a score of shots at close range. On one occasion he stopped the first shot and then nailed three more from rebounds.

The Petes' forward line played their places, and in spite of heavy, sticky ice, that made accurate passing a difficult feat, worked in on top of Bulger in neat passing rushes that were strangely missing in the Port Hope game. Harold Morrow bolstered up the defence, and the team as a whole showed 100 per cent. improvement.

It was a lightning fast game, with both teams going at top speed.

While all the Petes showed a general improvement, the work of Richardson at left wing was probably the outstanding feature. Like the rest of the squad he was all at sea against Port Hope, but last night he found himself, and his lightning rushes down the boards were a continuous source of danger to the Cobourg citadel. He also did some fine back checking. Knapman's speed and stick handling started many dangerous raids and his unselfish passing counted in the goal getting. At centre, Jackson showed how to play the position by grabbing off four counters, and he was in nearly every rush. Smyth, in his right position at right wing, gave a fine account of himself. Long and Morrow checked well, while their rushes relieved the pressure. Legros was steady and effective in the nets.

Cobourg trotted out a light, fast team of youngsters who will improve with every game, and who will take a lot of beating on fast ice. Every kid is a good stick handler and skater and given them a keen sheet of ice against Port Hope, and the Ontarios will have to step to town to beat them. Thompson, the biggest man on the team, is also the fastest, and he showed a great turn of speed in his dashes down the ice. Skitch and Maher, the centre ice pair, rank two very handy players, and Ewart at right wing is a youngster who knows how to find the nets. In Bulger, the Cobourg youngsters have a rattling good goaler. The midget weeded out shots like a veteran and the Petes gave him lots to do, too.

The game was very clean, the penalties inflicted by Referee Lou Marsh, who handled the game in most effective fashion, being for minor offences.

The Petes led at the end of each period 3 to 1, 6 to 5 and 8 to 6, and were never behind. They grew careless with a three goal lead in the second period and slowed up. The Cobourg youngsters took advantage of the let up to bang in three goals, but the Petes opened out again and finished strong.

The line-up was as follows:

Cobourg		Peterborough
	Goal
Bulger		Legros
	R. Defence
Thompson		Long
	L. Defence
Horne		Morrow
	Rover
Skitch		Knapman
	Centre
Maher		Jackson
	Right Wing
Ewart		Smyth
	Left Wing
Clymo		Richardson

Referee—Lou E. Marsh, Toronto.

The Petes pressed from the start and Bulger had to stop three or four shot in succession. Four minutes from the opening, Morrow scored on a three-man combination rush, but the goal was not allowed, Referee Marsh stating that the puck had been kicked into the nets. The Petes were not to be denied however, and from the resulting face-off, Jackson scored on a quick shot.

The visitors continued to have the better of the play and kept Bulger busy. They were buzzing around the nets and in on top of the youngster and there were many narrow escapes. Knapman was benched for loafing and Morrow for tripping, but two men short the Petes scored Goal No. 2, Jackson going in close for the counter. A minute later Richardson scored on a neat combination rush and the Petes were 3 to 0 ahead.

Before the end of the period Thompson, the Cobourg defence man, scored on a fine rush and a good shot from outside the defence.

The Petes opened the second period with a score, Jackson doing the trick soon after the opening. Bulger saved half a dozen times in succession when the Petes were right in on him and finally, after five minutes' bombardment, the Cobourg forwards broke away and Ewart scored from the side. Right back came the Corktown youngsters and the umpire's hand went up again. The Petes knicked that the puck had gone through the side of the net and the goal umpire was removed. The goal counted, however, and the Cobourg fans threatened to raise the roof. Their joy was short, however, for the Petes tore in from the face-off and Jackson scored on a three-man combination rush. The scoring was fast and furious at this stage. Cobourg came back strong and in three minutes had two goals, Maher scoring from a scrimmage and Horne following on a shot that carromed in off a Peterborough man. The Petes did not leave the score tied long. Within 30 seconds of the face-off, Morrow broke away for a beautiful rush and transferred the rubber to Richardson, who did the needful.

In the third period, honours were even for the first few minutes, but Legros and Bulger were both performing splendidly. Finally Long broke away and passed to Knapman, who returned, and the defence man scored. In fifteen seconds the Petes secured another. Jackson grabbed the rubber at the face-off and passed to Richardson, who tore up the side and beat Bulger with a swift side shot.

This cinched the game, and although Cobourg tried hard until the end, one goal scored by Clymo from a rebound, was the best they could get.

Norwood Curling Club Re-organized

The annual meeting of the Norwood Curling Club was held in the club room, recently. Officers were elected, and Skips appointed for the coming season, and it was agreed to commence the regular Union Bank Cup serier of games on Tuesday evening, Jan 12th. The majority of the curlers have already joined the Club, but it was decided not to complete the rinks until Monday evening, Jan. 11, to give everyone intending to curl, an opportunity to join by that date. There will be another meeting of the club at the Rink on Monday evening, when the rinks will be completed, ready to commence the regular series the following evening.

The following officers were appointed for the season:

Patron and Patroness — Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Filay.
President—J. R. McKelvie.
Vice-President—A. B. Greenbank.
Sec.-Treas.—C. I. Puffer.
O.C.A. Representative—R. M. Waddell.

Skips—H. W. Nicoll, T. E. Finlay, C. I. Puffer, T. Watson, J. R. McKelvie.

The season this year has opened early and there is every indication of a "hot time in the old Town" again this winter.

Last season the Cup was won by Messrs. Dean, Brethren, Lawlor and Finlay, and the same rink is prepared to defend it this season.

The club is open to everyone and new members will be cordially welcomed.

THE FINAL TIE MAY BE PLAYED ON CHELSEA GROUND

It Will Not Be Played at the Crystal Palace--A Recruiting Scheme---A Referee's Verdict

We understand that the Football Association has not yet considered officially the ground for the final tie of the F.A. Cup, but it is certain that it will not be played at the Crystal Palace, as the Government have taken this over. It would not be available in any event, but inquiries made by the Sporting Life reveal that there was no likelihood of the tie being taken to the Palace this season.

The matter has been informally discussed, and if the tie is decided in London it will probably be played on the Chelsea ground. There is, however, a strong opinion that the provinces should be given a turn this season, but it is obvious that nothing definite can be done for some months, as the F.A. Council must wait until it is known what teams are likely to reach the final.

There are grounds available that would meet the requirements of the F. A. this season, including the two Sheffield enclosures, the Liverpool and Everton grounds, Old Trafford and Aston Villa, to mention only a few.

Welsh Cup Draw.

At a meeting of the Welsh Football Association at Wrexham, it was decided to proceed with the Welsh international fixtures for the season. The draw for the third round of the competition was made as follows:

Chester v. Oswestry; Bangor v. Brymbo; Llandudno v. Newton; Wrexham v. Northern Nomads; Merthyr v. Llandrindod; Pontypridd v. Cardiff; Llanelly v. Ton Pentre; Swansea v. Milford Town.

A Recruiting Scheme.

At a conference between Lord Derby and the representatives of the directorates of the Liverpool and Evertaon Football Clubs it was decided to put into operation an attractive form of recruiting to the followers of football for reserve battalions at the two big matches on Christmas Day and Boxing Day.

The scheme, which has the support of Lord Kitchener, is for the presentation of post-cards to eligibles attending the matches, on which they are requested to signify their desire to serve or to state reasons for not doing so. In this way, Lord Derby explained, a proper census of the position in regard to football followers would be obtained, and the accusations of lack of patriotism in this connection dealt with.

The scheme was readily approved by the football club representatives, who promised to assist the movement in every way.

All Doing Their Part.

At a meeting of the Southern League clubs the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"That this meeting of the Southern League requests the various clubs under its control to urge upon their players that they should forthwith join the Footballers' Battalion or some other branch of the regular army, the necessary leave for players to fulfil their engagements in League and Cup matches having been given by the authorities."

Referee's Verdict.

Mr. H. A. Allwood, a well-known Birmingham referee, who is at the front, with the Coldstream Guards, in a letter home, says: "Remember me to my football friends. If football does not appeal to the imagination of certain gentry at home, it has a great fascination for the gallant fellows at the front; they do not want it stopped."

BIG CROWD WILL SEE TO-NIGHT'S GAME

Judging by the interest that is being shown there will be a big crowd of fans at Brock Street rink to-night for the battle between the Belleville and Peterborough intermediates. The Belelville Braves are always a big drawing card here, and with Lawson Whitehead in charge of the visitors, they can be depended upon to provide the fans with plenty of thrills. The Petes have a defeat at Belleville last year to revenge to say nothing of the fact that they cannot afford to drop many more games if they expect to stay in the group running. To-night's game will be called at 8.15 o'clock, with Lou E. Marsh, of Toronto, handling the bell. The Peterborough team will be chosen from the following: Janes, Dwyer, Hunter, Pethick, Kelly, Halpin, Park, Spratt and Moines.

The patrons of the reserved seats will find the conditions more comfortable to-night, the management has had the seats there carpeted.

Ethel Von Waldron, with Fiske O'Hara in "Jack's Romance" at The Grand Opera House, Mon. Jan. 11

Augustus Pitou, Jr., announces the engagement on Monday next of his popular singing star, Fiske O'Hara, who will present a new play entitled, "Jack's Romance." Manager Pitou has surrounded his star with a company of notable players and has furnished a wealth of splendid scenery and costumes for the illustration of the story, which deals with the gentry and peasantry of Ireland, during the romantic period preceding the American Revolution. The song numbers, as usual, will be a feature of Mr. O'Hara's performance.

Mahan's Tribute To Imperial Rule

Admiral Mahan Thinks It Greater Glory Than Great Victory

Admiral Mahan, who was the chief naval authority in the United States, and always a warm admirer of the British navy, watched its operations with the keenest interest up to the time of his death a few weeks ago. In private he declared that the tactics of the Admiralty had been "right, absolutely right." In October, he wrote to a friend in England: "The testimony to the uprightness and efficiency of Britain's Imperial rule given by the strong adhesion and support of India and the Dominions, is a glory exceeding that of pitched battle and overwhelming victory." The New York Post thinks this tribute will be especially grateful to right-thinking people throughout the Empire.

WILL ASTONISH GERMANS.

Scheme of Canadian Soldiers Will Be Pretty Hate-Theatre of War.

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 8.—Alluding to Kitchener's reference to the "fine Canadian regiment now at the front" The Evening Standard says: "Everything goes to show that equally fine Canadian regiments will be poured into the scene of hostilities in a stream that will astonish the Germans. About 125,000 Canadians are now under arms, the Premier tells us.
"Ontario has become a province of drill companies, and many students of the University of Toronto are drilling, and so it is everywhere. Canada even furnishes a quota of Scotland to reinforce King Albert's army.
"It is not only in men and gifts that the Empire comes to our help, but it is providing, and as time goes on will increasingly provide us, with engines of war."

ALLIES MAKE BIG GAIN AT SOISSONS

Advance is Significant as it Indicates That the Allies Have Located a Weak Spot in the German Lines--Fierce Fighting in Alsace.

ALTERNATE GAINS AND LOSSES THERE

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 9.—Additional gains in fighting around Soissons where the ngtire first and part of second and third lines of trenches are held by the Allies and alternate gains and losses in Alsace are reported to-day.

In Alsace the fighting is so fiercely contested that the advantage lies first with one side and then with the other, but latest reports indicate that the French are slowly securing possession of the main roads on the east side of the Vosges.

While details are withheld, it is understood that three distinct movements are in operation in Alsace, the success of any one of which would force the Germans to withdraw to their main line of forts. The gain at Soissons is declared here to be very significant as indicating that the Allies have at last found the long sought for weak spot in the German line. It has been known for some time that the Germans had withdrawn thousands of their first line troops from their right and centre, thus weakening their line. It is said that the Allies' offensive will be vigorously prosecuted in an endeavour to force a wedge into the German line thus forcing their withdrawal farther to the north.

With the weather moderating it is said that there will be a renewal of fighting all along the line. The French aviators report that the Germans are bringing up heavy reinforcements in Flanders, but whether there will be another attempt to reach the sea is considered doubtful. It is believed that these troops will be utilized in maintaining present positions and in essaying offensive movements that will lessen the pressure on the German lines in Alsace and along the Meuse.

Roumania Mobilizes 750,000

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The Morning Post's Bucharest correspondent says: Roumania is mobilizing 750,000 men, of which number half a million forms the field army.

"Roumania will strike even should Italy decide not to enter the war."

AVIATORS ACTIVE SO BERLIN SAYS

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, Jan. 9.—German aviators have renewed their activities all along the western battle line, and already have caused much damage to the enemy. Half a dozen aircraft have successfully bombarded the military depots in Strasseele and Hazebrouck, dropping bombs on them and setting them on fire. Just as their work was completed a detachment of British aviators on bi-planes and mounting rapid-fire guns went in pursuit. The outcome is not known here yet.

TURKS REFORM FOR ANOTHER OFFENSIVE

PETROGRAD, Jan. 3.—A statement from the general staff of the Russian army in the Caucasus made public here to-night, says:

"The Turks, apparently in order to relieve the predicament of the tenth army corps, parts of which reformed hurriedly after the Battle of Sari Kamysh, again have taken the offensive vigorously in the vicinity of Karaourgan.

"The situation is unchanged on the other fronts."

MUST APOLOGIZE

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, Jan. 8.—Secret messages sent to the Italian Ambassador at Constantinople to-day are said to have contained orders to leave the Turkish capital at 6 p.m. Saturday, with all the members of the Embassy staff, and turn affairs over to United States Ambassador Morgenthau.

Turkey has been given until Saturday evening to apologise for the arrest of the British Consul in the Italian Consulate at Hodeida, but it is believed here that a rupture of diplomatic relations between Turkey and Italy is certain, and this will be followed by forcible action by Italy against Turkey.

Man Who Shot Rev. J Scott Is Remanded for Another Week.

TORONTO, June 9.—Henry Asher, the missionary to the Jews, who shot Rev. J. McP. Scott, was yesterday remanded by Col. Denison to another week in jail, on the charge of shooting to kill.

Asher has been two weeks in jail so far, bail being refused. This will be his third. He has been found to be absolutely sane. He refused to be examined by the jail physicians, and T. C. Robinette, K.C., did not insist on it.

GERMAN AIRMEN ABOVE CALAIS

North-western France, Jan. 8. — Germah airmen seem now to have inaugurated something like a daily air service, weather and other circumstances permitting, along the northern coast line. Sometimes they drop a few bombs ,and on their gala days they kill a few women and children. On other occasions they simply flutter along and back again, without doing any damage, even to non-combatants. Yesterday morning two German biplanes appeared over Calais, flying very high. Four French gunboats in the harbour manned their guns and sent them a volley of welcome, which apparently was sufficient to keep them out of range of any spot worth bombarding.

The air guns in the fortifications waited quietly for the Germans to come within range, but they never got a chance, nor did the soldiers on land and the sailors in the harbour, whose fire was held in preparation.

Managed to Escape.

Dunkirk was notified of the German visitors' arrival, and Commander Samson and a French aviator went aloft in the hope of cutting them out on their return voyage, but the air was not clear enough and the Germans managed to get away quite safely.

There was talk also of dirigibles having been seen over Gravelines, the number was given as three, but the evidence is rather questionable, as the hour when they were supposed to arrive was exceedingly misty.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE SWEEPING

Austrians Admit the Success of the Czar's Forces in the Bukowina

THE POLAND FIGHTING

SPECIAL CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 8. — Despatches from Petrograd and Vienna agree in confirming the sweeping character of the Russian advance through Bukowina and the Carpathians and the continued retreat of the Austro-Hungarian forces in these regions, and the failure of the German advance on Warsaw. The last Russian advance across the Carpathians was a cavalry affair only, but this time the Russian has come to stay.

Regarding the advance through Bukowina, an official Austrian report from Vienna says:

"In the Carpathian forest lands and the southern part of the crown land of Bukowina, regard for the safety of our advance troops obliged us to fall back on the principal mountain passes before an enemy numerically superior to ourselves.

"On the Maros-Ludason front everything is quiet; in the higher districts there is some frost and snow.

"On the Dunajec River and in Russian Poland there have here and there been some artillery exchanges."

Record of German Failure.

The London Chronicles Petrograd correspondent, Percival Gibbons, cables as follows:

Once again Poland has seen a great German general attack along the whole line of the Bzura and Rawka positions from Gradow to Rawa. For 36 hours the battle shifted like a moving flame in a long line. Now that its intensity has abated, it is clear the German purpose has again failed of accomplishment, and at several points the Russian line has advanced. We have no key to the German mentality which inspires these attacks, so wasteful in lives of soldiers and so ineffectual in their general result.

In the records of this struggle along the courses of two little rivers I have notes of upwards of 100 attacks in considerable force, of which not a single one resulted in shifting the imperturbable Russian infantry from a trench, but each of which has been accompanied by a ghastly loss to the Germans.

German Artillery Poor.

A fight, characteristic of operations on this front, took place to the west of Gradow, where the German attack was exceptionally heavy throughout New Year's Day, culminating in an assault by the infantry. On the same night and throughout the day they shelled the Russian trenches, spending ammunition with their customary lavishness. Days of shelling, justified the Russian opinion that of the German forces their artillery and cavalry are the weakest arm, and the infantry is the best.

Positions are not greatly disturbed by the day-long shrapnel fire, and the Russians are more than ready for the attack. On this front the infantry attack usually in line, but this night they came up in dense columns. The Russian guns were at work promptly, with the fuses of shells reduced so that they burst almost at the gun's mouth, and from trenches steady, schooled infantry fire tore gaps in the dense masses of the enemy.

Russians Outnumbered.

At Gradow the Russians were utterly outnumbered. To this extent the German concentration of forces was successful, but no further. They succeeded in reducing the Russian tactics from mere defence of trenches to delivering counter-attacks, but this was the limit of their success.

German Official Account.

"On the East Prussian frontier and in northern Poland the situation remains unchanged.

"East of the Rawka River our attacks are progressing. One thousand six hundred Russians were taken as prisoners and five machine guns were captured by us.

"Only artillery battles took place on the eastern bank of the Pilica River."

FIGHTING RESUMED ALONG THE VISTULA

Forces of Von Hindenburg Have Again Taken the Offensive and German Commanders Are Sacrificing Thousands of Men in an Endeavour to Win Through to Warsaw

WILL RETIRE IF UNSUCCESSFUL

SPECIAL CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 9.—Fighting has been resumed along the Vistula, following a lull due to bad weather. The forces of Von Hindenburg have again taken the offensive and German commanders are sacrificing thousands of men in an endeavour to win through outer Russian positions. According to official and unofficial reports received to-day the chief scene of conflict is now between Sukhe and Mogilsky. The Germans by a brilliant night attack managed to gain a foothold in the outer Russian trench plans this front, but were in turn repulsed by a counter assault at dawn. The weather has turned very cold and swampy marshes along the reaches of the Vistula are frozen solid, thus enabling both sides to utilize practically all of their forces. The Germans have been heavily reinforced by troops withdrawn from the firing line in France and Belgium, and it is believed by military experts here that the present move is their final attempt to take Warsaw. If they are defeated this time, and reports from the front indicate that they are at least checked, then they must retire to their own lines along the Prussian frontier.

A TERRIFIC DRIVE BY THE ALLIES

French and British Forces Capture Entire First Line and Part of Second and Third German Trenches

A BRILLIANT SUCCESS

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 8. — A terrific drive, rivalling in intensity the battle of the Yser and in spectacular daring of execution the brilliant attacks in Alsace, carried the French and British forces facing General Von Kluck's left over a redoubt and two lines of the German trenches and up to the third in the region to the north of Soissons to-day.

Air scouts early in the day reported important concentrations of troops in the rear of the German lines from the direction of Laon. Strong bodies of reserves and Landwehr troops were being moved up through the labyrinthian system of trenches on the plateau on the north bank of the Aisne.

An attack in force to forestall the German effort was ordered, and the French "75's" got the range of the reserves and shelled the positions in the rear to disperse the forces which were assembling for the support, while the smaller guns and the quick firers raked the first line of the enemy's trenches and hammered the earthworks from which the Germans were working their rapid-fire pieces.

French Infantry Charge.

A terrific cannonade was maintained for a fixed period, and when firing suddenly ceased the French infantry swarmed over the front of their trenches and struggled through the mud up to the redoubt. In the face of a deadly fire they fell upon these works, and bayonetted the occupants within. Halting only for a brief spell while the French guns again hammered the German lines in front, they advanced again, and with only a brief pause at the wire entanglements, clambered up and over the first line of the invader's defensive works.

Here the attackers met their most stubborn resistance. The fighting was man to man, and the East Indian detachments did valiant service. Mud covered the clothing of the hostile hordes, so friend was not easily distinguished from foe, and the treacherous footing added new terrors to the bayonet fighting.

Shoulder Deep in Water.

In the forest of Resthonval, near Arras, the French and British were compelled to evacuate a section of their trenches because the mud and water was up to the shoulders of the men.

Near Rheims a German blockhouse was mined and blown up, and the French advanced their trenches 200 yards.

Hundreds of German dead were left on the field as a result of heavy artillery combats between Bethany and Prunay, along the Aisne, and a number of German batteries have been repeatedly silenced in this section.

200,000 Men Fighting.

Geneva, Jan. 8.—The fighting in Lower Alsace is daily growing in intensity around Steinbach, Cornay and Thann. Villages, houses, and trenches are taken and retaken at the point of the bayonet, and the casualties on both sides have been extremely heavy.

It is stated that about 200,000 in all are engaged, and that both sides are using heavy guns. The Germans are continuously hurrying reinforcements from the Rhine forts.

Capture German Redoubt.

Paris, Jan. 8.—The following official communication was issued tonight:

"To the north of Soissons we have captured a German redoubt, taking two successive lines of trenches, and reaching the third line. Three counter attacks by the Germans failed.

In the Argonne a very violent rear attack on the summit of the heights of Chevauchee was made. We were at first forced to retire one kilometre from this front, but later made counter-attacks and reoccupied our positions.

Gains Near St. Georges.

The following official statement was issued this afternoon:

"The artillery of the enemy showed, during all the day of January 7, great activity in Belgium and in the vicinity of Arras. The French artillery responded spiritedly and efficaciously.

"Our infantry made some progress near Lombaertayde. We occupied at a point fifty yards in advance of our trenches a redoubt which had been held by the enemy. To the east of St. Georges we gained ground, and we inflicted serious damage on the tranches of the enemy in the vicinity of Steenstraate.

"In the sector of Arras, at the forest of Rerthonval, without being attacked we were compelled to evacuate certain tranches where our men were up to their shoulders in sand and water. To the left of Boiselle our line of trenches has been moved forward, and we occupied the road from Boiselle to Aveluy.

"In the valley of the Aisne the artillery exchanges yesterday were quite spirited. Our heavy artillery secured good results near Blanc Sablon. At this point the mine-throwers of the enemy inflicted losses on us, but in the afternoon we checked this fire from the Germans.

"In the sector of Rheims to the west of the Forest des Bouaves, we blew up a blockhouse and occupied a new trench 200 yards in advance of our lines.

Fierce Artillery Battle

"The artillery engagement between Bethany and Prunay was conducted yesterday with great fierceness. The Germans left many dead on the field; our losses were not heavy. Between Joucherry-sur-Suippe and Souain, we time and again reduced to silence the artillery of the enemy, demolished his trenches and destroyed his breastworks.

"In the Argonne, to the west of Haute Chevalchee, the enemy, by means of a mine, blew up some of our first line trenches, which were completely demolished. A violent attack undertaken at once by the enemy on our positions, was repulsed with the bayonet. We took some prisoners, and we maintained our front, except for a distance of about 80 yards. Here the demolition of the trenches obliged us to establish our line 20 yards back.

"On the heights of the Meuse and between the Meuse and the Moselle there is nothing to report. Here the wind blew a tempest all the day long, January 7th.

Progress near Altkirch

"Our offensive continued yesterday in the region of Thann and near Altkirch and brought important results. We occupied the trenches on the eastern flank of hill 425, a position where the enemy two days ago succeeded in re-establishing himself. We then gained some ground to the east of these trenches. Farther to the south we occupied Burnhaupt le Haut, and at the same time we made progress in the direction of Pont D'Aspach and the Kielling.

"The artillery of the enemy, which had endeavoured without success to reach our batteries, gave over shooting at our artillery in favour of the exclusive bombardment of the hospital at Thann, which has been evacuated."

The German Report.

Berlin, January 8—The German official statement given out in Berlin to-day, says:.

"In the western theatre of war the continuous rains swamp the ground in Flanders more and more and our operations in consequence are very much hindered.

"To the east of Rheims the French attempted during the night to take one of our outer trenches but they were driven back into their own positions by a counter attack, losing 80 prisoners.

"In the centre and in the eastern part of the Argonne we made further progress.

"A night attack by the French against our positions on the Buchenkopf, south of Diedolshausen, in the Vosges, was repulsed. Repeated French attacks on a height to the west of Senaheim (Cernay) broke down under our artillery fire. We took two officers and more than 100 men as prisoners."

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

"It hadn't occurred to me to doubt that," she commented as he paused. "I told ye we was distrustful of foreigners," said Anse Havey. "Some day thar'll be a bigger war here than the Havey-McBriar war. Ye've seen somethin' of that. That other war will be your people an' when it comes there won't be any McBriars or Haveys. We'll all be mountaineers, standin' together an' holdin' what God gave us against them that seeks to plunder us. God knows I hate Milt McBriar an' his tribe—hate 'em with all the power of hatin' that's in me—an' I'm a mountain man. But Milt's people an' my people have one thing in common. We're mountain men an' these hills are our'n. We have the same killin' instinct when men seek to rob us. We want to be let alone, an' if we fight amongst ourselves it ain't nothin' to the way we'll fight, shoulder to shoulder and back to back, against the robbers from Down-below."

The man paused again and as Juanita looked into his blazing eyes she shuddered for it seemed that the killing instinct of which he spoke was burning there. She thought of nothing to say and he went on.

"It's war between families now—but when your people come—come to buy for nothin' and fatten on our starvation we men of the mountains will forget that an' I reckon we'll fight together like all damnation against the rest. Thet's why I'm counsellin' folks not to sell heedless."

"Then you did not forbid your people to sell to me?" inquired the girl.

"Why in h——l should I make war on ye?" he suddenly inquired. "Does a man fight children? We don't fight the helpless up here in the hills.'"

"Possibly," she suggested with a trace of irony, "when you learn that I'm not so helpless you won't be so merciful."

"We'll wait till that time comes," said the man shortly. "Helpless! Why, the good Lord knows, ma'am, I pity ye. Can't ye see what odds ye're contendin' against. Can't ye see that ye're fightin' God's hills and sandstone an' winds an' thunder! Can't ye see ye're tryin' ter take out of men's veins the fire in their blood: the fire that's been burnin' there for two centuries? Ye're like a little child tryin' ter pull down a jail-house. Ye're singin' lullaby songs to the thunder. Yes, I feel right sorry for ye, but I ain't a-fightin' ye."

"I'm doing none of those things," she protested with a defiant blaze in her eyes; "I'm only trying to show these people that their ignorance is not necessary, that it's only part of a scheme to keep them vassals. You talk about the wild, free spirit of the mountain men. I think that free men will listen to that argument."

Anse Havey laughed.

"Change 'em!" he repeated, disregarding the slur of her last speech. "Why, if you don't give it up and go back to your birds that pick at berries, do you know what will happen to ye? I'll tell ye. Thar will be a change, but it won't be in us. It'll be in you. You'll be mountainized."

She stood and looked at him and her violet eyes were brimming with starry contempt. Her delicate chin tilted disdainfully and her lips curled a little. It was such a look as some Caesar's daughter, borne on the necks of slaves, might have cast down on a barbarian slave chained to his sweep in the galleys. So she regarded him for the galley slaves, too, had been criminals.

"Who will change me?" she inquired with a stinging scorn of voice. "You—and the men like you?"

The children felt the lash of her disdain with all the sensitiveness of mountain pride, but he betrayed no recognition.

"Mebby it won't be me, nor yet men like me. But the air ye breathe; the life ye live; the water ye drink, all the things that God Almighty forges in places that's close to his free sky; them things will do it."

"Ye can't live where the storms come from an' where the rivers are born an' not have their spirit get into your blood. Ye may think ye're in partners with God, but I reckon ye'll find the hills are bigger than you be. How much land do ye need?"

"Why?"

"Because, by God, I ai mto see that ye get it. Ye say I'm scaired of ye. I aim to show ye how much I'm scaired. I aim to let ye go your own fool way, an' flounder in your own quicksand. An' if nobody won't sell ye what ye want, let me know, an' by Almighty God, I'll make ye a free gift of a farm, an' I'll build your school myself. Thet's how much I'm scaired of ye. I've tried to be friends with ye an' ye won't have it. Now just go as far as ye feel inclined an' se how much I mind ye." He turned abruptly on his heel and went out, closing the door behind him.

CHAPTER XV.

That summer Juanita's cabin had risen on the small patch of ground bought from the Widow Everson, for in these hills the raising of a house is a simple thing which goes forward subject to no delays of striking workmen or balking contractors. The usual type with its single room may be reared in a few days by volunteers who turn their labour into a frolic. Neighbours lend a hand, and there are no bosses and no underlings, but each man is a monarch contributing his labour as an equal, and the smell of freshly sawed lumber goes up like incense in the air, while the simple craftsmen strive mightily in a good-humoured rivalry of skill and brawn.

To Juanita's ears the sound of the hammers and the scream of the little portable saw-mill down in the valley had been a music in keeping with the languorous haze of the horizon and the spicy fragrance of the cider presses. She had owed much to Jerry Everson and to Good Anse Talbott, for, had her building force been solidly of Havey or McBriar complexion, the school would henceforth have stood branded, in native eyes, a feud institution.

But Good Anse and Jerry, who were tolerated by both factions, and were gifted with a rough-hewn diplomacy, had known upon whom to call, even while they had seemed to select at random. So a stanch little house of squared logs had gone up in a place just above and to the right of the widow's, where the girl could see from her window the tall poplar on the crest. It had three rooms, and she had been gayer and blither while she supervised her volunteer helpers than at any other time since she had come to these hills.

Something of herself had gone into the fashioning which gave the place, in spite of the meagre limitations of remoteness and isolation, a touch of art and character. She had designed and helped build a hearth of rough stone, which would not only warm, but decorate as well. She had seen to the thoroughness of the chinking, too, until one man who dwelt in a wind-riddled house of his own gravely shook his head and expressed fear that, "She war liable ter sulter an' sicken fer lack of fresh air." The windows he regarded with even greater suspicion as making a needless concession to one's enemies.

Juanita Holland had grown up largely with boys. Of late, since she had fancied herself disappointed beyond retrieving of heart, she had been asking herself often the question, "Why are boys so much manlier than men?" But these big, loosely-knit, leathern-sinewed creatures, bearded like prophets, were more boys than men after all and for them she felt a quick comradeship.

The cabin had been finished just before the news came of the death of Fletch McNash, and Jerry Everson had gone over with her to survey and admire it.

As he stood under the newly laid roof, sniffing the fresh woody fragrance of the green timbers he produced from under his coat what looked like a giant powder horn. He had scraped and polished it until it shone like varnish and he hung it by its leather thong above the hearth.

"What is it for, Jerry?" demanded the girl; and he took it down again and set it to his lips and blew. A mellow sound, not loud, but far-carrying like the fox hunter's tallyho floated over the valley. "Our house hain't more'n a whoop an' a holler away," he said awkwardly, "but when ye're livin' over hyar by yoreself ef ye ever wants anything in ther night time jest blow thet horn." After she had almost burst her cheeks in her effort he added with a grin, "Don't never blow this signal onlessen ye wants ter raise merry hell." He imitated very low through pursed lips three long blasts and three short ones.

"What does that signify" she demanded.

"Ye've done already heerd ther McBriar yell," he reminded her. "Well them three longs an' three shorts is ther Havey rallyin' call. When thet goes out every Havey thet kin tote a gun's got ter git up an' come. Hit means war."

"Oh," exclaimed Juanita. Then she laughed and quoted low to herself,

"Shame on the false Etruscan who lingers at his home,
When Lars Porsena of Clusium is on the march for Rome."

In a minute she added, "Thank you, Jerry. I won't call the Haveys to battle."

The night after she had flung her challenge down to Bad Anse Havey, Juanita stayed at the McNash cabin, to be with Dawn and the widow. The next day she went with them to the mountain-side "buryin' ground" where Good Anse performed the last rites for the dead.

The "jolt-wagon" which carried the unpainted box was drawn ploddingly by oxen, for the "buryin' ground" lay up a steep trail, and the funeral procession made its way in a laborious and straggling line. It was a strange cortege and mournful despite the bright calico of the women's dresses. As they rode, mountain-fashion, facing to the side and shaking their arms like wings, they would have made a picture grotesquely funny had it not been so grotesquely wretched and sombre. The dusty purple of the iron-weed tops seemed to be waving plumes of ragged mourning, and in a patch of briars they came to the freshly dug grave, where the sun glinted on the men's rifle-barrels.

Juanita, looking around the circle, saw the still, apathetic face of the wife, and the tearful one of Little Dawn, and she wondered if her own features were as stolid as those others about her. Here where the ridges piled up with such a power of accumulated sullenness, all outward display of emotion seemed out of place. She watched the grim-set lips and tightly clenched hands of Jeb and Little Jesse as their eyes with one accord travelled toward the eastern ridges, where dwelt the authors of this death and she shudderingly felt that this burial marked not an end, but a beginning. So she looked away from those faces, sickened by forebodings, though deeply in sympathy, too, and her eyes met, across the open grave, those of Bad Anse Havey.

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. John Harper, Toronto, Ont., writes "I have used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for the heart and nervous system. I was confined to a grocery store for twelve years, and had to give up business, as I became terribly run down and nervous, and had heart trouble, and I am sure I am gaining very fast now. I feel that nothing did me any good until I tried your Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am positive they will cure me. The nerves of one hand would tremble and then seem to go numb so that I could not write or sew. Now my hand is quite steady, as you can see by my handwriting. This is a big change which delights me so much for I thought all was done that could be done. I was about to give up in despair when I tried this last remedy, and even after I had only taken half a box the change started to come."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the enfeebled, enervated, exhausted, overworked system to full constitutional power.

Peps
What are they?

Peps is the name bestowed upon a new scientific preparation put up into tablets or pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds and lung and throat troubles.

Did it never occur to you as peculiar that when you have a cough or a cold, or any chest trouble, you should apply medicine—not to your lungs, but to your stomach?

Look at it the other way round. Suppose you suffered from some stomach complaint—indigestion or ulceration. How strange you would think it if you were asked to take a medicine which had to be breathed in, and which went—not to your stomach, but to your lungs and breathing passages?

Peps—this newest remedy for coughs, colds, and lung troubles—go to the lungs and breathing-tubes, direct. Peps are really pine fumes, and certain highly beneficial medicinal extracts specially prepared by a new scientific process and then condensed into tablet form. It is like making a breathable gas solid!

You put a "Pep" on your tongue and let it dissolve. As it does so, the healing essences it contains turn into vapor, and you BREATHE them direct to your lungs and air passages!

Just as the out-door treatment for consumption—the "breathing" treatment—is now admitted to be the only rational treatment, so the "Peps" treatment for colds and lung troubles is the only rational home treatment.

Peps cure catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, sore throat, tightness or aching across the chest, difficulty in breathing, night cough, hoarseness, asthma, laryngitis, smoker's throat, etc. Best for children, because free from opium, morphine, or any poison.

All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25.

FREE TRIAL

Cut out this article, write across it the name of this paper, and mail it to Peps Co., Toronto, or 53 Princess Street, Winnipeg, enclosing 1 cent stamp to pay for return postage. A free trial packet of Peps will be mailed you by return. If you have a friend suffering from a cough, cold, or any throat or lung trouble, hand this on.

GOSSIPERS AND THEIR MENACE TO SOCIETY

Honest People Who Would Not Dream of Stealing a Pin Will Rob Their Acquaintances of Their Good Names Without a Moment's Compunction

The love of gossip is the most inexplicable of all human weaknesses. It is one savage trait that has survived both civilization and Christianity, and that bows how elementally cruel we still are.

Every day we see people who are so tender hearted that they would not hurt a fly, yet they do not hesitate to blast a woman's reputation by setting afloat evil stories about her — stories that are the merest hearsay, and which they do not take the trouble to investigate.

Every day we see people who shudder with horror as they read tales of how savages amuse themselves by torturing their prisoner to death, yet these humanitarians pass a pleasant evening together by crucifying the reputation of everyone they know who has the bad luck to be absent.

Every day you see good, moral people who really believe that they have the welfare of their fellow creatures at heart, who do not hesitate to disseminate scandalous stories that break up homes and wreck the careers of men and women.

Every day you meet honest people who would not dream of stealing a pin from you, but without a moment's compunction they will rob you of your good name.

And the gossiper is not only more dangerous than the thief, more cruel than the savage, he or she is also more cowardly. The thief takes his chances of detection and punishment. The savage comes out into the open when he sticks his dart into his victim, but the gossiper works under cover, hidden and safe.

Your gossiper never says: "I know that that Mr. X is in love with his stenographer because I saw him kiss her," or "Mrs. Q. has an affair with young B., for I have seen them repeatedly together and met them fox trotting around at a dozen afternoon tea places," or "I know Sallie Jones writes love notes, because I have read them."

Not at all. The gossipers never back up a story by personal knowledge for which they could be sued for libel. On the contrary they take refuge in hearsay.

"They say," is all the authority they give for taking away a woman's honour, or destroying a man's standing in the community. Sometimes gossipers will even go so far as to say that they do not believe a word of the scandal they are telling, and having thus salved their consciences they proceed with the nefarious work of knifing a fellow creature's reputation — and knifing it in the back.

Be So Discreet That You Need Not Fear the Gossipers.

There can be no justification for gossip. It is the most despicable phase of man's inhumanity to man, and seeing how we are all alike, weak and human, and all of us stumble and fall, we might at least cover with silence the faults and frailties of our brothers and sisters. Heaven forgive us if we act upon any trait the wolves of gossip.

There is this lesson for girls: Be so discreet in your conduct that you need not fear the gossiper. Keep your skirts immaculately clean. Never forget that the tiniest splash of mud from the gutter on a girl's petticoat is like the scent of a dead carcass that sets these wolves of society on her track.

They will follow her snapping and snarling and tearing at her until they tear her to pieces. Many a girl who has been not bad, only foolish, has been hounded into her grave by these cruel beasts. Wary of them, girls, and remember that your only protection against them is not only to be good; but to look good, and act good.

How The Shrewd Women of Nevada Won Miners and Cowboys Over to Suffrage

RENO, Nev., Dec. 30.—Woman has come to her own in Nevada. Woman, who in all the wild days of gambling, wild-catting, fold grubbing, tent-life and salon-ruled days when men pitted strength and cunning against other men and nature in the frenzied period of the state's beginnings occupied but one place, and that one not calculated to raise the stock of her sex!

But now womanhood has flowered to its full glory and responsibility in Nevada. The mothers of the new generation, the women who have brought order and comfort and cleanliness in place of a wild chaos can vote as well as wash dishes and play the piano.

As in California and Oregon, the neighbouring states, the men of Nevada were readily persuaded to give their women a part in the political an civic life of the blossoming west.

It is a stirring story—this drama of how the mothers and daughters and sweethearts of Nevada's men won them over to equal suffrage.

Cultured, purposeful women went about in automobiles in towns and out along the mines, speaking strange words of equality, of opportunity and responsibility to the listening men; words that for all their newness, however, struck home to the bedrock of the western man's nature, deeper than chivalry.

On horseback, dust-coated, across the desert they rode to carry the propaganda. From Vassar and Smith colleges, from the University of California and Leland Stanford, persuasive and zealous suffragists went forth to help in the conquest of Nevada. They were pretty, witty, sensible. The men admitted that without argument. They presided at dinners. They organized dances—wonderfully colourful desert tango parties where cowboys danced with jingling spurs and miners laughed their rumbling tribute to joy.

If equal suffrage could take account of such things, if votes for women meant such a fine spirit of companionship among men and women, why they were for it. They were for it with a "whoopee" and a "whee!"

Plays were staged in place of tiresome lectures. The unattached men in chaps and dungarees forgot their names of "Pan" and the tinkle of the mechanical piano in the bars. They came to these meetings, plays, dances and parties in bunches. They went away persuaded.

Nevada is of all States in the Union most male. To the majority of them womanhood has heretofore been simply categoried as "good" and "bad"! That's about as far as the majority had gone into the woman question. They made love, and they married—or got the cold shoulder. Women were "good" or "bad". What they had belonged to their women. It was woman's part in the game of life to have a hot dinner ready and to keep the kids out of too much devilment. But about women' rights? Well, that was sort of a new one. Hadn't thought very much about it!

This was the most virgin territory in the country for a woman's suffrage campaign. And the campaign was by all odds the most picturesque staged in the United States for the winning of the ballot.

But for the efficient leadership of such women as Anne H. Martin, state president of the Suffrage League, Mrs. R. D. Eichelberger, state treasurer, and co-workers, Nevada would have spelled defeat for suffrage as did Missouri, North Dakota and Ohio in this last election.

When there was a lack of funds the women baked and sold cookies or suffrage calendars. They went everywhere.

Margaret Foley, one of the zealots, spoke to a group of miners blinking in the light of their candles, on the 600-foot level of a deep shaft.

Mrs. Funk, another resourceful worker, arrived in a mining camp on a delayed train. Everyone had gone to bed. She had but a limited amount of time. Her message was imperative enough, she thought, to rouse the sleepers. Did they mind losing sleep to hear about equal suffrage? Not a bit!

Dressing hastily they gathered about the speaker, each man holding a miner's candle. And thus Mrs. Funk appealed to them to "light the new candle of women's freedom in the free west."

And they did. It was from camps like these that the winning majority piled up on election day.

Coal Operators Prepare for War.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 6. — After deciding that at least some of the mines in eastern Ohio, where a strike of 15,000 miners has been on since April 1 last, should be operated—either by striking miners or other non-union men—the coal operators at their meeting here yesterday delegated to a committee of seven of their number the task of formulating plans for action.

A Great Catch of Birds.

There is a certain Pennsylvania farmer who is a lover of birds, yet at the same time likes to raise a fair proportion of fruit, so last summer he was greatly troubled when the woodpeckers fairly swarmed on his cherry trees, eating their fill and carrying away large quantities to their nesting places. Something must be done to save his cherries, and, as he could not bring himself to kill the birds, he invented another method. He noticed that the woodpeckers never flew among the limbs until after they had alighted on the trunk and packed around for a short time. So he got a lot of poles that were taller than the cherry trees, hoisted a pole among the branches of each tree, rested the butt on the ground and let several feet stick out above the topmost twigs. The woodpeckers soon got into the notion of clinging to the upper ends of the poles before they made a raid on the cherries, and while in that attitude the farmer would run under the tree with an ax and hit the pole as hard as he could on the opposite side from which the bird was clinging. The sudden blow invariably stunned the woodpecker and made it tumble to the ground, and before it had a chance to come to its senses the farmer picked it up and put it into a basket. In this way he captured four dozen woodpeckers inside of a fortnight without killing or even permanently injuring a single bird. Then, when the cherry crop had been gathered, he turned them loose.

The Kidneys: I have told you in a previous article about a few kidney diseases. One of the most sensible things that any human being can do when any disorder of the kidneys is suspected, is to, at once, send a four-ounce sample of the first urine voided in the morning to his physician for analysis. It is the common experience of physicians to find that people who otherwise exhibit average intelligence, prefer to remain in ignorance of their actual condition for fear that the physician may pronounce their ailment to be some dread disease that is considered incurable. Like the foolish ostrich they hide their eyes to the danger thinking it may pass them by.

Nowadays there are few conditions that cannot be vastly helped by proper attention promptly applied and many conditions that were considered incurable now yield quite readily to the right kind of treatment. A prompt and correct diagnosis is of the utmost and vital importance and a careful analysis of the urine with a complete statement of the case, symptoms, duration, etc., should enable the skilful physician to render effective service.

One of the most helpful things that the patient can do to aid the doctor, is to keep the skin as active as possible. This will relieve the kidneys of a large portion of the burden that is thrown upon them by an inactive skin. Next in importance is the diet. While it should be of a nourishing nature it should be as light and easily digested as possible. By all means avoid a combination of foods that will cause fermentation. Whenever gas forms in quantities the food is not being properly digested and more or less congestion is bound to take place. This will extend to the kidneys and hamper any treatment or remedy you may b eusing for their benefit.

Osteopathic treatment is usually of pronounced advantage in nearly all cases of kidney trouble, and if you are merely suffering with pains in the back caused by spinal lesions or contracted muscles, strain, etc., you will experience immediate and decided relief. A thorough hot fomentation at night just at the bed hour, will frequently be found of vast benefit in cases of lame back, lumbago and strain. In giving such a fomentation it is best to first sponge the back with hot vinegar and then rub well with warm olive oil. Half of an old woollen blanket should be folded lengthwise to a size that will pass through a wringer, then fold in accordion fashion in a small tub or large pail to which a wringer has been fastened, then pour into it boiling water until covered. Prepare the bed by covering the sheet with an oil-cloth or thick quilts that are not to be used again until dry. Wring out the blanket and open up to width of body and fold the length to about 25 inches and lay it on the prepared bed, then let the patient lie down with his back upon this hot pack and remain for three-quarters of an hour. Remove the wet blanket and quilts or oil-cloth, again rub the back with olive oil and cover well for the night. A good night's sleep and a freedom from the pains will follow such treatment.

There are so many simple ways in which great suffering can be relieved that all people should study the best and simplest means of home treatment, but don't stay away from the doctor, find out the real cause and remove it, Nature does the curing.

Peculiarities of Charles Reade.

Charles Reade was peculiar in many ways. Here is the reason he gave to Henry Watterson for never visiting America. "I dare not think about it," he exclaimed. "In the first place, I can't drink or smoke, and I should not get on very well with the natives. Next, I have a weakness for high living, and you Americans have such an awfully jolly lot of things to eat that I'm afraid I should cram myself to death." One of Reade's peculiarities, says J. H. Harper in "The House of Harper," was that he failed to keep copies of the manuscripts he sent. Once, after a long period of illness, he forwarded an installment of a story, having the names blank, as he had forgotten what they were.

How She Caught The Married Flirt

"It was the biggest joke!" giggled the plump brunette in the sealskin coat. "I just can't keep it to myself!

"The other day I was coming down town on a car. It was full of labourers, but I got a seat at the front end.

"Soon a gentleman got on. He's one of the best known business men in town and he has the reputation of being a flirt. I must say he's a good-looking chap, nice and fat and jolly. I am well acquainted with his wife, but he's never met me. Naturally I looked at him when he got on, because I recognized him.

"Well, I guess he thought I looked interested in him, because he smiled over at me very sweetly. Then when a lady got on the car he gave up his seat to her and came over to sit beside me.

"'Well,' thinks I, 'it's coming. But just wait, my friend, I'll show you something before you are done with me.' You see, I knew all about him and he didn't know anything about me," again giggled the plump brunette.

"Pretty soon he cleared his throat and s' he to me: 'Does this car connect with the —— line?' s' he.

"I pretty nearly choked at his asking me such a fool question.

"'It does,' s' I.

"'Oh, I'm so glad,' s' he. 'I'm a stranger here in New York and I want to go to the Union Club.'

"'Oh!' s' I.

"'Yes,' s' he. 'Some friends of mine are waiting for me there.'

"Then he went on to tell me what a pretty city he thought this was.

"'Yes,' s' I, 'and you've just come from one of the prettiest parts.'

"'I've been visiting a friend of mine up in Clifton Park,' s' he, and he actually told me the name of his friend, who is another big business man here.

"'Oh,' s' I, 'I know him very well. If you've been up there I suppose, s' I, 'I suppose you've met a good friend of his—Mr. Blank,' s' I.

"Well, say—I mentioned his own name right to his face and you should have seen the jump that man made. Believe me, he certainly did look taken down, too, for a minute. Then he put both hands to his head.

"'By Jiminy!' s' he. 'You got me that time. I've tried that same little spiel hundreds of times and this is the first time I got caught. Did you know me from the start? And how'd you know me, anyway?' s' he.

"'Yes,' s' I. 'And you ought to know me well enough,' s' I, 'for I'm a good friend of your wife.'

"Sure, I'm not going to tell her," stated the plump brunette. "S'pose I'm going to make trouble in a man's home just because he likes to have a little fun once in a while? But that's not saying I'm not going to tell everybody else. The joke's on him and he's got to stand for it. I'd like to catch some more of these flirty married men as easy as that. There are lots of them, you know. Most of them don't mean any harm by it—they just want to talk to somebody they're not married to and make believe they're free to be gay old dogs. I expect my own husband has his fling, too, going as a stranger in town and a single man and so on. As long as he doesn't get into mischief I don't care, and I wouldn't thank anybody for telling me about it, either!"

Willie tried and tried, as the stone was a large one, and finally succeeded. He was all curiosity to see what was under the stone. He saw nothing but another inscription on the other side, which read:

"Now turn me back again, so that I can catch some other idiot."

The First Airship.

If we can believe certain ancient historians Xerxes was the owner of the first airship. The chroniclers say it was received as a gift from his countrymen and consisted of a wicker chariot, to which were harnessed four white swans. Food held above the hungry birds was the incentive of the motive power, and, in any case, their struggles to surpass their opponent resulted in raising the throne from the ground.

Is Electric Cooking Expensive?

No! It is Not.

IN the first place, the present low cost of electricity enables the average family to operate their Electric Range at a cost as low, if not lower, than they are now paying for their gas or coal Range.

For example: on an actual test in the Moffat Electra oven a 5lb. Roast of Beef was cooked in 1 hr. 55 minutes at a total cost of a little over 2 cents. Surely this is far from being expensive!

Then, the shrinkage in the meat after cooking was only 2 ounces. Compare this with the shrinkage when roasted by gas or coal, when an actual tests a 5 lb. Roast loses as much as 1 pound! You can readily see what you would save in a short time by Electric Cooking. The saving in meat alone is over ten times the cost of roasting it.

The perfected Electric Range of to-day is practical, efficient and economical. We would like to tell you more about the Continental Officers Lend Romantic Color to London

One Limps Into Fashionable Restaurant with Soldierly Salute, and Belgian Officer Enters Tea House and Eats Pastry, Placing Captured German Helmet on a Chair.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, January 9.

For the first time in their lives many thousands of Londoners are seeing the French military officer. He is to be met with everywhere. As he strolls down the Strand, smoking the inevitable cigarette, looking a little worn and slightly dusty, he brings a breath of the Continent to these gray streets and provides just that dash of color which, as the poets say, is so conspicuously absent from the drab workaday life.

London is cosmopolitan, it is true. The turbaned man from Asia jostles the Chinaman in the streets, but no mingling of nationalities and no number of ordinary tourists could give that Continental atmosphere to the streets imparted by the gay French officer.

If you are sitting at your café in Paris, sipping the absinthe of youth, the officer strolling by under the trees, brave in his blue jacket, his maroon colored breeches and his cap curiously crushed toward the brim, attracts your attention and strikes you as symbolizing the romantic soul of a nation which, having lost the Latin Quarter of Henry Murger, is not bankrupt in the picturesque.

The British officer looks practical; the German officer looks snobbish; but the French officer looks incurably romantic. And here they are in London to-day, French and Belgian soldiers, coloring the black London crowd by their strange uniforms, taking an interest in everything English and generally making the best of circumstances which have spelled a temporary exile from their own land.

It is good to see that the English people, deliciously insular and suspicious of anything strange and foreign, have taken these men to their hearts.

A charming incident was witnessed regularly recently by the diners in a well known London restaurant. Every evening a Belgian officer, a grizzled man of middle age, would limp into the dining room and, when on the threshold, would draw himself stiffly up, click his heels together and give a military salute.

The first time this happened the diners appeared embarrassed and, while recognizing the compliment, were in doubt how to receive it. The problem was solved by two young men in khaki, who rose quickly and saluted. The next time the old warrior paid his respects to the gathering there was no quick witted response, but there was no lack of smiles, sympathetic and appreciative.

The other day a Belgian officer walked into a popular tea house. He was carrying a Gladstone bag; he had obviously just landed in England. He took something which was linked to his arm and placed it carefully on a chair. It was a German helmet.

Then he composed himself to eat pastry and drink tea. All around fashionable women threw back their thick black furs, drew off their scented gloves and talked of the thousand things women talk about at tea. Between the tables neat waitresses carried sugared cakes, and in the midst of it all sat this strange, war stained man with a grim relic beside him.

Yet people are always crying out for "romance," for the vigorous days of the Lion Heart, while all the time deeds as noble and as dreadful as any the Middle Ages saw are being done at these very doors; the spirit of the Crusades is alive to-day, and among the many strange people which the war is sending to these shores few are stranger to the Londoner than the gens de guerre who placed his foeman's helmet upon the chair of a London tea shop.

Austrian and German Rulers Have Taint of Madness, Says Dr. Neipp

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, January 9.

In the "Revue de Psychotherapie," of Geneva, Dr. Neipp, vice president of the Swiss Academy of Medicine, and a well known specialist on nervous and mental diseases, publishes a curious analysis of the physical and mental characteristics of the two allied Emperors. He considers these two potentates, who are politically and morally responsible for the catastrophes under which the world is suffering, to be medically scarcely answerable for their acts.

The case of the Emperor Francis Joseph is simple. With an extraordinarily robust physical constitution, he possesses a nervous and sensitive equipment below the average. His retreating, low forehead, small brain capacity and thick skull are apparent signs of this inferiority. He seems never to have understood, and hardly to have felt, what has been going on around him. The most fearful domestic tragedies and public dramas have left him with an untroubled digestion and a mind free for ordinary occupations and amusements. After summing up a technical diagnosis of his case Dr. Neipp predicts that the Emperor-King probably will vegetate for a few more years after the inevitable dismemberment of the monarchy and end his days in senile imbecility.

The case of the Kaiser is more complicated. Here we have a nature exceptionally endowed with intellectual faculties, enough to have made him a good officer or public servant if he had been born in private life. But his childhood and youth were passed in the intoxication of the Prussian triumphs of 1866 and 1870, which turned his head, until Teutonic pride was embed in his brain, at the same time that will power degenerated to such a degree that it was not equal to restraining the abnormal growth of unbridled ambition. To do him justice, it must be allowed that this pathological condition of the Kaiser's intelligence is probably due in a great measure to the state of his physical health, arising from hereditary taints. The symptoms of congenital ailments are numerous —one arm atrophied, swellings of the joints and ear trouble. The Kaiser suffers from agonizing headaches and frequent insomnia.

Dr. Neipp concludes that if Francis Joseph is a victim of want of will power the Kaiser Wilhelm is a hyperacute slave to caprice, and liable to intermittent attacks of melancholy madness or dangerous lunacy. The Professor is of opinion that the Kaiser will either put an end to himself in battle or finish in an asylum.

British Foreign Office Foils Attempt to Monopolize French Yellow Book

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, January 9.

What has been acclaimed a scandal, grave to some, trivial to others, has now found its denouement in comedy. I mean the developing situations that have culminated in the publication of an officially authorised translation of the French Yellow Book on the causes of the war, issued under the aegis of the Foreign Office at the modest price of one cent.

The significance of the announcement lies in what has gone before. On November 30 what the London Times described as "a remarkable series of disclosures regarding Germany's responsibility for the war" was issued by the French government in the form of an official Yellow Book. This volume was obtainable by the public at the price of 50 centimes (10 cents). The Yellow Book was quoted extensively by all English papers on December 1. The Times, taking from it four columns of extracts, to which was appended the announcement that "the full text of the documents contained in the Yellow Book, translated by the Paris correspondent of the Times, will be on sale to-day throughout the United Kingdom, price two shillings. The translation has been undertaken at the request of the French government."

While both the price at which the translation was offered to the British public and the action of the French government in intrusting its circulation to a single newspaper called for pointed remark, the arrangement evoked little immediate comment, partly through a natural reluctance to criticise the French Foreign Office and partly because it was not generally appreciated that what the Times appeared to have obtained was the sole right to an English translation of an official document of the first importance.

But a French paper, the Journal des Débats, which was in a position to criticise the arrangement with entire freedom, pointed the moral. In its issue of November 23, under the heading "Une Gaucherie," appeared a forcible comment on the transaction. The journal remarked that owing to the exigencies of copyright law "the English and American press has abstained from reproducing these documents, so convincing and so necessary to be made known. The work of French diplomacy is therefore almost lost. Further, the English translation is sold at two shillings, while the French text only costs five pence, and the English White Book is sold at one penny."

To this may be added the fact that the British government had previously published trahslations of the Belgian and Russian White Papers at four pence half penny and three pence, respectively.

The relation in price of the London Times translation to British Blue Book rates may be indicated by the fact that the former, containing 112 pages, is sold at two shillings (fifty cents), while the Minority Report of the Poor Law Commission, containing 718 pages of precisely the same size, was issued at one shilling and nine pence (forty-three cents). Both are paper covered. The new official translation contains 194 pages—one penny (two cents).

Following the criticisms of the Journal des Débats, the English newspapers drew attention to the more singular features of the London Times monopoly, and on December 9 the Times made several interesting statements on its publishing enterprise in the customary stereotyped Harmsworth fashion, mentioning (1) that there had been an enormous demand for its edition of the Yellow Book, (2) that the work had been undertaken for the benefit of the British public, (3) that no financial profit attached to it, (4) that there had been no restriction on quotation by other newspapers, and (5) that arrangements were being completed for "making the volume more accessible to the public as soon as the present issue is exhausted."

The last few words read a little oddly in view of the announcement a few lines above that another edition of the Yellow Book was in the press and would be ready in a few days—presumably at the original price. The Times translation, it may be added, bore on its title page the note:—"Les droits de la traduction et de reproduction de la traduction anglaise du présent Livre Jaune appartiennent pour tous les pays au journal anglais, the Times."

Meanwhile, however, the British Foreign Office had not been idle. There is no reason to apply to its action any other inference than the facts themselves suggest, which is that it by no means welcomed the monopolizing by private enterprise of State documents of the first importance, or their issue at the price at which the Times offered them to the public. Accordingly, after consultation with the French government, Sir Edward Grey immediately had an independent translation prepared for publication at one penny (two cents), the price of the famous White Paper, which has had so enormous a circulation.

This translation had just been completed when the Times made the rather vague announcement that its translation was to be made "more accessible to the public," an announcement which assumed definite form on December 16 in the statement that the translation of the Yellow Book would be given away free with the Times of December 19. By a singular coincidence this statement appeared two days after the Foreign Office penny translation had been formally presented to Parliament.

To put the whole matter in a nutshell:—On Tuesday the translation of the Yellow Book could only be got for two shillings; on Wednesday it could be got for one penny; to-day it can be got for nothing by buying the Times.

And so what began as "une gaucherie"—to say the least—ends satisfactorily to all concerned, except, perhaps, the Times and the purchasers of its two shillings' worth, as one of the pleasantest of comedies.

Thrilling Incidents of the Great War

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, January 9.

Dr. Sumner Everingham, an American surgeon on the ambulance of the American Hospital of Paris, in conversation with your correspondent describes two thrilling incidents in connection with the work of caring for the wounded.

"As a class," said Dr. Everingham, "these French chaps are the best patients I ever worked with, and this includes the Turcos and the Senegalese as well, and it would be hard to conceive of more appreciative, good natured victims of war submitting with such fortitude to the most ugly wounds as these men show almost without exception. One really has a thrill almost every time one inquires into the receipt of an injured man's wounds.

"For instance, last night I was making my usual evening rounds and came into one of the small wards, where a big raw boned Turco was acting out his little bit of a charge, in which he received not one but two bullet wounds and a bayonet injury.

"Well, here is this Turco sitting up in bed with the 'hero light' burning in his eyes, while in staccato French he tells one or two of his 'camarades' how it happened.

"It seems that they were ordered to attack about two o'clock one morning under cover of a setting moon, crawling along on all fours so as to escape detection until they were close enough to the German trenches to make a dash for them.

"Unfortunately, they were discovered, and the enemy turned searchlights on them and opened up machine gun fire as well as with rifle, causing a good deal of damage.

"My Frenchman was dropped almost at first, a bullet going through the top of his nose open down over the upper part of his chest. Hands and knees position saved him.

"The Turco stumbled and fell with the first bullet through his thigh, and his sergeant asked him if he was hit, then told him to go to the rear. But he said 'No,' scrambled on and actually reached the German trenches (and this is what he was acting), where he let no two cartridges he had left in his rifle, each registering a German.

"Not bad, that!

"Then I must tell you about a little story that happened here, and that I'm a bit proud of.

"We had a chap of twenty-two from up around Brittany brought in with a rather obscure wound of the arm, which the field hospital said had bled rather freely, and he was pale. Even after he had been with us he had two rather bad hemorrhages, but on account of the site and his ex-sanguinated condition we thought best to let him wiggle along without cutting down on the thing.

"One night, however, about one A. M., he started to have a very severe hemorrhage, so I took him down to the operating room and under local anaesthesia cut down, and found it was the biggest artery in the arm that was nipped.

"So I tied it off and hurried him back to bed.

"Although pale and waxy he was still alive the next day, but pretty shaky, so I decided that to transfer blood from some healthy chap was his only hope.

"Convalescing, there was a big navy chap from along the coast somewhere, a mason by trade. I asked him if he would let me take some of his blood and give it to a sick 'camarade.' He consented without a question.

"This was the first transfusion done in the hospital, so I was happy over the result."

Leaders' Blunders Shatter War Spirit of Austrians

"Pompous Incapacity" of Censor Causes People to Have Bad Opinion of Their Government, While Poor Generalship in Field Lowers Army's Efficiency.

(Special Dispatch.)

BERNE, January 9.

A Swiss who had been resident for some time in Austria, and did not leave the country at the start of the war gives his impression of conditions in the Austro-Hungarian Empire in the Neue Zürcher Zeitung. He says that it has not been recognised sufficiently what a thankless and difficult part is Austria's in the European war, and consequently a wrong estimate is often formed of the Austrian monarchy, which does not receive justice at the hands either of its enemies or neutral countries.

"Above all," says the Swiss, "every one should be warned against in any way judging Austria-Hungary by what appears in the Austro-Hungarian press. In every belligerent country censorship is strict, but it is hardly possible that anywhere else can it be exercised with such helpless and pompous incapacity as on the Danube.

"The result is that at present Austria-Hungary is the one country whose own people have a worse opinion of it than it really deserves or than facts warrant. This pessimism is the consequence of the Austrian system of concealing facts and of never admitting a military defeat. Matters were so contrived, for instance, that Austria-Hungary officially learned of the reconquest of Czernowitz, but never of its having been lost. From the evacuated districts there is a positive emigration of refugees, and their stories about their unhappy personal experiences, which they narrate so as to produce the impression that such occurrences are universal and add to them the stories of wounded soldiers, have caused the truth to filter through, and often worse than the truth. Public confidence has been lost and the people say to themselves that obviously matters must be worse still if as much as this is admitted.

"Distrust of the army, however, is nothing as compared with distrust of the government, which in many respects is failing as badly as it is possible for a government to fail. The question is raised regarding the way in which the Austro-Hungarian army is led, and raised not by the people alone but by the soldiers themselves. The great ordeal of war has brought all Austria's sins into the glaring light of day. Seven Korpskommandanten and four commanders (Armeekommandanten) have been recalled—a fact alone sufficient to prove that the magnificent, intelligent and impulsive army possessed no leaders capable of utilising its capacities.

"Officers and soldiers talk about their mistakes to anyone who will listen, and they feel bitterly toward generals and a general staff who were so little able to take advantage of their bravery and desire for self-sacrifice. Everyone now knows what a folly was the attack on Lublin at the outset of the war, dividing up the Austrian forces as it did and facilitating the inroads of the enemy into Eastern Galicia. But this was due to under-estimating the adversary and to the characteristically Austrian desire to carry on the war, after the fashion of the Germans in Belgium, by means of a lightning attack.

"Unfortunately for them, however, the Austro-Hungarian General Staff overlooked the fact that Podolia has not such a system of roads and railways as has Belgium and Eastern France, and that Galicia presents many difficulties from the point of view of reinforcements, commissariat and supply of ammunition. The heads of the Austrian army attempted to brush all these obstacles thereby aside and made the most unreasonable demands on the troops in the shape of forced marches and attacks by storm. The sacrifices and losses entailed by such methods of waging war were of course enormous, without there being any corresponding successes to compensate for or justify them.

Soldiers' Spirit Undermined.

"Owing to their impetuous imprudence and lack of military experience the Austrians have had very considerable losses. Not only have they lost men, but they have lost still more by the damping of the soldiers' eagerness for the fight and the undermining of their confidence."

This Swiss says that he spent several months in Austria and a still longer period in Hungary, "where the exuberant temperament of the people inclines them to extremes." During this time he had opportunities of talking with many men in the army, and officers and privates agreed in their complaints about the way they were perpetually moved hither and thither—everlastingly marched forward and then immediately ordered to retreat, without the men feeling that they had been beaten. This, they said, always undermined the morale of the troops and also their confidence, and soldiers who had had to take a position or a place, and then been obliged to give it up without necessity, gave vent to expressions of great bitterness about such incidents.

It was, however, the perpetual changes of orders about which they complained. Sometimes an order was given, only to be immediately countermanded. "Order and countermand, order and countermand, like the links of a chain." This, says the Swiss critic, bears out the experience of every one condemned by fate to work with Austrian bureaucracy, which is always alarmed at having to take any responsibility upon itself and in a state of helpless confusion when this is no longer avoidable. This spirit has also infected the army and impaired its capacity for independent action.

LONDON IS ITSELF AGAIN.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, January 9.

London has recovered herself. The stunned condition which followed the start of war has given place to a normal vitality. The day when the last shot is fired still may be a long way off, and meanwhile German raiders may continue trying their favorite game of slipping through darkness and fog to smash houses, set fire to churches, killing innocent women and children in defenceless towns on the English coast, but everybody feels that Germany is already licked, and that she feels it, too. It is now simply that she is determined not to give up until she has done all the mischief she can. That, at any rate, is the opinion you hear expressed in club, restaurant, train and 'bus.

Theatre agents say that, so far as amusements are concerned, the tide has turned, and that plays of an amusing and gay character now are drawing crowds. Officers and soldiers home on leave turn to the play as an antidote to the dreary gloom of the trenches. Women worrying about their friends at the front have discovered that a pleasant play breaks the monotony of their thoughts and restores their balance.

"There is practically no booking in advance," said a well known agent. "People do not now lay plans for an evening's amusement at the theatre. They engage seats as the result of a sudden mood of a desire to escape from themselves. Nobody wants problems or tragic plays."

CHAPTER XIX.

An Appeal.

LUCILLE started just as her hands encountered the packet of begrimed papers and documents. A faint humming sound mingled with the heavy tread of the firemen above stairs. But she had won, was victorious after many defeats. Still, that sound—

She seemed to have heard it before. With a little cry of horror she looked up, her hands clasping the packet to her breast. The room that had been her boudoir was slowly closing down upon her, was moving down, down, down, its dark floor threatening to crush her like a letterpress closes upon its contents. Then it stopped.

She looked toward the door through which she had entered, her delight at the escape dying before the sight of Louboque's tall, saturnine figure in the doorway, the glowing cigar tip picking out his every feature, the hateful smile upon his face. He extended his hand, bowing gracefully, sardonically.

She Saw Louboque in the Doorway.

"The packet of papers, Miss Lucille, if you please," he murmured.

For the fleeting second Lucille wondered what would happen did she refuse to surrender the papers to Louboque—wondered what diabolical thing might enter his brain when he found himself defied. A glance at the room which had started to descend upon her drove the thought away as quickly as it brought a shudder through her slender frame. Slowly, reluctantly, she held out the packet to him, watching him furtively, as with the utmost courtesy he bowed and placed it in his breast pocket.

Slowly he conducted her up the stairs. In his private room he motioned her to a chair, seating himself at the desk.

"I am not going to threaten you again," he said quietly. "I wish you to know that this is the last time you can interfere with my plans. Child, can you not be made to see what folly it is—this fight against me?"

"Mr. Louboque," she said softly, "have you never grieved that it is impossible for the finer feelings you are continually suppressing to be returned because your ambitions are cruel and base? I do not like to wage this constant war with you. I do not like to battle with the man who has been so kind to me in his own way that I could love him as another father. But you would ruin my father; you would wreck my sweetheart's life. You would keep me apart from perfect happiness after I have merely peeked through the door of that happiness only to have it slammed shut in my face. Can't you see that it is you who must go down to defeat? Can't you see that love such as supports a frail girl to battle with you as I have done will not be downed by the most powerful man? Can't you see that I cannot stop even if I do sometimes grow very tired and sick at heart and pray to this soul of mine to let me lie down for a little while and rest? Rest—rest"—She broke off with a sob of the most acute distress. "There is no such word as rest for me. Always it is go on, go on, constantly go on, until it seems I must fall along the wayside. But I do not fail. I have won from you constantly; I have always won, and I shall always continue to win. And you know it, Mr. Louboque, for I can see it on your face—now."

Like one inspired she was, as the halting tones of her plea changed to those of passionate conviction, a certainty that expressed itself in words tumbling from the tongue with utter abandon, words that seemed to come from other lips than her own. And as Louboque looked back at the beautiful figure of the girl he was surprised to see that suddenly she seemed to have changed, that the slip of a child who had come on board the Empress from the hydroaeroplane had suddenly become a woman of such capacity for love and hate as even he himself did not have.

Came back to him the girl he had loved and whom he still loved as fondly as in the old days of Flirtation walk at the Point, from which he had been expelled. Swiftly she came to his side, placing her hand upon his shoulder, her voice low and tender again like the sighing of an April breeze through the greening baby leaves.

"You think you are working for hate, and all the time you are working for the same reason that I am—you are working because of love. Can you not see what a perversion of love is this thing you constantly seek to do? Can you not"—

Lucille could feel the man's shoulders trembling, could mark the tremendous effort he made at self control. She was almost ready to plead with him for a return of the papers, to give up his entire life work and count it failure, confident that he was well along the road to doing so, when a rap sounded on the door.

For some reason which she could not define a shudder ran through her at the sound. She seemed to recognize a sinister presence close by. She glanced at Louboque, and her heart sank as she saw the wave of emotion she had bred within him had passed, that he was again the icy, indefatigable international spy.

"Come in," he called briskly.

Slowly, cautiously, yet with not the slightest uncertainty, the door pushed open. Before the visitor appeared on the threshold Lucille knew who it would be.

For a moment she was taken aback by Thompson's perfect aplomb. She knew he had been the one who robbed her of her necklace, that he had sprayed her with ether and taken it from about her throat while she slept. And yet not so much as by the quiver of an eyelash did he show any sign of surprise or fear.

"I was delayed, sir," the butler began apologetically, when Louboque lifted his hand imperatively.

"You were delayed," coldly repeated the spy, separating every syllable and meting it out as though it were a death judgment. "It is perhaps better that you were delayed, Thompson. I have just received a letter from a man with whom you are acquainted. In this letter, Thompson, he informs me he intends turning traitor to my interests, that he intends assisting Miss Love to make her escape."

"Quite so, sir," murmured the butler-thief.

"I am informed by him that he spied upon you while you cut through the bars of Miss Love's window."

Thompson did not stir, but Lucille saw the scar go a sickly white.

"The man lied, sir."

"Men do not lie at such moments."

For just a moment Thompson was silent. The hush upon the room was so profound as to make the ticking of Louboque's watch upon his wrist sound like mallet strokes. Slowly the butler's index finger moved in the scar upon his cheek.

"The man you speak of evidently did the work in the hope of ruining Miss Love. I gained this scar while trying to prevent the flight, sir."

"It's a lie!" Lucille burst forth passionately. "That man tried to rob me here in this very house. That was why I insisted upon a maid to serve me when I took the drug you put in the drink."

"Why did you not mention it at that time?" The spy's tones were dubious.

"Because I did not wish you to know I had anything of such value about me."

"Value? You had no money when you left Manila."

"No, but I obtained possession of a wonderful ruby necklace in the cavern of the jungle just before I was rescued by the filibuster. Three nights ago when I boarded the train for here that man drugged me while I slept and stole the necklace from about my throat. Then he dropped out of the window of his compartment. That is why he was detained."

Louboque fastened his cold eyes upon the butler. The man had nerves as steady as a rock. Lucille studied the judge and culprit earnestly. She could see that Thompson was beating down the spy's belief in her story. Swift as a flash, without a second's thought, she darted toward the thief. She had noticed his fingers involuntarily seek the right hand breast pocket of his coat when she made her charge. In one swift movement she had ripped open the coat. With the other hand she plunged toward the place she knew the necklace to be.

At first Thompson was taken off his guard. Then he sprang back with a hideous cry of rage and alarm, forgetful of everything. The girl clung to her hold like a tigress. He grasped her wrist roughly and thrust her, reeling, across the room, his eyes glaring as, with clinched fists, he stared at her, while, dazed though she was by the violence of him, she held triumphantly in her hand the gorgeously dazzling ruby necklace.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Hundreds of People Have Found "Fruit-a-tives" Their Only Help

READ THIS LETTER

Superintendent of Sunday School, in Toronto, Tells How He Cured Himself of Chronic Rheumatism After Suffering for Years.

55 Dovercourt Road, Oct., 1st, 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH

Rheumatism is no longer the dreaded disease it once was. Rheumatism is no longer one of the "incurable diseases". "Fruit-a-tives" has proved its marvellous powers over Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago—in fact, over all such diseases which arise from some derangement of stomach, bowels, kidneys or skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Scenes at Sari Kamysh Are Terrible Says Correspondent.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—A despatch to The Times from its Petrograd correspondent says:

"Telegrams from Tiflis state that the blow inflicted on the Turkish army involves all the corps engaged. Of these, the Ninth and Tenth were either completely shattered or taken prisoners. The Tenth began a disorderly flight, but the Russians cut off its retreat, and entire regiments are now surrendering.

"On Saturday the Turks moved up a new corps in the direction of Sari Kamysh, but recognizing the hopelessness of their position, they quickly withdrew it. The Russian regiment at Ardahan withstood the attack of two Turkish divisions until the arrival of the main Russian forces.

"Captured officers declare that Enver Pasha, the Turkish War Minister, was confident that the occupation of Tiflis was a question of only a few days. The idea of retreat never entered his calculations.

"The scenes in the battle zone were terrible. The ground was piled high with bodies of animals and men, smashed wagons and carts in large numbers. Many of the wounded are still lying on the ground, and many have been frozen.

"A majority of the captured mountain guns are of German make."

Other despatches say that the Turkish defeat has aroused a dangerous feeling among the people in Constantinople.

BERLIN LEARNING TRUTH.

Anxiety Replaces Confidence of First Days of War.

LONDON, Jan. 8. — A remarkable change has come over the people of Berlin and all Germany, according to an American who reached London yesterday from the German capital.

"There is a tense, anxious look on the faces of the people, in marked contrast to their confidence at the beginning of the war," he said. "One feels that the impression is gaining that all is not well; that reported victories are not all victories, and that others are secured at an immense cost.

"There are thousands of widows and orphans in Germany whose sorrow will soon crystalize in a mighty wail of protest at continuing a struggle felt to be hopeless.

"Those in authority, unaccustomed to keeping their ears turned to popular clamor, begin to realise that the people are becoming restless. The recent raid on the east coast of England, devoid of strategic significance, was ordered simply to furnish a dramatic episode, in which the Germans appeared to advantage.

"Socialists are quietly doing their utmost to foster this feeling of unquiet. Criticism of the Kaiser and his advisers is becoming more open than was ever tolerated in times of peace."

Bullets "Explode" Blood.

WARSAW, Russia, Jan. 8.—A surgeon who has treated many wounded at Lods says that the worst rifle bullets wounds are caused by normal, small-calibre bullets which agree perfectly with Hague Conference restrictions. These bullets, when they enter blood vessels at great speed—that is, at close range — send the blood flying around with great violence. The bullet itself makes a small hole, but the "exploding" blood produces rending effects far worse than any dum-dum.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

It is made of striped percale, with a pocket at the side for handkerchief or other use, and buttons at the back. This apron is an excellent kind to make at home because it is a conspicuous design, having only shoulder straps and dust under the arms, no other seams at all. It could be made as well of gingham or calico. The pattern, No. 6,995, comes in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Of course more than one apron would be needed but they may just as well be all of the same design, and when they are cut out at the same time a good deal of trouble is saved.

To make the apron herself is a splendid opportunity for the girl who is learning to sew. She can not go far wrong on anything as simple as this, but if she does at least the material will not be a great loss. She can get some more with little expense and begin over again. From aprons to shirtwaists is a short step, and then a house dress of chambray or gingham could be undertaken. Who knows what skill might not be developed from the first few attempts on a cotton apron?

Price 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

Railroad Journey in France Is Constant Reminder That War Exists

Passengers Never Are Permitted to Forget That the Country is Engaged in a Great Conflict and That Military Needs Take Precedence Over Everything Else

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Great Britain is at war, but it never has known anything of the discomforts of travelling which the war has created in France. All you have to do is to consult the time table, go to any station you like, and take the train, except, of course, if you want to go to the Continent, and then you have to allow your baggage to be very thoroughly searched to show that you are carrying nothing with you that may be of use to the enemy.

Naturally all is different in France. In order to get back to a comprehension of it one must return to the beginning of things as at August 1, 1914—that is to say, as far as railroads are concerned, to "chaos," when the whole of the French railway system was, as it were, thrown into a melting pot. It was supposed at the time to be up against the most wonderful military railway machine the world has ever seen. But it rose to the occasion to an extent that no one could have imagined.

The French railway service proved that it possessed a marvellous hidden organization. The mobilization went through "comme une lettre a la poste," without a hitch, and since then hundreds of thousands of men have been moved from point to point, often hundreds of kilometres distant, without the slightest difficulty, as strategical and tactical requirements made it necessary.

But as far as the civil population is concerned things are very different. "Chaos has come again"; no time tables, no sleeping cars, no restaurant cars, no express trains, and, to sum up everything, no right to use the trains which exist without complicated formalities. But from another point of view things are enormously simplified.

No More Time Tables.

If you want to go, for instance, from Paris to Chalons-sur-Marne you need not trouble about time tables, sleeping cars, duration of journey, etc. A "coup de telephone" to the Eastern Railway Station will inform you that the first train leaves at two minutes past midnight, that a train leaves every six hours, that every train stops at every station en route, and that it gets there when it gets there, and that's about all.

A few days ago I left Epernay for Paris on my way to London, a journey of about eighty miles. The evening express in time of peace covers the distance in two and a quarter hours, with a comfortable dining car, in which to pass the time over a well-served dinner. We took exactly eight hours to cover the distance. That is to say we travelled at the speed of ten miles an hour. A cyclist could have covered the distance in little more than half the time.

On every window of the train was posted a notice: "Passengers are warned not to put their heads out of the window while crossing the bridges at Ahaliffert, Isles-les-Villenoy and Armentieres." These bridges were blown up, and conscientiously blown up, by the British, and since have been temporarily repaired by the French engineers. The train stops before it reaches the bridge and then proceeds to crawl across. The structure groans and groans, and seems to sway dangerously, but French military engineers know their business, and the train passes without accident though when the passengers look down through the broken parapets at the river swirling fifty feet below they feel a momentary shiver.

Military Runs the Railroads.

The passengers are never allowed for even five minutes to forget that they are travelling on a railroad in time of war. Every five hundred yards they see the light of a watch fire and the gleam of the bayonets of the men guarding the line. At each station, instead of the railway inspector taking tickets, they see a sentry with fixed bayonet mounting guard at the exit. In the waiting room half a company is sleeping on piles of straw, and the white capped station master of peace times is replaced by a "commissaire militaire," who is in supreme charge of his section of the line. The sidings, instead of being filled with trucks containing coal or goods "in transite," are crowded with ambulance wagons bearing the red cross, troop trains and ammunition wagons, or long lines of trucks on which the silhouettes of guns and limbers en route for the north are visible in the semi-darkness.

Hour after hour the train moves along, sometimes at a vertiginous speed of twenty miles an hour, sometimes crawling at less than five. Sometimes we stop for a quarter of an hour in a tunnel, and smoke and steam filters in by every nook and cranny. Nobody complains.

When the train stops at Dormans for ten minutes we hear the ceaseless boom of guns from Rheims. The sound wakes up a sleeping passenger. "Those on bombarde Rheims encore!" is his only comment, and the profits by the ten minutes immobility of the train to drop off comfortably to sleep again.

"Paris! Paris!" It is an old major of artillery opposite who wakes them up. I look at my watch. Eight o'clock. Eight hours from Epernay to Paris; I see the light of the station lamps and the bayonets.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

Without the need of a man to steer it a new motor plough when it is started in a furrow will continue in a straight line until stopped.

Britain Agrees to Request of U. S. Regarding Fort Erie Shooting.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The U. S. Government yesterday sent a formal note to Great Britain through Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador here, requesting the punishment of those guilty of the killing of Walter Smith and the wounding of Charles Dorsch, two American citizens, who were shot by Canadian militiamen at Fort Erie, Ont., while hunting ducks in alleged violations of the Canadian game laws.

The communication which was of a friendly character pointed out that not only did the U. S. Government desire that the offenders be duly punished, but that adequate compensation be given the families of the victims.

Coincidentally with the sending of the note, Secretary Bryan received a personal memorandum from the British Ambassador here, after which the Secretary said:

"The British Government without deciding the question of liability will consider the payment of damages to the injured man and the family of the deceased."

MUNITS ARE TOO FRIENDLY.

German Soldiers Get Orders To Stop Mixing Troops.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—(Via London.)—The German army authorities have issued a general order prohibiting in future troops in the field from fraternising with the forces of the enemy as they did at several points in the western theatre of the war at Christmas.

To such an extent was this fraternising carried out that at one place where the Germans and British played football Christmas Day, they agreed to suspend hostilities for two days more.

Free Entry Gained.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Secretary Bryan received word from the British Ambassador yesterday that arrangements were being completed for the shipment without molestation of naval stores from the United States to the Netherlands and Italy.

MAGISTRATE SPEAKS FOR ZAM-BUK

Alexander Henry, of Colchester, B.C., knows by personal experience what Zam-Buk is. Writing of Zam-Buk, the great Canadian herbal balm, he says:—"After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk unusually efficacious. In my case it soothed the skin, made the sores heal rapidly, and gave me a sense of comfort I had long sought for in vain. I can therefore feel honestly able to say that Zam-Buk is an excellent remedy, and I shall be pleased to recommend it to all my friends in this locality." The statement is quite right. Every household in the land should have a box of Zam-Buk! Unequalled for cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, blood poisoning, all skin diseases. All ointments and dressings smell their antiseptic best when opened. Zam-Buk is healing, antiseptic and unique. Try it without delay. 3 boxes $1.00.

DON'T NEGLECT THAT ACHE!

A Chinese proverb says that dilatoriness blocks the road to success. Don't put off getting Zam-Buk for that cut, sore, or skin disease. Don't neglect that ache! Zam-Buk is the remedy for you. Its herbal essences soothe pain, and its powerful, yet purely herbal, antiseptic properties prevent blood poisoning and other complications. Rub Zam-Buk well into the affected part, and you will find relief. Zam-Buk is unequalled for piles, chapped hands, ringworm, scalp sores, and all skin troubles. 50c box, all druggists and stores.

To every person taking this view we say, send your name and address (any relative's address if more convenient) and date of this paper to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, and we will send you a free trial box of Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is purely herbal, antiseptic for the defence of the body, and powerful enough to heal chronic sores of long standing. All druggists and stores, 50c per box, 3 for $1.25.

Russia's Move Against Austria-Hungary.—The Russians are clearing Bukowina of the enemy, and are now engaged in sweeping down the Roumanian frontier. Near the Uzsok Pass they have surrounded some Austrian troops. At Gorlice the enemy is strongly resisting.

SAVAGERY DELIBERATE.

Germans Carried Supplies for Destruction of Towns.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—The commission appointed on Sept. 23 to inquire into accusations that German officers had acted "savagely and inhumanely against French civilians and soldiers, says in its report, made public yesterday by the French Cabinet:

"We must conclude that there never has been a war between civilized nations of so savage and ferocious a character as that waged upon our soil by our implacable adversary. Pillage, ravishing, burning, murder are ordinary practices of our enemies, and facts collected in many cases prove that the German claims that the killing of civilians was due to firing of the population on troops are unfounded.

"We found proof of the existence in the German army not only of a systematic plan for burning villages, but the possession of elaborate material for this purpose, including gasoline, grenades, fuses, fat cylinders, sticks of inflammable matter, and sacks of tablets composed of very inflammable compressed powder."

TO MEET DEMANDS.

Britain's Reply to U. S. Requests Is of Friendly Nature.

LONDON, Jan. 8. — The reply of Great Britain to the American note regarding interference with its shipping, it is said in well-informed quarters, is wholly conciliatory and shows a disposition on the part of Britain to do everything within reason to avert delay to American shipping at a time when freight rates are high and consequently loss of time is so costly to shipowners.

England wishes to do everything in its power consistent with the proper safeguarding of the interests of the allies to facilitate world trade and stimulate commerce, paralyzed as it is by war conditions. Consequently, it is declared, there is no disposition on the part of Britain to protest against the purchase of German vessels by Americans, where the sales are genuine and the ships are not used so as to avoid what might reasonably be called the consequences of belligerency.

Dominion To Start Prison Farm.

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—It is probable that the thousand acres of land to be cleared in Montcalm County, Quebec, by German and Austrian aliens will be employed by the Government as a prison farm after the war is over.

The success of the industrial farm at Guelph has impressed the Canadian Government with the desirability of adopting a similar treatment for criminals who come under the jurisdiction of the Dominion. The Quebec Government is expected to devote another farm adjacent to the same use.

Italy Asks Reparation.

ROME, Jan. 8.—It was reported yesterday that the Italian Government has ascertained the truth of the stories that four Italian miners were seized by the Austrians when they were compelled to evacuate Belgrade, and are now being held as hostages. The Government has demanded from the Austrian Government an explanation, apology of the Italian subjects, and prompt reparation.

Freed From Penitentiary.

CHATHAM, Jan. 8. — Word has been received from the Department of Justice, Ottawa, that Tom Williams, sentenced to five years in Kingston Penitentiary, for forgery, has been released. Williams was sentenced two years ago by Judge Dowdin. It was claimed that he was unsound mentally and a long fight for his release ensued.

The Central News correspondent in Belgium denies the German statement that railway traffic has been restored in Belgium. He says no trains are now running in the Province of Liege.

The German Military Government of Belgium has issued an official denial of the report that Cardinal Mercier, the Belgian member of the Sacred College, has been arrested by the German authorities.

LAXATIVE FOR OLD PEOPLE—"CASCARETS"

Salts, Calomel, Pills Act on Bowels Like Pepper Acts in Nostrils

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

Nish, Overcrowded With Refugees, Is Servia's Capital of Safety

NISH, Servia (By mail to New York).—Nish has become the Bordeaux of Servia, the provisional capital, the seat of government and the centre well protected and far away from the roar of battle.

Nish contains to-day three times its normal population. Thousands of fugitives have arrived here from Belgrade, Semendria and Babas with all of the worldly possessions they were able to carry.

Only a month ago, people were obliged to sleep in the streets, and the hotels and lodging houses let out their beds to clients turn about for day and night. Those who had the good fortune to have been able to engage the beds for the night would not be out of them long enough in the morning for the sheets to cool off before those whose turn was for the day slipped in and fell asleep. Never less than three persons occupied a room. Servia prefers that no one outside her borders know what the largest number was.

All the cafes, the railway station and the shops transformed themselves into dormitories. The moment the dirty dishes were removed from the tables they were turned into double-decked beds. The luckiest individuals slept on top; the less fortunate ones underneath.

Little by little, however, this surplus population began to spread out a bit, first into nearby villages then even to the summer resorts until to-day Nish, while still staggering under the weight of a population enormous, is able to accommodate all without at least making them sleep in the streets.

Just at present the population of the city is burdened by the presence of between 5,000 and 8,000 Austrian prisoners. These have lodgings in the fortress. They include representatives of practically every race that goes up to make the Austrian empire with the exception of Italians. Of them there is not a one.

Every day these prisoners are seen to march out, under heavy escort of soldiers, to the fields near the city, where they are made to help get in the crops and carry on other important public work. They receive the same rations daily, as the Servian soldiers, and are treated with all the humanity permitted by the conditions existing in Servia after three wars. Those who are known to be of Slav origin, that is, the same race as the Servians, are allowed to go out perfectly free, wearing merely on their Austrian uniforms a little ribbon of the Servian colours.

The banks, which were obliged to move hastily from Belgrade when the capital was transferred at the beginning of the war, are now all established in rooms of some kind. They lack only safes for their money. In each room there is a large table covered with green cloth, over which all banking and commercial affairs are transacted. The employees are obliged to sleep in the same room and go to bed at night with a revolver under the pillow and the bank's funds under the bed.

All of the foreign embassies and legations have also been equally as successful in finding some rooms in which to establish themselves. Just at the present moment they are furnishing the most amusement to be had in the city. Bitter rivalry is on between all these representatives of the world's greatest powers for the possession of an Italian cook. He is a native of Rome by the name of Spagnoletti, and is not only the best cook to be had in Servia, but a tenor of rare ability and even an impresario.

He was chef at the Hotel Bristol at Belgrade when the war broke out. He is declared to have been bodily kidnapped by the French Ambassador when the latter was forced to leave Nish. The French kitchen at Nish, however, was hardly well established, when the cook one night disappeared. Later it became known from the quality of food served by the Turkish Ambassador that the cook was in the latter's employ. At a dinner given to the entire diplomatic corps, the Turkish Ambassador even exhibited his "steal" to his fellow-ambassadors, the exhibition of the cook, however, taking place under lock and key, and the cook ever remaining under lock and key until Servia declared war against Turkey and the Ambassador had to leave.

When the bloody diplomatic battle which followed was over, the spoils of war—or rather Cook Spagnoletti—found his somewhat battered self in the hands—or rather in the kitchen—of the English Ambassador. It is said that if the same state of feeling now existing between the French, English and Russian Ambassadors at Nish over this Italian cook, existed instead between the powers themselves represented by these three diplomats—that Germany would long ago have had a walkaway and Cook Spagnoletti would have been given the Iron Cross of the first class.

GERMAN TRENCHES ARE DESTROYED

THE ENEMY BOMBARDS SOISSONS

ARE SEEKING REVENGE FOR LOSS OF THEIR POSITIONS

Failing in Desperate Counter Attacks to Win Points Wrested From Them by the French, the Germans Have Shelled Soissons, Destroying the Palace of Justice.

FIGHTING AT NEARLY EVERY POINT

Special Cable:

PARIS, January 9. — Soissons has been bombarded by the Germans, and the Palace of Justice there destroyed, in revenge for the German failure to retake the positions carried by the French in a series of brilliant assaults. The Germans have also occupied, but at heavy cost the positions at Surnhaupt, recently taken by the French

All of to-day official and unofficial reports emphasize the fact that fighting is again in progress at nearly every point along the battle front.

South of Ypres the French artillery has been used with deadly effect to demolish a row of German trenches, and to silence their mine throwers; between Arras and Amiens the French are having much the best of the artillery exchanges, and have succeeded in silencing several of the German batteries. The French carried Hill 132 in the region of Soupier, and gained 650 yards along the German front, taking three German trenches. A German counter attack followd, which was repulsed, the Germans losing very heavily. The bombardment of Soissons followed.

Progress in the Argonne region is reported, but in the Woevre district it is admitted that the Germans have re-occupied Surnhaupt, but with heavy losses. There is no further word of the fighting in Alsace.

WASHINGTON, January 9. — Upon President Wilson's return to-day from Indianapolis, the British preliminary note replying to this government's shipping protest, will be placed before him by Secretary of State Bryan. The President himself will determine what answer if any shall be made to this preliminary communication.

High officials intimated to-day that whether another note shall be sent depends largely upon events in the immediate future. If Great Britain indicates an earnest effort to prepare the second note promised, taking up seriously and in detail the demands of the American protest, it is believed a formal reply to the note received yesterday afternoon will not be made. It was also stated, however, that if a dilatory spirit by England is manifested, this government will not hesitate to "prod" Great Britain in a second note.

LONDON, January 9.—The winter storms and floods, while they have put an end to any military operations on a large scale, have not been able to prevent the armies in the east and west from pursuing the offensive at isolated points along the two extended fronts.

In the snow covered hills of the Caucasus the hardy Siberians are searching out the routed Turks, who are reported to be surrendering by the thousand, while in Flanders, which is virtually all under water, the allies assert that they have found it possible to make some headway. Only in Poland, where Field Marshall Von Hindenburg's offensive is held up on the banks of the rivers which flow between him and Warsaw, and in Galicia, where the Russians have been compelled to call a halt in their advance, does there seem to be an almost entire lull in the fighting.

The Russians continue their forward move in the Carpathians and in Bukowina, while in France infantry attacks have been made at many points, followed by artillery engagements and sapping and mining operations. The French have advanced a few yards in the vicinity of Rheims but were compelled to give ground in the Argonne as a result of the Germans having mined some of their first line trenches.

With the report of the progress by the French in Alsace which is being strenuously opposed by the Germans, the names of some German places are beginning to appear in the official communications, which would indicate that the advance although slow, is still being made.

COL. McLEOD IS VERY ILL AT SALISBURY

Commanding Officer of 12th Battalion of Canadian Contingent Reported in To-day's Casualty List

A PRIVATE DEAD

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—Lieut.-Colonel Harry F. McLeod, M.P. for York, N. B., commanding the 12th Battalion at Salisbury Plain, is reported on the Canadian casualty list, issued by the Militia Department, today, as seriously ill of pneumonia. Col. McLeod's next of kin is his wife, Mrs. Harry McLeod of Fredericton, N.B. One death, that of Pte. Edward Jones of the 11th Battalion, is reported. Three others, including Pte. John McCombie of Ottawa, of the 12th Battalion, are seriously ill, two with pneumonia and one with cerebro-spinal meningitis.

The Scarcity of Feed

Is Affecting the Quality of Beef That is Being Offered For Sale —To-day's Market Prices

"The poorest quality of meat that has appeared on the Market in months." Thus did Sanitary Inspector Spence express himself as to the class of meat that was offered for sale on the market this morning. The supply was plentiful, to say the least. It was sold for eleven and twelve cents a pound. If it had been stall fed for a while longer it would probably have been worth fifteen cents a pound. The poor quality of the meat may be explained by the statement which Mr. G. A. Gillespie made at the Dairymen's Convention a few days ago, when he said that there was a dearth of coarse feed throughout Peterborough County. It may be that many of the farmers are compelled to sacrifice their stock, due to a shortage of feed. Pork was fairly plentiful at 12 and 13c. a pound. Potatoes are lower in price. This morning they were selling all the way from 65 to 75c. a bag. There are lots in the country and they will likely be cheaper before they are dearer.

There was an unusually large quantity of wood offered for sale. Good hardwood sold as high as $6.50 a cord. Inferior grades could be purchased for $4 an $5 a cord.

Prices Higher.

There was a light attendance at the inside market where butter, eggs and poultry were the principal commodities offered. Butter sold at 32c. a pound, and eggs ot 40 and 45c. a dozen. This is an advance over last week's prices. Chickens varied in price. Some were sold at 70 and 80 cents a pair, while a better sample sold for $1 and over. Turkeys were scarce, also ducks. One fair-sized turkey brought $2, and a pair of ducks found a buyer at $1.40.

A Blaze At The Gas House

Some oil on fire at the gas house at 8 o'clock, last night, by which the whole building was ablaze, caused damage to the amount of about $35.

A telephone call to the Fire Department, reporting a bad fire at the gas house, brought the firemen. They had a line of hose laid, and with the aid of chemicals, succeeded in extinguishing the blaze before any great amount of damage was done.

The "I Will" Man Is At Grafton's

The interest created by the coming of the "I Will" man to the Grafton Store was certainly well shown in the record attendance at the store, this morning. Elaborate preparations and a lavish display of the clothing bargains had been made, and careful buyers were eager to take advantage o them. The store management is greatly pleased at the success of the opening day of the "I Will" men's clearance sale.

PETERBOROUGH REPRESENTED BY THREE STUDENTS

Local Boys Have Left Kingston With the 5th Field Company of Canadian Engineers.

GOING TO THE FRONT

Peterborough has three representatives with the 5th Field Company of Canadian Engineers, who left Kingston on Monday last for the concentration camp at Ottawa, as part of the second contingent, Canadian overseas forces. These young men are Corp. W. S. Laing, son of Mrs. Geo. Laing, 489 Cedar Street; Sappers A. Munro, brother of W. H. Munro, manager of Peterborough Light and Power Company, and E. W. Langford, son of Mr. Wm. Langford, Sr., of this city.

Corp. W. S. Laing.

Corp. W. Stewart Laing graduated from Queen's University in 1913. He comes of a family whose ancestors can be traced in connection with military operations, a good many years back. His great grandfather enlisted with the 18th Hussars in 1807, accompanying Moore to Spain, where he fought in the memorable battle of Corunna, and was present in other fierce engagements, in one of which he was badly wounded.

Corp. Laing was well known in the city, having attended the local Collegiate Institute. He was a member of the Quaker Football Club in 1907, champions of the Midland Football League. He was also prominent in Y. M.C.A. circles.

Sapper A. Munro.

Sapper A. Munro, brother of Mr. W. H. Munro of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, was a graduate of S.P.S., graduating in 1906. He has been engaged as engineer on the Trent Canal and resigned to enlist. His experience since graduation has been on steel and concrete construction work, which should be of value in military engineering, as that will comprise a large part of the work in the army. He also had previous experience in military engineering as a sapper in a Toronto company for a couple of years.

Sapper E. W. Langford.

Sapper Langford, son of Mr. Wm. Langford, Sr., was in his third year in Arts at Queen's University. Had he remained to finish his course, he would have graduated in 1916. He had his preliminary education in local schools, and was for some time previous to leaving for college, a member of the 57th Regiment.

MERCHANTS AROUSED AGAINST CURTAILED PASSENGER SERVICE

The Retail Merchants' Association discussed last night the C.P.R. passenger service to Peterborough, following the recently reduced timetable. Th merchants are dissatisfied with the present schedule and the following significant resolution was passed, on motion of A. W. Cressman seconded by T. C. Elliott: "That the Retail Merchants' Association of Peterborough expresses its sincere disapproval of the discontinuance of the two through trains, daily, from Chicago to Boston, through Peterborough, and that it be pointed out to the proper officials of the C.P.R. that no through service to points west of Toronto or east of Montreal is available to the citizens of Peterborough over any line of railroad, and further, that no adequate Sunday service is now available, giving grave inconvenience, not only to the citizens, but to the travelling public, generally, when making Peterborough their objective point, and that the Association urge upon the C.P.R. Company the necessity of providing adequate and direct daily service to points as far east as Boston, and as far west as Chicago, and that if no remedy is granted for the present condition of passenger service into, and out of, Peterborough, by the C.P.R., arrangements be made with other railroads to obtain adequate passenger service, and that the members of this Association recommend the citizens generally to use their influence with the Railway Companies to have the present conditions rectified."

The best tea in the world comes from the hill-top gardens of Ceylon and India. The best products of these gardens are in turn selected for Salada. It contains no cheapening dust, stems or coarse leaves.

ANNUAL MEETING OF HEALTH ASSOCIATION

"If you buy out of town, and we buy out of town, and all our neighbours buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

Interesting Reports Presented—District Nurses Made 3,350 Calls and Visited 206 Patients.

RECORD OF A BUSY YEAR

That the Peterborough Health Association has been active throughout the year is borne out by the reports that were submitted at the annual meeting that was held last evening in the City Council Chamber. The meeting, which was a representative one, was presided over by Mr. E. A. Peck. The various reports were read and declared to be satisfactory. In order to ensure a continuance of the work that is being carried on by the Association it will be necessary to raise more funds. An effort will be made to accomplish this by increasing the membership. The reports of the two district nurses were particularly interesting in that they tend to throw considerable light on the practical side of the work.

125 Patients.

Miss Edith Hamilton, district nurse for general work, reported as follows:

Total number of patients	125
Total number of visits	1790
Total number paid visits	800
Total number free visits	1470
Night duty calls	9

Miss Mercier's Report.

Following is the report of the District Nurse, Miss Mercier:

During the past year I made 1,560 visits. These were made to 81 patients but of this number 40 persons suffering from Tuberculosis have passed under the care of the Association. It may be of interest to know that nine of these cases were fathers of families, seventeen were mothers, fifteen were adults, and eight were children, representing forty-six homes

During the past year in connection with this work, the Association has supplied to the poor:

656 sputum cups.
33 lbs. absorbent cotton.
67 yards gauze.
2 drinking cups.
5 thermometers.
15 oz. carbolic acid.
6 oz. alcohol.
38 oz. liquid soap.
5 oz. boracic acid.
8 yds. adhesive plaster.
1 rubber bandage.
5 prescriptions.

Personal clothing and a large amount of old linen.

Our work has been aided in these respects by a generous donation of simple tonics from Dr. Halliday; a hot water bag, a quantity of oil silk, and a large amount of old linen from Miss Strickland; a rubber ring from Mrs. Wm. Laing; clothing from Mrs. Edwards; clothing and old linen from Mrs. Coughlin; clothing from Mrs. Dobbin, and old linen from Miss Lundy, Miss Dixon, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Sullivan, Mrs. Butcher and Mrs. Edwards. Also a supply of magazines for distribution among convalescents.

We are also grateful to Dr. Halliday for the donation of a tent which was put to good use during the summer months. The patient who occupied it is now able to return to his work.

Perhaps the point that impresses me most in my work is that of being able, through the Association, to distribute sanitary sputum cups to those who are unable to procure them. It seems to me that in this alone the Association is doing a very commendable work. Just what this means may be realized when you consider the source of infection in surroundings oft-times deplorable.

We have had eight deaths during the year.

Very frequently, when the patient's death is imminent, there still remains so much to be done in protecting the other members of the family. Take as an illustration the forty-six homes visited during the year. It is fair to assume that in each home there is a family larger or smaller. Each home, then, unless under supervision and instruction becomes a centre of danger to others, especially to children.

Some idea of the work to be done can, perhaps be realized by looking over Peterborough's death rate from tuberculosis for the past three years, comparing these with the death rate from other diseases:

A SUIT TO RECOVER $84

Was Entered Against the City By the Trustees of George St. Methodist Church.

At yesterday's sitting of the Division Court the City was called upon to defend itself in a suit that was instituted by the Trustees of George Street Methodist Church. The latter sought to recover the sum of $84 that was alleged to have been levied by the City as garbage collection taxes. Mr. D. W. Dumble appeared for the Church, and City Solicitor Gordon for the City. Plaintiffs contend that they had no garbage to collect and therefore were not liable for taxes.

On the first of June, last, a new Provincial Act, making all churches, schools and factories liable for this form of taxation, came into force. The only exemption was Government property. About the same time the City awarded a new contract for the collection of garbage and made provisions to have the institutions enumerated above, served. Some of them did not avail themselves of the garbage collection service, and consequently were reluctant to pay the taxes that were levied for that purpose.

The Trustees of George Street Church decided to fight the case and this object in view, the above action was taken.

Judgment was reserved.

REPEATED CANTATA A SUCCESS

Concert at Park St. Baptist Church Last Evening Had A Big Attendance.

The cantata, "Round the World With Santa Claus," which was repeated at Park Street Baptist church last evening, was a huge success and had a large attendance. Great credit is due to the children and to their trainer, Mr. H. Hill, for the way the cantata was reproduced. Several additions were made, which proved very amusing and entertaining. The children were all served with "cake and cocoa" at the close, and everyone went home highly pleased with their evening's entertainment.

128 Men Have Been Enlisted

And More Are Presenting Themselves Every Day

Every day sees an addition to the number of recruits for the third contingent at the local Armouries. Up to last night ninety men had been accepted for the Mounted Rifles, and thirty-eight for the infantry battalion The 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons who are enlisting the squadron of Mounted Rifles will receive a quota of twenty men from the Wellington District, on Monday. The Mounted Rifles are drilling twice a day at the Armouries. Between the two Corps the daily pay roll now amounts to $36.80, and as the men will be kept here for some time the City generally will feel the benefit.

IS BEING INVALIDED HOME

Mayor Beller received a cablegram from Salisbury Plain, this morning, stating that Pte. Curtis of this City, now with the first contingent, who has been ill with pneumonia, is convalescent and will return home soon.

Mrs. Curtis is residing in this City at present.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, JAN. 9, 1915

A GHOUL IN PRINT.

A ghoul is described as a monster who disembowels graves and feeds upon the dead. 'Old-timer," who writes to the Review, and with ghoulish disregard of the heathen, but righteous injunction to say nothing of the dead except good, is a myth incarnate in the twentieth century. To satisfy a spite or depraved morality, "Old-timer" tries to cast odium upon the unfortunate young gentleman, Myers, who, under the influence of an unbalanced mind, committed suicide. He probes old sores, and even maliciously distorts the truth to give sting to his venom.. "Old-timer" asserts that Mr. Myers was a "Liberal election agent" in Peterborough in the elections of 1908. This is distinctly untrue. As the untruth is stated to point an insinuation of wrong-doing, it is perhaps worth while to state that Mr. Myers was in Peterborough on that occasion as a special reporter of campaign meetings in conformity with a practice of Mr. Stratton to employ expert reporters to supplement the regular staff of The Examiner in election campaigns, men who had no more to do with election organization work than the presses that printed their reports. "Old-timer" is a good name for the slanderer of the dead. His methods are distanced and outgrown in the march of civilization, and by higher standards of decency in political warfare.

A MODEL.

The clear, ample and satisfying statement made by the Peterborough Patriotic Relief Committee, and appearing in last night's Examiner, is a model in many ways. It is recognition of responsibility to the public, whose trustees the committee is; it is recognition of the right of the public to be fully informed and kept fully informed; it is an evidence of effective organization and feasible system applied to a difficult work, thereby made much easier and much more effective; it shows that the committee does not consider it inconsistent with its duties, but as a part of its duties, to take the people into its confidence. Such an attitude is all the more remarkable because the committee is in fact, not directly responsible to the people by virtue of formal and popular constitution; only by virtue of a sense of duty and of consistency with the decencies of citizenship.

In the compressensive and frankly complete statement published, the Relief Committee of the Patriotic Fund, have not only given the public information that they have a moral right to have, but a statement that will forestall criticism, and create a condition of public confidence that will give a beneficial impulse to similar enterprises to the raising of the patriotic fund. In this regard, especially, the action of the comimttee is an example to our city authorities and our school boards.. Statements of a similar character, but necessarily covering other grounds might well, in justice to the public and in justice to these bodies themselves, be made from time to time. A statement made by the City Council in regard to the Hydro-Electric situation, would, if everything is right, satisfy, as they have a moral right to be satisfied, a public, become restive under the delay that involves an air of mystery that might be easily dispelled by a frank and authoritative statement which could be made without revealing any necessarily confidential information. Ratepayers who have to "pay the shot," should not be treated as children asking inconvenient questions. When proper business methods and proper management exist there should be no inconvenience in the questions of the ratepayers as to how the business is going, that they have intrusted to their responsible representatives. Openness and frankness, always consistent, of course, with business, prudence, is the better way.. Notwithstanding the well-known reliability of the press, an authoritative statement like that issued by the Patriotic Relief Committee, will have more weight with the public.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The annual report of the Public Library published in to-day's issue of The Examiner is an instructive and encouraging document. It shows that the library, under efficient and painstaking management, is admirably fulfilling its function as one of the most important of our educational institutions. We don't perhaps all appreciate the importance and value of reading as a complement to scholastic training. Bacon does not tell all when he asserts that "reading makes a full man." Its value is more fully expressed in the words of Addison in the Tattler —

"Reading is to the mind what exercise is to the body. As by the one health is preserved, strengthened and invigorated; by the other virtue (which is the health of the mind), is kept alive, cherished and confirmed."

A school course, or even a college course, is not an educational finality; the most it does is to teach the art of studying and permit of reading with intelligence—to apply and amplify the lessons of pedagogy; to build on the foundations laid.

The Peterborough Public Library affords a splendid opportunity to do this; and the report shows that there is an increasing number of juvenile patrons of the library, and that by the increased use of reference books, and the comparatively less fiction read, there is a growing disposition towards more solid acquirement by reading, thus emphasizing the educational value of the library. It may be assumed that this condition is promoted by the excellent articles, on "Reading," contributed from time to time to the press by the Librarian, Mr. Dela Fosse. These valuable articles are not within the range of his duties; but that he writes them shows that the routine discharge of his functions does not satisfy Mr. Dela Fosse's ambition to be of use as is shown to be the case by the excellent efficiency of the library, due in no small part to his capable management.

One feature touched upon in the report, is the scarcity of outside patrons of the library, from the townships adjoining the city. This is unfortunate, and is doubtless greatly due to regulations debarring a large number of those who are practically citizens of Peterborough, from access to the library on equal terms. In our North Monaghan suburbs, especially, there are at least a thousand persons, who are to all interests and purposes, residents of Peterborough, who are shut off from the benefits of the library by the exaction of a fee of $2 per year; and throughout the rest of the township and in all the other townships adjacent to the city, there are hundreds who might get benefit from the library. It is felt that the ratepayers of these townships would endorse a grant by each of the townships that would permit our library being thrown open to them on equal terms with our citizens.. This would be no disadvantage to Peterborough ratepayers, but rather an advantage in lessening the annual levy for maintenance. Thus the people of the townships would be "up-to-date" in this as they are in other respects. Rural mail delivery takes the daily papers in large numbers to the townships, and in this regard provides urban conditions. The Daily Examiner counts between 600 and 800 subscribers within a moderate radius in the townships, outside the city. To complete the advantagse of reading, the townships could well make a small grant that would permit their people to get for such a small sum the full benefits of the library, that represents a total expenditure of about $45,000, with a cost of about $5,500 for annual maintenance. The townships admitted to the library would mean another bond that would strengthen to mutual advantage, the commercial, social, and educational relations of city and country. This year's report of the librarian shows that, with excellent management, the Public Library is a good thing, of high educational value, and its benefits should be as widely distributed as possible.

MUST BE CONSISTENT.

The Examiner has received the following from an unknown, but yet highly appreciated friend:

Will the management of The Examiner give the attached to their Editor? It would be a good thing for him to read before he starts after Mr. Burnham again.

The troubles of the printing business are no more formidable than the walls of Jericho, yet the walls of Jericho crumbled and fell without the stroke of a hammer—Joshua's men blew their horns. SELL YOUR HAMMER AND BUY A HORN.—Ben Franklin Bulletin.

The Examiner must be credited with some slight sense of consistency.

SOMETHING TO REMEMBER.

Even The Tower of London Can't Confine Canadians

LONDON, Jan. 6.—"Two members of the Canadian Veterinary Corps, incarcerated in the Tower of London for disorderly conduct, broke the windows and bars and escaped when the guard was changed, and returned to camp. This is said to be the first escape from the Tower in a century."

This despatch causes us to smile. It is a great joke on the Tower of London which has considered itself top-hole in the matter of prisons for the last thousand years. The place has a donjon keep in the shape of the White Tower, an Inner Bailium, an Outer Bailium, walls ten feet thick, and what used to be a moat. It has been regarded by every King of England, from William the Conqueror down, as the completest thing in jails that the British Empire could boast. Henry the Eighth thought so much of it that he shifted his wives there when he had got through with them, and there they waited, poor creatures, until they were successfully beheaded and King Henry lived happily ever afterwards.

Although it is no great shakes as a dwelling place, being stuffy and full of drafts, English monarchs have been known to desert their palaces and take domicile there, particularly when they were having a little trouble with the burgesses of London. Their notion was that the Tower of London was a safe spot, and that they would argue it out with the citizens from the inside looking out. They had as little idea that the people could break in when they were shut out as that people could break out when they were shut in. A similar delusion has held many famous persons in durance vile within its walls, victims of tyranny, or apostles of it. Some of the names we recall are Dudley, Somerset, Sir Thomas More, Raleigh, Monmouth, Strafford. They all thought there was no breaking out of the Tower of London, and most of them hung around thinking that way until the headsman's axe left them nothing to think with.

But along come our two Canadians. Being Canadians they have no respect for tradition—they do not acquiesce in the general belief that the Tower is second only to the grave as a place of detention. They do not say, as your Englishman does, that a thing can't be done because it has never been done before, don't you know. Being members of the Veterinary Corps they display a little horse sense on the subject of jail-breaking and snap their fingers at precedent. They defy the logic of the situation and get away with it. No doubt they were in an illogical frame of mind, having done London Town from the Marble Arch to the Monument. If two loyal subjects in the mere pursuit of historic association, stop at all the pubs along Fleet Street rendered famous, say, by Dr. Samuel Johnson and his group, they will be steeped in something headier than logic. We can picture their jubilant course along that great white way, halting perhaps at Trafalgar Squire, to throw their caps in the fountain and tell one of the Landseer lions "go fetch it," prodding the noble breast the while with their swagger sticks. The only bar they would pass by would be Temple Bar, and that for two good reasons—one because they never served drinks there, and the other because the bar has been removed to the country seat of a certain titled Englishman, who presumably likes to have a bar handy. By the time our heroes were run in by the watch they were probably trying to push the Monument over or set the Thames on fire, or something else that nobody but a Colonial would attempt.

In such a state of high spirits they would naturally regard the Tower of London as a brittle institution, about as strong as a piece of cheese, but no stronger. Perhaps they were Ontario men and had voted for Mr. Rowell in the last election. In that case their first thought would be to abolish the bars, and they would find them easier than they had expected. No bar, not ever a Tower of London bar, stands up against the corrosion of a thousand years without danger of being opened during the prohibited hours. Our idea is that the two Canadians escaped from the Tower of London just to prove that it could be done. That they had no grudge against the Tower as a tower, they showed by hurying back to Salisbury Camp and reporting for duty. What surprises us is their moderation. They were satisfied to escape. When they found the Tower of London that easy, why didn't they sneak a halberd or a pikepole from the armoury, harpoon the Beefeaters, grab the crown jewels and bring them back to Canada to pay the national debt?

Conservative Comment On New Cabinet

Special to the Examiner.

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—1. Proudfoot Inquiry, 1913—

Toronto Telegram, (Conservative), May 1, 1913.—The Proudfoot enquiry was a travesty on justice and fair play. Objections from Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, K. C., struck the keynote of the procedure at the enquiry into the Proudfoot charges. That key note dominated the rulings of Howard Ferguson, M.P.P., and the tactics of T. W. McGarry, M.P.P.

Toronto World, (Conservative), May 2, 1913.—The Government may be criticised for appointing such a rabid partisan as Mr. Ferguson as Chairman of the Committee, and the Liberals may make all they can of the limitations imposed on the enquiry by the Chairman.

The Kingston Standard, (Conservative), said that the incident "left a bad taste in the mouth."

The Toronto Telegram, on May 1st, said the Liberals on the Committee were tied hand and foot by Chairman Ferguson's rulings.

Toronto Telegram, May 3, 1913.—Among the events decided at the horse show was not the following: "Best appointed and most complete white-washing waggon driven by the owner—first prize, G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P."

Toronto Telegram, May 3, 1913.—Anglo Saxondom recognizes three great and impartial tribunals, the judicial committee of the Privy Council, the United States Supreme Court and G .Hoard Ferguson's Privileges and Elections Committee.

Toronto Telegram, May 5, 1913.—The Ontario Privileges and Elections Committee is as impartial, upright, and unprejudiced a body of jurists as ever cut a throat or scuttled a ship.

2. Snider Investigation, 1914—

Toronto Telegram, April 16, 1914—Loyalty to party requires G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P., to officiate as a traitor to himself. The Proudfoot enquiry was throttled by the strong-handed Chairmanship of G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P. The same authority is being operated as a curb on the activity of the Public Accounts Committee, (in the Snider investigations).

3. Ferguson Disqualification Case, 1914—

Toronto World, (Conservative).—There are a lot of people in Ontario wondering why Mr. G. Howard Ferguson is so indispensable to the Government that special legislation has to be passed to save his political life.

TURKEY IGNORES PROTESTS OF GREECE

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The Daily Telegraph's Athens corespondent reports that the Greek Government is gravely concerned with the increasing strained Graeco-Turkish relations. The Greek diplomatic and Consular representatives in Turkey, the correspondent says, are receiving intolerant treatment, being shadowed by the police and spies, and that the official protests by the Greek Minister are ignored.

An Italian priest who has invented many wireless devices has succeeded in intercepting messages with needles thrust into a potato.

NEW TRIAL GRANTED.

British Soldier Who Struck German Officer Escapes Death.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The news that Private William Lonsdale, imprisoned and sentenced to death by the Germans at Dokritz, has been granted a new trial is contained in a statement by the Lord Mayor of Leeds. The news came by way of Copenhagen.

There was joy that had the elements of pathos in the home in Fraser street where Lonsdale's wife and two little children live when they heard the news.

The soldier was taken as a prisoner of war. He was sentenced to close confinement for striking one of his German guards. Later a tribunal of officers sentenced him to death, and against this he appealed to the Military High Court of Justice, with success.

Belgian Priests Fined.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 9.—(Via London.)—In a despatch from Rosendaal the correspondent of The Amsterdam Tijd says that M. Dessein, who printed Cardinal Mercier's pastoral letter, has been fined 500 marks $5,125) with an alternative threat of 50 days' imprisonment.

Continuing the correspondent declares that the vicar of Hemixen was kept a prisoner in the fort at Hoboken from Saturday noon until Sunday morning. The vicars of Duffel, Contich, Brasschaet and Schooten also were imprisoned. All these priests were prepared, the correspondent of The Tijd declares, to contradict on oath the Berlin semi-official telegram denying that any priests have been arrested for reading the pastoral letter of Cardinal Mercier.

"Extra Rooms" Means Extra Income

If your house is extra-ample—if you can rent a room, or several rooms, in it—your problem of "extra income" is easy.

Some people prefer a large house, in a better locality, at a higher rent—and by sub-letting some furnished rooms either wipe out the extra cost of the house rent, or reduce it to the cost of a poor house in a poor neighbourhood. Of course want advertising is NECESSARY!

FARMER'S WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

A Weak, Nervous Sufferer Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Keota, Minn.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I feel like a different person. I believe there is nothing like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weak women and young girls, and I would be glad if I could influence anyone to try the medicine, for I know it will do all and much more than it is claimed to do."—Mrs. CLARA FRANKE, R. F. D. No. 1, Maplecrest Farm, Keota, Minn.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

French Charged On Skis Down a Mountain Slope

St. Die, Department of Vosges, France, January 8.—A brilliant exploit by French Alpine troops, who charged on skis down the snow-covered mountain slopes at Bonhomme, a post on the Alsatian frontier, forced the Germans to retire on Orbey, five miles down the valley of the River Weiss toward Colmar.

The Germans held the railroad from Ste Marie-te-St. Croix menacing St. iDe, where the French heavy artillery opened fire on January. 3. This led the Germans to expect an attack from that direction. At the same time the Alpine troops, leading the way for French infantry, advanced on the German Customs House at Diedolshausen, near Bonhomme.

A strong German detachment with quick firers held the route, but the winding nature of the road prevented the Germans from firing more than 700 yards along it. The French advanced to within this distance of the Germans, while the Alpine troops began to climb the heights to attak the Germans on their flank.

Progress was slow, and the dark forms of the soldiers, outlined against the snow, made excellent marks for the German sharpshooters.

Then began an exciting charge on the Germans at Diedolshausen. The Alpine soldiers on their skis slid down the mountainside at a dizzy pace, while the infantry in the road below opened fire on the Germans.

Caught between two fires, the Germans gave way, fighting obstinately along the five miles of their retreat.

If there were but one potato in the world a careful cultivator, it is estimated, could produce 10,000,000,000 from it in ten years.

ITCHING ECZEMA SPREAD OVER WRIST

Would Burn. Suffered Great Pain. Grandchild Also Afflicted. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Now Perfectly Well.

Pontiac, N. A.—"I had eczema on my right wrist for over a year. It broke out like a rash. It would itch and burn and I had to scratch. The skin was broken and the blood came through. Sometimes it spread all over my hands and I suffered great pain when I put them in water. I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they gave me quick relief, healing my wrist and hand in a few months.

"My grandchild was also afflicted with that trouble. He had it on his hand, face and hands. He was treated for three or four months and was no better. Then we began to treat him with Cuticura Soap and Ointment and he began to improve. So we continued the treatment for a few months, and he is perfectly well." (Signed) Mrs. Joseph Pongere, May 28, 1914.

For pimples and blackheads the following is most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere. Sample of each with 32-p. Skin Book will be sent free upon request. Address: "Cuticura, Dept. D, Boston, U.S.A."

53,479 BOOKS WERE ISSUED AT LIBRARY

Increase of 2,194 Over 1913 is Reported in the Librarian's Annual Report--During the Past Year 1102 Books Were Added to the Library.

Following is the annual report of Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, Librarian of the Peterborough Public Library, and presented to the Library Board:

H. R. H. Kenner, Esq., Chairman Public Library Board, Peterborough—

Dear Sir,—I beg to submit herewith my report of the work accomplished in the Public Library during the past year. The returns will show that it has been a satisfactory one in every respect and that the Library is steadily gaining in the patronage and appreciation of the citizens. The following tabulated statement will show clearly the progress that has been made, a progress, which I am sure will be gratifying to the members of the Board as well as to the citizens at large:

	1913	1914	Increase. Dec.
Fiction	44899	5283	215
Biography	555	690	135
Philosophy	173	317	144
Religion	356	405	49
Sociology	789	999	210
Philology	31	111	80
Nat. Science	577	761	184
Useful Arts	456	595	139
Fine Arts	202	438	236
Literature	966	1136	170
Travel	703	1295	592
History	751	936	185
Magazines	726	663	63
Total	51285	53479	2194

The number of juvenile works taken out during the year was 8514, which is an advance of 1168 over the year 1913. The above figures take no account of anything beyond what has actually passed through the hands of the assistant librarians at the receiving desk. If means could be provided to ascertain exactly the number of books consulted in the Reference Room many thousands could be added to the above total. At the request of the chairman a record has of late been kept of the books left on the tables in the reference room at the end of each day. This record was started on Sept. 29th. The number taken note of in this manner to Dec. 31st comes to the total of 980, but these figures give no inkling of the real use that is made of this department, as there are many who put books back on the shelves as soon as they have finished with them, and of course no record can possibly be kept of these under prevalent conditions. It can be stated, however, without exaggeration, that the reference room has certainly been used more this year than formerly. This is in great measure due to the efforts of the teachers of the various schools in the city who send their classes here for material for oral compositions, essays and debates. The students of the Normal school also have made good use of its advantages.

Books Added to the Library.

The number of books added to the Library during the year was 1102. The following statement will show their classification:

General Works	43
Fiction	384
Biography	45
Philosophy	8
Religion	28
Sociology	72
Philology	1
Nat. Science	47
Useful Arts	27
Fine Arts	17
Literature	72
Travel	94
History	40
Magazines (Bound)	95
Juvenile Fiction	121
Pamphlets	7
Total	1102

Eighty-nine of the above were presented to the Library by various friends and by the Dominion and Provincial Governments and the Governments of New South Wales, Australia and New Zealand. The Library is indebted also to the Educational Bureau at Washington for the regular receipt of the U. S. Educational Bulletin, total as they do not form part of the many of which are of an exceptionally [illegible] These and many other pamphlets received during the year have not been placed in the above ordinary literature that is kept on the shelves. They are, however, placed in the catalogue so that any person wishing to have access to them may be enabled to do so, on application to the Librarian.

Books Lost or Destroyed.

437 volumes had to be taken from circulation during the year owing to having reached their limit of usefulness. These were almost without exception, works of fiction, and of ephemeral value. Some fifteen books have also been lost through the removal of borrowers from the city and the inability to obtain knowledge of their whereabouts. These have in every case been volumes of no special value. In other cases, where damage had been done to a book due reparation has been made by the borrower.

Reading Rooms.

The reading rooms have been used more than in any previous year., in some instances so much so that there has been no seating accommodation left for late comers. The ladies' reading room has not been so well patronized, but quite as well, nevertheless, as in past years.

There has been no trouble experienced in any quarter in dealing with the public. Entire harmony had reigned, and the thanks of the Librarian and his assistants are due to all who have helped them fa their work. This helpfulness has been especially noticeable in the case of the children who have invariably shown themselves amenable to the regulations governing the institution.

The Assistants.

I am glad to bear witness to the good work that has been accomplished by my two assistants, Miss Aylmer and Miss Sullivan, throughout the year. They have had increased work owing to the larger circulation and the greater demands of enquirers in the reference room and they have done their work to the satisfaction of everyone.

The Janitor.

Mr. Mathiesen, who has had charge of the building since it was opened, has done excellent work both outside and inside the Library. The way in which he has kept the lawns and the approaches to the building, and attended to the heating and cleaning of the rooms is worthy of all praise.

Tickets Issued.

The number of tickets issued throughout the year has been 688, of which 198 were issued to juveniles. The total number of tickets issued to date amounts to 4,693. In connection with this issue of tickets one thing is noticeable and that is the paucity of book borrowers from the surrounding country. Many enquiries have been made by would-be borrowers living not far from the city limits and great disappointment has been expressed at inability to get library benefits without the payment of a fee of two dollars. Two or three years ago an effort was made to obtain a grant from the County Council with a view to placing county residents on the same basis as people living in the city, but not much encouragement was given to the project by the county officials. A great work could be accomplished if this scheme could be realised. At present we have about four or five county residents on the books where we ought to have hundreds.

The Newspapers.

The newspapers with their usual kindness have been helpful in every way to the Library. Without their aid it would have been impossible to make known the various ways in which it can be made of value to the public. It gives me great pleasure to testify to their consistent and ungrudging support of the institution.

In closing the report one factor of importance must not be omitted and that is the growing use that is being made of the Library by different organizations in the city. No record has been kept of such gatherings, but there can be no question but that they have helped very materially in making the Library known to many who otherwise would have remained in ignorance of its capabilities.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

F. M. Dela Fosse,
Librarian.

"Flyer" Cannot Be Restored

A Policy of Entrenchment Inaugurated by the Germans

LINDSAY, Jan. 9.— The G. T. R. authorities have announced that they cannot see their way clear to restore the "flyer" between Lindsay and Toronto at present owing to the great decrease in traffic as a result of the unsettled condition of affairs.

This was the answer given by Mr. C. E. Horning, District Passenger Agent, to the deputation of citizens on Thursday. The members put up a good case for the town, but Mr. Horning plainly pointed out that the train was not paying the company and it would be poor business for them to continue it.

A policy of retrenchment had been inaugurated all along the line and some of the company's best trains had been cancelled on other divisions. It was a critical period for all lines of business, and all were retrenching as far as it was possible. The railway deeply appreciated the large amount of business which went their way in Lindsay, [illegible] especially sorry indeed that conditions forced them to discontinue the flyer. As soon as business revived the train would be put into service again.

Britain Must Search Ships

In Reply to U. S. Note Britain Stands by Her Rights

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The preliminary reply of Sir Edward Grey, British Minister for Foreign Affairs, to the United States note, which intimated unjustifiable detention by British cruisers of American vessels, objection to Great Britain's practice of stopping vessels merely to look for evidence, and the British denial of the right of American merchants to ship "to order," was received late yesterday afternoon by Secretary of State Bryan.

The British paper will be given out, Mr. Bryan says, on Sunday afternoon, by which time the President, who will return to-day, will have an opportunity of considering it, although it is said the tone and substance of it was telegraphed to him last night.

Owing to the fact that the document arrived late and had to be uncoded, very few of the higher officials know anything about the communication. This much is said, however, that it is very courteous. While not precisely responsive to the large questions, without specifications which were raised by Mr. Bryan, Great Britain is said to maintain in the note these conditions:

That she could not abandon the general right to search ships on the high seas which was admitted by all nations.

That she must also maintain the continuance of the right "to visitation" of commercial ships.

That the practice of detaining vessels whose cargoes or parts of cargoes are consigned "to order" may be modified but not abandoned on account of peculiar conditions of the [illegible] war.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Fire Chief Howard is putting the finishing touches on his annual report. He will table it on Monday evening next, which will be the first regular meeting of the City Council.

The Arbitration.

The arbitration proceedings between the city and the Electric Power Company will likely commence one week from Monday. It will take several days to complete the work. This will decide the disposition of the one hundred thousand dollars that has been paid into court.

Officials Present.

City Clerk Armstrong, Assessor W. H. Henry and Sanitary Inspector Spence attended yesterday's session of the Division Court. They were there to represent the city's interests in the case of George Street Methodist Church versus the city, in which the former sought to recover the amount collected levied for garbage collection.

New Quarters.

The new quarters recently acquired by the Relief Committee are being fitted up with the equipment necessary for the administration of the affairs of the Committee. The Committee has secured the room on the second floor of the City Hall, formerly occupied by Sanitary Inspector Spence and Relief Officer Miller. The latter will share the same room, while Mr. Spence has moved over to the room containing the laboratory equipment.

The Inaugural Meeting.

The stage is set for the inaugural meeting of the City Council which is slated for eleven o'clock on Monday next. Two people attended the obsequies at the 1914 inaugural meeting, and there is considerable speculation as to how many will attend this year.

Standing Committees.

There is still a large number of people who think that Alderman Johnston should finish his work as chairman of the Power Committee. There is some talk of his retaining the chairmanship of the Finance Committee, but many of his friends would like to see him lead the Power Committee for another year.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

Dr. Frank E. Bennett was appointed chairman of the St. Thomas Board of Education.

Question Is Settled.

The Brantford City Clerk has announced that H. C. Cuff is one of the aldermen for Ward Five. Some question was raised over his election, as he had withdrawn from the contest after the time limit.

A Provincial Election.

In the Woodstock (N.B.) bye-election, caused by the retirement of Premier Flemming, Frank Smith, Government candidate, defeated R. L. Simms by a 700 majority. Premier Flemming actively supported Smith.

More Hydro.

It is proposed to serve the rural district west of Brockville with Hydro-Electric power. The power will be supplied by the Brockville plant and the line constructed by the Hydro Commission.

Local Option Defeated.

Local option was defeated on Pelee Island Monday by a majority of 28. The delay in making known the result was caused by the break-down in telephonic communication.

Elected President.

William O. Lochead was elected president of the Berlin Board of Trade.

Made Chairman.

At the inaugural meeting of the London Board of Education, Dr. R. W. Shaw was made chairman.

Ballots Found.

A bundle of ballots similar to those used at the recent election in Newmarket was found by school boys in the street. The discovery has caused considerable excitement in the town.

Egyptians Too Wise to Revolt

PARIS, Jan. 8.—The Geneva correspondent of the Temps sends particulars of an interview given by the ex-Khedive of Egypt to a representative of the Vienna Neue Freie Presse.

Abbas Hilmi Pasha takes a very pessimistic view and there is nothing of German Turkish bombast in his declaration. He said:

"The Turkish expedition to Egypt will encounter very great difficulties Still I hope it will succeed in overcoming them successfully.

"People wonder that Egypt remains quiet, and that it does not make common cause with the Turkish army and further its task by a general revolution.

Egypt is wise

"It must be understood that Egypt is wise, and does not wish to revolt just now, a revolution being in the present circumstances, foredoomed to failure.

"But if a Turkish army enters Egypt it may be regarded as certain that the Egyptians, faithful to their feeling in favour of the Turks, will join with them to create for England a situation full of danger."

BRITAIN DOING WELL WITHOUT CONSCRIPTION

British Chancellor Says Need For Compulsory Enlistment Has Not Yet Arisen.

LONDON, Jan. 9. — After a two days' session, during which its members heard statements from Earl Kitchener, Secretary of War; Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor; the Marquis of Crewe, Government leader in the Lords, and Baron Lucas, on behalf of the Government, on the progress of the war, and Great Britain's preparations to carry it on, the House of Lords last evening adjourned until Feb. 2, when Parliament will re-assemble.

The Opposition was not very skillful in securing from the Government information on the growth of the army or on the operations of the navy, regarding which its members persistently questioned the Ministers; but generally speaking the Government expressed satisfaction at the rate at which recruiting was proceeding, and Viscount Haldane declared that the necessity for compulsory service had not arisen. The Lord Chancellor also announced that experts in England were producing a gun which at least was the equal of the German 42-centimetre gun.

The Unionists peers who criticised Ireland's reply to the call to arms were told that Ireland was doing her full share in the war.

A lighter vein was introduced into the discussion by some of the Scottish members, who complained of the kilts supplied to the Scottish regiments. Baron Moncrieff described these kilts as "abbreviated ladies' bobbie skirts." Baron Lucas replied that the War Office had been unable to get a sufficient stock of the usual material used in the making of kilts.

Baron Lucas, dealing with criticism of the withholding of information on the extent of recruiting, said the publishing of the figures would be of enormous value to Germany.

The Earl of Selborne said he doubted if the Government had sufficiently impressed the nation with the immensity of the first task before the British army, that of expelling the Germans from Belgium.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT BY C. P. R.

According to The Montreal Gazette, the Canadian Pacific Railway has notified holders of its first mortgage five per cent. bonds that the company would retire the balance of the issue at any time from January 1st on to the date of maturity on July 1st, at par and accrued interest. The influence of the announcement should be excellent on the credit of the company as well as the credit of the country generally.

The importance of the announcement is two-fold. In the first place, the retirement of the issue—the outstanding bonds at the beginning of the year amounted to $12,842,646 — clears up the entire mortgage on the C.P.R. system with the exception of the $8,650,000 Algoma Branch 5 per cents, which have still some time to run. With the last of these general first mortgage bonds retired, even theoretically there can be no such thing as a foreclosure of the C.P.R. property. The Algoma Branch 5's are secured only on a small branch line and are not a mortgage on the general system.

No railroad in the world approaching the size of the C.P.R. can lay claim to a like distinction. The debenture holders, in the event of the company failing to meet its interest obligations to them, might call on their trustees to operate the property for their benefit. But the moment the arrears in interest were made up the trustees would automatically retire from the temporary situation thus created. They have no claim on the property in the same sense as first mortgage bondholders, who can force foreclosure in the event of default. This in railroading to-day is virtually an unique position, and, for a system of C.P.R.'s size, without parallel.

The other important feature of the transaction is that at a time when the tendency of all debtors is to defer payment of their obligations as long as possible, C.P.R. comes along and says in effect to its best-secured creditors:

"The loan which you made us back in 1885 matures only July 1st next. Possibly you have need of your capital now for other investment or other requirements. Well, the C.P.R. is willing to pay off the loan at any time from now on, or six months ahead of the due date, at the par agreed on in the trust agreement and with interest for any broken period your money remains with us."

An announcement of this kind is naturally convincing evidence of a confident postion financially, and, more particularly, at a time like the present, should add materially to the lustre of C.P.R.'s name in the money markets. Indirectly it is of importance as a stimulus to confidence towards Canada generally.

It will be recalled that C.P.R. made an effort in May, 1913, to retire all of these first mortgage bonds maturing in July of the current year. The company then offered 102 and interest to holders who would turn them in before July 1st, 1913. The response to that was that $30,608,873 were delivered and paid for, but bonds to the value of $12,842,646 were held back, holders apparently being unwilling to surrender their security even for the premium offered. Naturally, with the issue maturing in July, no premium can be offered now, but the company is extending to holders the opportunity to convert their security into cash at the face value six months ahead of the due date.

Advance In Flour The Grocery Feature of Week

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs will appear in the Canadian Grocer this week:

Office of Publication, Toronto, January 7th, 1914.

Flour holds the centre of the stage in the grocery markets this week with an advance of 50 cents per barrel on Wednesday afternoon. This rise did not come as any surprise, as the wheat market has been exceedingly firm of late. In fact it was a wonder to many why the advance did not come along even sooner. January wheat in Winnipeg was sold on Tuesday at $1.28, and May at around $1.33, while in Toronto the price of No. 1 Northern touched a high point at $1.40. Flour is now higher than it has been for many years, due of course to the upsetting of the natural channels of trade by the war. There seems little reason to expect lower prices in the immediate future, but it is difficult to say what will happen should the war terminate before seeding time or should Russia secure free passage for her wheat through the Baltic and the Dardanelles.

Sultana and Valencia raisins are getting squeezed into small compass. Since Turkey entered the war the importations of Sultanas of course stopped, and just as soon as the stocks that were on hand or afloat at the time, have been consumed, there will be no more until the war has come to an end. Valencias are exceedingly short, and it begins to look as if they, too, would soon be all in retailers' hands.

Nuts are Cheap Now.

As Canadian Grocer has stated frequently on this page, would be the case, prices of nuts following the holiday trade have declined. Brazils are away down from the high figure, and now that the Christmas baking is over for another year, shelled walnuts and almonds are much cheaper. Of course if it had not been for the fact that supplies of these were held up during December by the dockmen's strike at Liverpool, they would never have soared to the hieghts they did

There is nothing new in sugar. The market, however, has gained a little strength, or at any rate it is not quite easy as it was following the last decline.

There is yet considerable speculation as to whether there will be a war-tax on tea. Some think there will while others again think there won't. Perhaps even the Finance Minister doesn't yet know and at any rate it is not likely we shall have anything definite until parliament meets next month and the budget is presented. There is from all accounts some speculation going on in anticipation of a war-tax on this article, but it is not at all general. Apart from the possibility of the tax entirely, the tea market is firm and will likely remain so for some time to come.

New laid eggs are still falling. The mild spell is evidently encouraging the hens to take an optimistic view of the future weather, and they are laying some eggs. Wholesale prices are from ten to fifteen cents lower than a month ago.

AN ELEGANT BANQUET AT ST. JOHN'S SCHOOL

The Officials and Scholars Sumptuously Entertained by the Ladies of the Congregation—The Church Women's Association Rendered Great Assistance

Some one hundred and fifty anxious, impatient youngsters were waiting in the schoolroom of St. John's schoolhouse last evening, when, at five-thirty, "The Examiner" representative entered the room. And the happy crowd was anxiously impatient because it was awaiting the word of command, "Fall too and eat."

Meanwhile the boys and girls could not restrain their exuberation. They sang, they laughed, they beat the "devil's tatoo" with their feet, and they were supremely happy; and what a lot of good it does one to see others happy. It seems contagious and one's own trials or heart-breaks appear, for the time at any rate, to be minimised.

Now what was the occasion of all this merriment? Well, those large-hearted ladies of St. John's congregation had foregathered to give a treat, in the form of a supper, to the scholars of the Sunday school. As the little tots who comprise the primary school had their treat last Saturday, they were not included in the list of the guests. And to the feast were bidden the teachers and the officials of the school.

The various tables were laid out with great taste and looked very inviting with their plentiful supply of napery, china and cutlery. On the stage had been laid a table for the use of teachers and officials and those members of the Church Women's Association of St. John's who had so kindly done all the preparatory work, and who also took upon themselves the arduous duties of "serving tables."

Before the repast, to which ample justice was done, as it well deserved, the Doxology was sung as an act of thanks, and then the important act of the evening took place. After the feed, in the twinkling of an eye, so it seemed, the tables were cleared away and the schoolroom was ready seated for an impromptu variety entertainment, in which vocal solos, duets, trios and recitations made a big showing. There was also a violin solo, a pianoforte solo contributed by Miss Gladman, and it goes without saying that "Tipperary" was sung through each verse and chorus about twice over and by everybody. A little playlet, in which the bad fairy "Disorder" first reigns, but who is eventually ousted by the good fairy "Order," was very creditably performed by some of the children.

After this impromptu vaudeville, a hymn—which always appears to be a general favourite with children — "Once in Royal David's City," was sung, followed by "Rule Britannia," Miss Gladman playing all the accompaniments.

Canon Davidson then made a short speech, thanking the ladies for their hospitality and for their kind assistance; and the successful proceedings concluded by the hearty singing, by about two hundred voices, of the national anthem, "God Save the King."

Thanks are due to the generous ladies who provided the entertainment, as also to those who were so kind as to carry out the arrangement —a task involving a large amount of labour and trouble both before and after the arrival and departure of the guests.

The famous Irish Tenor, Fiske O'Hara, appearing in "Jack's Romance" at The Grand Opera House, Monday January 11th.

Old Favourites in Addition to New Melodies—A Pleasing Part of the O'Hara Performance.

Fiske O'Hara, one of the best of our American tenors, is making a specialty of introducing one or more of the old songs in his performances. In addition to the songs composed for the play, he will introduce in his new play, "Jack's Romance," Balfe's famous old melody, "Killarney," which he sings in a style that will delight the hearts of all who love the old ballads, saying nothing of those descendants of the "Ould Sod" to whom such lyrics are well nigh sacred.

T.A.S. Young Men Scored Fine Success In Minstrelsy

The dramatic section of St. Peter's T.A.S. delighted a capacity house with a very creditable minstrel show in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum last night. The performance was well staged and costumed. The songs and choruses were almost without exception splendidly sung. A few of the jokes would have to confess to an alias, but they were only a few; the others were bright and witty. The whole performance moved smoothly and snappily with an entire absence of hesitancy and incompleteness. A noticeable feature was the fact that the majority of the talent were appearing for the first time. They contributed an enthusiasm which carried the business along without interruption, and at the same time they more readily conveyed their spontaneous spirit of fun across the footlights. The T.A.S. minstrels on last night's performance compare most favourably with similar productions that are readily remembered. The young men manifested a restraint, too, which was not only welcome but which gave the amateurs something of the savour of professionals.

The endmen were Sam Hoolihan, Elric White, E. Murty, Wm. Primeau, H. Wolffe and M. Murty. The chorus was composed of Arthur Costello, George Daly, Euclid Picard, Ed. Riley, E. Tooley, Ernest Reynolds, Eddie Hanrahan, Carmel Legendre, Ray Donoghue, Frank Grady and Everett Heath. Vincent McCabe was quite a suave interlocutor. Mr. McCabe sang the solo of the opening, "Back to Dixie Land." Other numbers were, "Across the Mason-Dixon Line" by Will Primeau, "When It's Night Time Down in Burgundy," Art Costello; "The Locomotive Roll," S. Hoolihan; "Luella Lee," E. Picard and G. Daly; "Rap, Rap, Rap," H. Wolffe; "When You Wore a Tulip," Ernest Reynolds; "The Cabaret Rag," Elric White; "Harmony Bay," Ed. Riley; "Fido is a Hot-dog Now," E. Heath; "Reuben Tango," F. Grady; "Tipperary," Geo. Daly; buck and wing dancing, Murty Brothers.

Mr. White's number was cleverly done, and Everett Heath made a big hit with his song. The entire first part was thoroughly enjoyed.

In the second section, H. Wolffe and A. Costello gave an amusing dialogue. A quartette comprised of Messrs. Daly, Picard, Legendre and Hanrahan displayed fine harmony in "Old Black Joe" and other songs. Master L. Spellman contributed a 'cello solo and Mr. Hanrahan sang "Mother Machree." Messrs. Vincent and J. McCabe played a violin duet and Mr. Hoolihan's step dance was all that could be desired. Elric White and Vince McCabe concluded the performance with a line of nonsense that tickled the audience. Miss Marion Gorman was a most efficient accompanist.

During the intermission orchestral numbers were played by Miss Gorman, piano, V. and J. McCabe, violins, and R. Chambers, drums.

Among those present were noticed, Bishop O'Connor, Rev. Dean McColl, Rev. P. J. Phelan, and Rev. J. J. O'Brien.

Mr. Hoolihan, as manager of the minstrels, is deserving of unstinted praise for the thoroughness of detail accomplished and for the rounds of fun worked out.

To Leave Constantinople

Turks are Ready to Move Government to Safer Place

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Constantinople, regarded by the allies as one of the greatest prizes of the war, should they win and Turkey be forced to give it up, may be abandoned soon as the seat of the Turkish Government.

It is asserted that preparations have been made to remove from the city the archives of state and the treasury should the necessity arrive, and that at Adrianople arrangements are under way to receive the Government officials.

An Anglo-French fleet is hammering at the Dardanelles, which, if passed, would give easy access to Constantinople. To the east of the city, on the Russo-Turkish frontier Russian forces, which are said to have defeated the Turks, are seeking to penetrate Asiatic Turkey in the direction of Constantinople.

FRENCH PREMIER'S SON DEAD.

Body Found Within Few Yards of German Trench.

Paris, Jan. 8. — Premier and Madame Viviani have received official confirmation of the death of their youngest son on August 22 at Sussigny. His body was found within a few yards of the German trenches. At the time he was shot down the young man was charging with his regiment, the 31st Infantry, in which he was a non-commissioned officer.

GERMANY OPTIMISTIC

Von Jagow Predicts Series of Smashes for the Allied Armies

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A London Daily Express despatch from Amsterdam to The Herald says:

"I understand from a most authoritative source that, in a recent conversation with the German Minister to a neutral country in Europe, Herr von Jagow, the German Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, made the following statement:

"'We do not need to worry. Things are progressing excellently for Germany. Let me make the following forecast: By the end of February we will have smashed up the Russians. The end of March will see the end of the French army. In April we will finally start reckoning with Great Britain, which I expect will be finished by the middle of May. All German's enemies will be beaten before June, at any rate.'"

Turks Strengthen Dardanelles.

ATHENS, Jan. 9.—The Turks continue to fortify the Dardanelles against an entrance by the allied fleet. Several islands within the entrance have been transformed into armed camps. Forty German engineer officers are directing the work.

The Turkish forces in Constantinople are estimated to number 35,000. At Scutari, in Asia Minor, an anti-government proclamation was secretly posted on walls of buildings, and the chief of police has been dismissed for failure to hold the people.

To Shift Hospital.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The headquarters of No. 2 Hospital, Canadian contingent, has been moved permanently. It is understood that the entire hospital will be moved as health of the patients improves. There have been several cases of spinal meningitis among the troops. The floods of Salisbury are now decreasing. The cathedral is being pumped out. The streets surrounding Bulford Hospital have been under a foot of water, but there seems promise of a spell of sharp weather, and things will doubtless improve shortly.

Son of Premier Viviani Dead.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—Premier and Madame Viviani have received official confirmation of the reported death of their youngest son on the field of battle.

Young Viviani fell Aug. 22 at Cussigny. His body was found within a few yards of the German trenches. At the time he was shot down the young man was charging with his regiment, the 131st Infantry, in which he was a non-commissioned officer.

A few short weeks ago these coats would have been bought to sell at as high as $25.00, not a model worth less than $18.00. Why Farmers Are Regarded As a Type In Their Niggardly Treatment of Hired Help

The farmer gave him twenty-five cents for his railway fare and told him to go into Peterborough. This was his method of breaking to the youngster the news that his choring services after nearly a year's work, were no longer required. In plainer terms it meant that the farmer was casting a thirteen-year-old orphan into the bowl of chance with apparently slight regard for the possibilities. The farmer said, "Here's a quarter. Go over to the station at Bethany and take the train for Peterborough. This will pay your fare," and he added something to the effect that he had no longer any work for the boy and therefor did not need him.

And that's how Ernest Connor, a chunky little English chap of "almost fourteen" happened to be looking longingly through the windows of D. H. Mitchell's store, at the corner of Park and Sherbrooke streets, at nine o'clock on the night of December 28th. You remember it was zero weather. Mr. Bradshaw, the clerk, noted the desire in the boy's eyes as he gazed at the sweets inside and called him in. He soon learned that the little fellow was cold and hungry, and immediately set about satisfying these natural demands. He gave him a chair close to the fire, and fed him with eatables from the shelves. Questioning the boy, he was soon in possession of his sordid story.

When you ponder upon the farmer's treatment of this boy Connor, your mind immediately jumps to the contrast and you get a clearer idea of what Christ meant when He said: "Suffer the little children that they may come unto me." Thirteen years is still within the bounds of childhood. It is not that the boy has been subjected to cruel treatment, except in the utter absence of consideration and charity from his country employer. There is something so callous in the manner in which the boy was turned away in the depth of winter that it compares favourably with some of the impressive performances ascribed to Prussian "kultur" among the Belgian habitants.

How He Came to Canada.

This affair with the Franklin farmer is only one of the more recent of a number of pathetic chapters in the story of the boy's few years. His father died six years ago. Nine or ten months ago Ernest and a younger brother were placed on a boat sailing for Canada. He remembers his mother requesting a woman he did not know that she take care of the lads on their outward trip. From that stage until their arrival here in Ontario there is a hiatus that is not connectedly supplied. It seems that the lads were separated, and apparently by immigration officials. Ernest hasn't the least idea of what became of his brother.

Worked on the Farm.

He, himself, arrived last March at Franklin, a hamlet on the spur of the C.P.R. from Bethany. Somehow or other his sister knew his location for she wrote in April or May that their mother was dead. Letters Ernest wrote home, he declares the farmer destroyed and forbade him to write any others. In the meantime he worked for the farmer until December 28th. That evening he was "paid off." Of course the lad's "keep" accounted for most of his wages, and then he was clothed and there remained the sum of twenty-five cents, not to mention the valuable directions as to how to reach Peterborough.

Was Thinly Clad.

If Ernest was fed as he was clad, he must have fared badly. He wore a pair of rubbers and four pairs of socks; no underwear; a pair of overalls; shirt, coat and hat of some kind. But no underwear during the Christmas cold spell! Well, that was his condition when Mr. Bradshaw discovered him. To-day he is comfortably placed in Adjutant McElhiney's Refuge for the unemployed. Mr. Bradshaw called the police station, but the Chief and four constables were required at an inquest then in progress. Chief Howard was then sought, and immediately responded. He took the Connor boy to the Refuge and now regards him as somewhat akin to a ward. Mrs. G. Walter Green heard about him and supplied him with an abundance of good clothes, even to a sweater coat. One suit Ernest refuses to wear every day. He keeps it for special occasions, and for Sundays, donning it particularly for services in the Salvation Army Temple.

Adjutant McElhiney has written to the farmer the boy names, but no reply has yet been received. Until something is learned from that source it would appear unfair to use a farmer's name in this connection.

The boy is bright looking, cheerful, and has every appearance of being trustworthy. He helps in the kitchen at the Refuge and stands high in the opinions of the men. When an Examiner reporter saw him yesterday he had returned from the Adjutant's residence where he had completed some little task. Chief Howard assumes some responsibility toward the boy, and wrote Mr. Goodwill of the Children's Aid Society, who replied that he would begin an investigation into the boy's story. In the meantime, if nothing else is done, Chief Howard intends to arrange to have Ernest sent to school. Those who have seen the lad are quite interested in him, and his tale somehow finds ready acceptance due to somewhat similar occurrences credited to some farmers.

Conductors May Lose About $12.50

The Reduction May Be 10 Per Cent., and the Average Wage is $125.

With the proposed reduction in the wage schedule of 14,000 men in the operating department of the Grand Trunk system, announced to take effect on April 1, the following figures of rates of pay of trainmen and engineers, one of the few services involved in the reduction, is interesting. Although not officially admitted, it is announced from Montreal that the reduction will be 10 or 12 per cent. The effect of the reduction is compared with the present rate of wages, and the 10 per cent. rate is taken, as it is the lowest and more likely to be adopted if the wages are cut.

In the passenger service the rates per 100 miles at present and with reduction of 10 per cent. are:

Conductors—$2.68; proposed, $2.41.
Baggagemen—$1.65; proposed $1.40
Brakemen—$1.50; proposed $1.35.

The average salary for a month for regularly assigned trainmen is:

Conductors—$125; new rate, $112.50
Baggagemen — $75.00; new rate, $67.50.
Brakemen—$70; new rate, $63.

Through freight service, per 100 miles:

Conductors—$3.63; proposed, $3.27.
Brakemen—$2.42; proposed, $2.18.

Local freight service:

Conductors—$3.97; proposed, $3.59.
Brakemen—$2.70; proposed $2.43.

Yard service, rate per day:

Foreman—$3.70; proposed, $3.33.
Helper—$3.40; proposed, $3.06.

Night work 20c higher than day rate.

Engineers in both passenger and freight service average from $110 to $150 per month, according to their run and calibre of train. They would be reduced to $99 and $135.

Senior firemen's earnings average from $57 to $85 per month, according to the class of train. Junior firemen, men who are six months or less in the service, earn from $48 to $71. Senior men's reductions would be $51.30 and $76.50. Junior men would be reduced $43.20 and $63.90.

The Grand Trunk, in their agreement made in Montreal on July 31st, in the dispute between the Company and its employees in train and yard service, reserve the right to change the rates and regulations upon giving 30 days' notice. The agreement with the [illegible] on April 1st. The schedule of the firemen expires on June 1st. The track men have a new agreement, effective till July 1.

Italy Indicates War Intentions

GENEVA, via Paris, Jan. 8—All Italians liable to military service in Geneva, numbering several thousand, have received notification from the Consulate to present themselves for medical examination It is stated that similar measures will shortly be taken in other towns of Switzerland. Of the 200,000 Italian residents of Switzerland it is estimated that 50,000 are liable for military service.

At Chiasso Como and other points on the frontier no Italians between the ages of 18 and 40 have been permitted to cross for the past week, while the exports of foodstuffs is strictly limited to Switzerland.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

ROUND THE STORES

A Shopping Experience at the Golden Lion—A Glimpse at the Store and an Interview With Its Proprietor

"Uncle Ebenezer says some fellers put by fer a rainy day; but, as far as he's concerned, he'd always laid his'n away fer the sunshine."

Robert Fair—the man who has made his mark on George Street as the veteran dry goods merchant of Peterborough—came to mind yesterday as one [illegible] who had copied Uncle Ebenezer's habit, and was laying "his'n away for the sunshine."

"Why, you're as busy as ever, Mr. Fair, so soon after the holidays, too."

"Not quite so busy to-day; but we have adopted Britain's motto: "Business as usual," and do not encourage any sluggishness round the Golden Lion."

When the basic conditions are right, business needs only the right kind of thoughts and the right kind of talk to make it good. Provide yourself with a sunny smile, put a good front on, look like you usually look, talk as you usually talk, and buy as you usually buy—that's good business.

We have no war—we have only peace, farms, industries—these will make us all prosperous, if we only make up our minds to accept the fact.

And, as we edged our way past other shoppers to the linen counter, you could feel that there was really no stagnation in the Golden Lion.

There are many women in Peterborough who will go nowhere else for their linens except Fair's. In fact, Fair's is looked upon as one of the most reliable firms for supplying the highest grades of Irish and Scotch linens. It was fine linen table cloths we were looking for, and that was what brought us into Fair's. We found the display, the patterns, the qualities quite equal to our requirements. In fact my friend was so taken with what she saw that she invested in some of the dainty linens to take home with her to Toronto.

After half an hour, in the suit and coat room on the second floor, we encountered Mr. Fair at the entrance to the elevator. He was in a sociable mood and was interested to know if we had got everything that pleased us. The opportunity was given to express appreciation of the samples shown and the courteous service of the sales staff.

"And you are into stock taking, already, Mr. Fair. Good way to begin the New Year."

"Yes. Every dollar you spend with us right now is an investment. Inventory season at the Golden Lion brings economies that attract shoppers back after the New Year in good numbers."

Mr. Fair is quite systematic in planning his business. He has just closed another satisfactory year and entered on his thirty-second year of successful retailing of strictly dependable goods in Peterborough. Still in the same well-known stand that he leased in the autumn of 1883. The store is one of the most central in the city, and has been enlarged at various times to suit the growth of the business. Every available space from basement to the fourth floor is utilized to its utmost extent.

Mr. Fair's life has been a busy one, and he has learned that "it is only through labour and concentrated effort, by grim energy and resolute courage, that we move on to better things." He has found time in his busy mercantile life to devote leisure moments, on behalf of the general interests of the city of Peterborough. He has been President of the Board of Trade, devoted twenty years' service on the Board of Education, is a member of the Board of the Nicholls Hospital, is a member of Peterborough's Home Guard and has always taken an active interest in civic and political affairs. Mr. Fair loves work—he is not, in the language of the street, "a quitter," but reflects the sentiments conveyed in the following spicy lines from the December Ford "Times":

"Don't talk to me, son, of crops on the bum
Or of money that's tight in the banks,
Don't tell your old Dad that business is bad
My son, that's the bunk of the cranks.

There's a few pesky guys, just chock full of lies,
Who go spreadin' the slanderous tale,
But son, don't be quittin', just stick to your knittin'
You'll get your good share of the kale."

RELATIONS AGAIN STRAINED

Special to The Examiner:

ATHENS, Jan. 8.—Graeco-Turkish relations are again strained. Apart from the position of the Greeks, whih Turkey has rendered untenable by new persecutions and exactions, there are now other causes of bitter complaint.

The naval and military attaches and the Secretaries of the Greek Legation in Constantinople have been treated as spies and shadowed wherever they go by Turkish police agents.

Greek Consuls of the Empire have been treated as though they belonged to the belligerent powers.

The Grand Vizier has made promises of redress, but the redress never comes.

This state of affairs is seriously occupying the attention of the Government.

Germans who have interests here are studiously avoiding the Graeco-Turkish rupture, and have been doing their utmost to induce the Turkish Government to give redress, but so far their endeavours have been without result.

VISITED HOSPITALS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BRIGHTON, Eng., Jan. 9.—King George and Queen Mary, accompanied by a large escort, to-day visited hospitals here which have been set aside for the reception of the wounded in the Indian expeditionary forces. The King and Queen talked at length with many of the wounded and were given an enthusiastic reception.

A very interesting part of our work is that of prevention, and in this respect a great many visits have been made, which are not included in the 40 cases mentioned. These cases are largely among children, who have been exposed to tuberculosis through death and sickness in the families; also through ignorance, improper feeding and lax in hygiene; and it is encouraging indeed to see these children improve. And what is still more encouraging is to see our tuberculosis patients return to the ranks of health. We are happy to say that we have four such cases to report from our year's work, and perhaps you can imagine what a comfort it was to one of us to receive greetings like these: "Your well patient"; and "Your happy little boy".

One of our patients has recently returned to her home in England, and one has been deported.

I have collected $51.00 for paid visits during the year.

Alongside of the actual caring for the suffering, we look forward to the time when, through proper instruction, the danger of infection will be minimized and the exaggerated fear done away with. In a great many cases there is a good deal of fear where there is no occasion for fear, and there is no fear where there ought to be. The consequence is that because of this lack of understanding of the conditions, we encounter many cases which might be called "avoidable cases," and this brings the lesson home to us most forcibly, that we need less fear and more intelligent understanding of the conditions which produce health and those which produce disease.

P. A. Mercier.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the district nurses for the capable manner in which they had performed the duties that were committed to them.

The Secretary's Report.

The Secretary's report contains the following:

The Peterborough Health Association has completed its third year of active work with very satisfactory results, as may be seen by the reports. During the past twelve months two nurses, Miss Hamilton and Miss Mercier, have been giving good and faithful service to cases of almost all kinds, while about 700 dozens of eggs (fresh), and 2,400 quarts of milk have been distributed to those patients who needed them, besides drugs and other comforts and necessaries. In the beginning of July a new branch of work was inaugurated, namely the Summer Camp for Children, which was carried on most successfully for six weeks, when it was found necessary to close it on account of the financial condition caused by the war. During the time it was in operation there were over 30 children on the roll, though they did not all go every day, and a marked improvement was observable in them owing to the out-door life, and good food. The camp was financed by special contributions given for that object, but owing to the sudden and unexpected falling off of subscriptions, there was a deficit at the end of six weeks of nearly $100, which was paid by the Association, the latter taking over the assets of the camp, in the way of furnishings, which may be valued at from $125 to $150.

Friends Who Assisted.

The camp committee was indebted to many kind friends who assisted in making it a success, particularly to the Peterborough Light and Power, and Radial Co., for the use of their building at Jackson Park; to Mr. W. H. Hamilton, who supplied the camp with groceries for the season at his own expense, to the Big Brothers' Club, for the very fine tent used; to the Parks' Committee, for permission to place said tent in Jackson's Park, and to all who contributed either in money, service, or material benefits.

The outlook for the coming year is not as bright as might be wished for, as the shadow of war is still over us all, and is preventing the Association from preparing to hold the fair in the spring, by which it was expected to raise sufficient funds to run the work for another three years. However, it is hoped that the membership may be very much increased, and that the Association may be otherwise assisted to keep up its activity. The camp was run at a cost of $60.04 a week, with our initial expense of $150 for equipment.

Supervision Committee Report.

As Secretary of the Supervision Committee I beg to submit the following report:

In the while, taking into consideration the depression under which the country is labouring, we have had a very successful and encouraging year, and those interested in the work feel more than ever the necessity for continuing it.

During the past year, the total number of calls made by the two nurses was 3,280, the amount collected being $151.75, and the number of patients visited was 206, of which 157 were general cases. Of these general cases 103 were adult medical cases, 28 obstetrical and 16 surgical cases, and the remainder children, and infants, the latter suffering mainly from improper feeding, and mal-nutrition.

The surgical cases consisted of minor operations done at home, surgical dressings, and post-operative work.

The tuberculous cases numbered 49, of which 17 were new cases. During the year several have returned to work, and as the result of proper training and care, have been enabled to remain at work.

Of these 49 cases, 43 were pulmonary and 4 surgical cases. During the year there have been 8 deaths, and at such times instruction was given as to proper disinfection, etc., and where necessary, aid in carrying out such instructions.

As in other years, nourishment such as milk and eggs was freely given where needed, also stoves, beds, blankets, linen, wearing apparel, soapstones, thermometers, Sputum-cups, absorbent cotton, and medicines were given or loaned as required.

Children's Camp.

Early in July the Children's Camp was organized, and Miss Dickson, a graduate nurse, put in charge of the children while there.

For their zeal and patience in arranging the many perplexing details of this work, great praise is especially due to Mrs. G. Scott, and Mrs. Travers, although many others helped in various ways.

Through the kindness of the Street Railway Company we were allowed the use of their buildings at the Park, and free transportation was given those coming and going in connection with the work.

Early in the morning the children were taken to the Park in a large bus and given a light lunch on their arrival. Then at noon, a good hot dinner, prepared by Mrs. Read, was given them, and another light lunch before returning home.

During the day the children played in the Park, but were compelled to rest for a definite period each afternoon, on cots placed in a large tent, which was kindly donated by the Big Brothers' Club.

Instruction was given as to sanitary care of the teeth, each child being provided with a tooth-brush by Dr. Middleton.

The total number of children at the camp was 48, their ages ranging from 5 to 14 years.

These children were taken largely from homes where some member was suffering from tuberculosis, or the children themselves were suffering from surgical tuberculosis, but no case with an open lesion was allowed, so that no child would be exposed to danger.

This branch of the work was very much appreciated by parents, as was shown by the numerous requests to have their children taken, and since by the letters of appreciation received.

All the children showed marked improvement, some gaining as much as 5 and 6 pounds in weight.

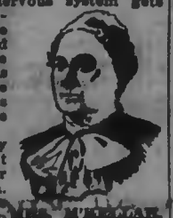
Unfortunately owing to the declaration of war, which caused a marked falling off in donations, the camp had to be closed on August 15th. Since then nothing new has been undertaken, except the regular work.—F. Neal, Secretary Supervision Committee.

The following executive committee was appointed and empowered to elect officers for the ensuing year:

Dr. Mann, Dr. Cameron, Dr. Neal, Dr. McNulty, Dr. McPherson, Dr. Halliday, Rev. Father Phelan, E. A. Peck, W. H. Dunsford, G. W. Powell, F. D. Kerr, Mrs. Kendry, Mrs. V. Eastwood, Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, Mrs. J. G. Scott, Mrs. Gardner, Mrs. Travers, and Miss M. Dickson.

Twitching of the Nerves Broken-down System

Now Entirely Cured—Never Used Any Medicine With Such Benefit as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.



Headaches, sleeplessness and nervousness are often very disagreeable, but when your nervous system gets into such a condition that the nerves twitch and jerk, and you have peculiar nervous sensations come over you there is cause for grave alarm.

Everybody dreads the thought of paralysis or locomotor ataxia. Nothing so appalling to look forward to than helplessness. Sometimes it is helplessness of body, and at other times the mind is affected, which is far worse.

The writer of this letter did not know what to expect, but fortunately began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in time to head off danger, and writes that she was entirely cured of the old trouble. The last paragraph proves that the cure was lasting.

Mrs. John McKellar, 11 Barton street east, Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I was injured some years ago, and that left me with a broken-down nervous system. I could not sleep, and suffered from twitching of the nerves and disagreeable nervous sensations.

"I then began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that I never used any medicine that did me so much good; in fact, I am entirely cured of my old trouble. The Nerve Food not only strengthened the nerves, but also built up my system in every way."

Under more recent date Mrs. McKellar writes confirming her cure, and states that she has had inquiries from many people who had heard of the great benefits she obtained from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

War Cannot Slaughter MORE VICTIMS THAN PNEUMONIA.

Pneumonia is described as a preventible disease if taken in time.

Pneumonia is the scourge of the able-bodied men and women "a little run down perhaps" but strong in the belief that they can fight off a cold. Colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate.

On the first sign of a cough or cold, our advice to you is "GET RID OF IT."

The slight cold, the irritating cough, the tightness of the chest, if not attended to, will sooner or later develops into some serious lung or bronchial trouble.

GET A BOTTLE OF
DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

and you will find after the first two or three doses have been taken the cough or cold will quickly disappear.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; the price, 25c and 50c.

Be sure you see that the name of The T. Milburn Co., Limited, appears on both the label and wrapper.

Mrs. Edward Hugo, Moose Jaw, Sask., writes: "My little girl, three years old, contracted a bad cold which settled on her lungs, and turned into pneumonia, and she was given up by our doctor. I decided to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and in two days the fever left her, and in a few days more she was well again. I will always keep a bottle of "Dr. Wood's" in the house."

Want Pensions For Mothers.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—An amendment to the Industrial Disputes Act, old age pensions, pensions for mothers, greater safeguards for men employed in transport work and other important concessions will be among the reforms demanded by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, which will wait upon Sir Robert Borden on Jan. 15. The unemployed problem will also be dealt with and a scheme projected for its solution.

Mercier Centre of Interest.

LONDON, Jan. 9. — The reported arrest of Cardinal Mercier, Primate of Belgium, continues to attract attention. The Germans explain that he was not arrested, but that he was requested to refrain from inciting the populace of Belgium. The Dutch newspaper which first published the report of the cardinal's arrest insists, however, on the correctness of its correspondent's statement and says that even now Cardinal Mercier is not permitted to leave Malines.

Adriatic Port for Servia.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—The Temps correspondent at Milan telegraphs: "I learn from a reliable source that Italy and Servia have signed an agreement whereby the latter will obtain a port on the Adriatic."

Trades and Labour Notes

There was a good attendance at this week's meeting of the Trades and Labour Council. President J. J. Hartley called the delegates to order promptly at eight o'clock.

Mr. Burnham is Active

Regarding the truth of the statement contained in the last report of the Trades and Labour Council, anent the payment of $1 per day to mail carriers' assistants, Mr. Burnham set himself the task of investigation. The Deputy-Postmaster's reply was that to help out the Christmas rush four additional hands were at $2 per day were secured, and Boy Scouts or boys at $1 per day to assist the mail carriers in their deliveries were employed.

As one delegate remarked, there were some good old-fashioned youths to be seen on the job during the holiday.

Mr. Burnham thanked the Trades and Labour Council for pointing out this apparent discrepancy, and suggested that anything else of a similar nature coming under their notice he would be pleased to have his attention drawn thereto.

Hamilton's Council on the Job.

That ever vigilant body, the Hamilton Trades and Labour Council, are taking steps to remove a stumbling block from the path of the progressive and intelligent labour man. It is busy getting together a deputation to wait on the Provincial authorities at Toronto to argue away the supposed necessity of a property qualification for aspirants to municipal honors. The Peterborough delegate was not appointed this week, as it was thought better to choose from the new officers at the next meeting.

The Free Labour Bureau.

A lengthy communication regarding the establishment of Free Labour Bureaus had one very important section, and that was that not enough noise was being made over this proposition by labour men. The council started its share of required noise by asking its energetic secretary, Wm. Stevens, to communicate with various members of the Cabinet.

Hear Both Sides.

President Hartley announced that the manager of the Auburn Woollen Mills wished to speak to the council regarding the reported injustice to workmen at the factory. In view of the fact that no representative of the committee called on to investigate the abuses complained of was present, this was deferred to a future meeting.

Election of Officers.

The annual election of officers will take place on Wednesday, Jan. 20th, when it is hoped that all delegates will be present and ready to accept office.

What a "Read Call" Means.

The above is a technicality and is probably not understood by all. It means that the officials of the local International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees inform their fellow-unionists travelling with the shows that the management of the Grand Opera House is antagonistic, consequently the men do not work.

Nicholls Drops Card.

Boss Barber Nat. Nicholls surrendered his card a few weeks back. He is also cutting prices same time as he cuts hair.

Prize-Winner Congratulated.

Delegate G. R. Myland was handed a pungent one by winning second in a Made-in-Canada Ad. Contest held in connection with a labour newspaper. An essay had to be written on the reason why we should purchase made-in-Canada goods, "because they are the best," had to be the essayist's peroration undoubtedly, Mr. Myland's clever handling of same placing him second in a list of thirty.

U. S. GERMANS PROTEST.

They Declare That Secretary Bryan Is Partial to the Allies.

ELIZABETH, N.J., Jan. 9. — The resignation of Secretary of State Bryan is demanded in a set of resolutions adopted by the German-American alliance, this city, on the ground that Bryan is favoring the allies against Germany. Exportation of arms and munitions to the powers of the triple entente is condemned in strong terms.

The resolutions say that the United States' national policy is "apt not only to make a laughing stock of our country but to bring us into discredit before the entire world and to stamp us as the vassal state of England, and make our best friends, Germany and Austria-Hungary, our enemies."

The organization has a membership of some 2,400 persons, including several prominent business men.

PETERBORO' INTERMEDIATES WON EASY VICTORY OVER BELLEVILLE

Lawson Whitehead's Braves Were Badly Beaten, the Final Score Being 15 to 2—Petes Had a Great Individual Team in Action

PARK IN LIMELIGHT

The Belleville intermediates failed to provide the Petes with any serious opposition after the first period at Brock Street rink last night, and the homesters won, going away by 15 to 2. The period scores were 3 to 1, 7 to 1 and 15 to 2, and as no stage were the blue and white brigade in any danger. Belleville tried to hold them by close checking in the first period, but only succeeded in wearing themselves out, and when they caved in the last two periods the Petes were all over them, the last twenty minutes resolving into a procession.

With Pete Spratt on the line-up, and Moines on the wing, the local team had their most formidable front of the season in action. As individuals the team was brilliant all through, but there is still room for improvement in team work. More system in conjunction with the speed, stick-handling and shooting of the Petes will give them a grand team. Individually, the line-up against Belleville last night was the strongest team Peterborough has had in years, and when they get working smoothly together they will be quite some team.

Probably the most brilliant player on the ice last night was Maurice Park. He never showed more speed since he has been playing for Peterborough, and his stick handling and shooting were a big league calibre, his goal in the second period when he overtook a Belleville rush, secured the puck and went through the Belleville defence for a counter, being the finest effort of the night. Kelly was also going strong, rushing and shooting in his old time form. He fired several beauties past Levitt so fast that the Belleville net guardian never saw the rubber. Pete Spratt had his poke check working very effectively and was dangerous every time he broke away. Moines on right wing gave a good account of himself and when he rounds into shape should prove a valuable man. He has a habit of wandering away from his wing, but that can easily be corrected.

The local defence performed brilliantly. After the first period they had little to do, as a rear guard, but both Hunter and Pethick showed their class on the attack, rushing splendidly. Both work in well with the forwards and pass unselfishly. Janes was in fine form in the nets, handling the Belleville shots coolly and accurately.

Belleville tried hard in the early stages but waded on end. The two Indian players on the line-up were about the pick, the little defence man especially showing aggressiveness. Marshall, the lanky left defence player, tried hard, and Langman, the former Hamilton player, was good in the early stages. The Belleville line showed good combination for the first twenty minutes, but melted to nowhere after that.

Lou. Marsh handled the game satisfactorily.

The line-ups were as follows:

Belleville		Peterborough
Levitt	Goal	Janes
Marshall	R. Defence	Hunter
T. Brant	L. Defence	Pethick
Whalen	Rover	Spratt
Pale	Centre	Park
Langman	Right Wing	Moines
B. Brant	Left Wing	Kelly

It did not take the Petes long to break the ice, Park scoring the first goal on a neat shot from a scrimmage, in seventy seconds. A careless pass across the Peterborough nets gave Whalen a chance to even the score, two minutes afterwards, and he made the most of it, tying the score. Levitt made several nice stops, but the Petes refused to stay out. Kelly sailed down the side and whistled one through at express speed, putting the Petes again in the lead. Belleville were showing some close checking at this stage and also a pretty fair combination. They shot from outside most of the time, however, and Janes had little trouble in heading off the shots. Meanwhile the Petes were pegging along, mostly every man for himself. Spratt sent their stock up a notch when he wheeled around the Belleville touch and scored from close in. This was the last score of the period.

Hunter increased the lead early in the second period when he got away for a pretty rush, going in on top of Levitt for a neat goal. Park added another two minutes later, and the score was 5 to 1. The play was one of the most spectacular of the night. Checking back fast, Park nipped the rubber away from a Belleville forward as he was nearing the Peterborough defence, wheeled around and out-skated the visitors' forwards, wiggled through the Belleville rear guard, and tipped the rubber past Levitt. This left the score 5 to 1. B. Brant and Pethick were benched in close succession for minor offences. In four minutes Park made it 6 to 1 when he scored on a rebound after a combination rush by Kelly and Hunter.

Shortly after Park and Marshall collided in mid ice, and the big Belleville defence man retired for repairs, the locals dropping Moynes. Shortly after Kelly took Levitt's measure with a beautiful side shot, ending the score for the period.

The third period was all Peterborough. Shortly after the period opened Hunter banged in a rebound after a nice dash with Moines. Park added another on a lone rush and a scoop shot from the side. Kelly was the next to jump into the limelight. Coming up alone he hurdled Marshall's stick, and beat Levitt with a beautiful waist-high shot that the Belleville goaler never had a chance to handle. A minute later Kelly got another when he took a pass from Moines and pushed the rubber into the nets. Belleville stopped the procession long enough to score, B. Brant doing the marksmanship. Then the fun started again. Hunter opened by going behind the Belleville nets and swinging the rubber around the posts for a counter. Park broke away from the face-off and passed to Kelly and the score was 13 to 2. Hunter and Park came right back with a passing rush, and Park added another. Pethick got the Petes' last. He and Kelly worked in together, and although Pethick's first shot was turned aside. Kelly secured the rubber and passed to Pethick, who slapped the rubber through.

COBOURG JUNIORS HERE ON TUESDAY NIGHT

The next O.H.A. game is on Tuesday night, when Dick Maher's speedy little Cobourg bunch will do battle with the local Juniors. Lindsays defeat of Port Hope, last night, has turned the group race into a grand battle. All four teams are still in the hunt, but next Tuesday's battle will eliminate either Cobourg or Peterborough, so that there will be excitement all the way. The two teams had a fine tussle in Cobourg, on heavy ice, and the Lakeshore kids claim they can turn the tables if they get slippery going here. At all events the youngsters from the East will take some stopping.

The local team are keen to redeem themselves for their poor showing against Port Hope. They know they were away off colour and are anxious to show the home town fans that they know something about hockey. It should be a great little Junior game.

Picton Won From Oshawa

The Pirates Keep Up Their Winning Streak in League Race

OSHAWA, Jan 8—When Picton defeated Oshawa here to-night in an O.H.A. intermediate hockey game everybody was satisfied the best team won. It was the first time these two teams had ever met, and the game was looked forward to with great interest, and the largest crowd of the season turned out to see the game. It was by far the best exhibition of hockey seen here this season.. It was fast, exciting and clean hockey from start to finish. The first two periods were evenly and keenly contested the first ending 1 to 0 in favour of Oshawa. In the second period both teams made many brilliant rushes, both in team play, and Hubbs, for Picton, and Freeman, for Oshawa, individually; but the two goal tenders were both on the job and stopped many dangerous shots. Only two goals were scored in this period, both going to Picton.

In the third period Picton broke loose and outplayed their opponents, scoring four more goals to Oshawa's one, the final score being 6 to 2, in favour of Picton. The checking was heavy, but Referee Jack Moxon of Toronto had very few offenders to penalise. During the game three Picton men had to be put off, but much to the credit of the home team, they went through the game witout having one player ruled off. Picton has a well-balanced team of clever stickhandlers, and should easily win the district championship. The teams:

Referee—Jack Moxon, Toronto.

PORT HOPE DEFEATED

Lindsay Juniors Did the Trick and Group Race Has Tightened Up

LINDSAY, Jan. 8.—A large crowd gathered at the Lindsay Street Skating Rink to-night and witnessed a fast and exciting O.H.A. game between the Port Hope juniors and Lindsay Juniors, the home team winning by 6 to 2. The line-up:

Lindsay—Goal, Loughlin; defence, Sandercock, Flavelle; rover, C. Carew; centre, McElroy; wings, Griffis, A. Carew.

Port Hope — Goal, Edmunds; defence, Thompson, Darch; rover, Cameron; centre, Hills; wings, Rowden, Lowe.

OLD COUNTRY SOCCER GOSSIP

Derby County have far and away the finest defence in Division II.

No fewer than 30 of the Everton's League goals have been scored by Bobby Parker and Clennel.

Lawrence saved Derby from defeat at Bristol two weeks ago.

Fred. Mearns, the ex-Barnsley goalie, is now manager of a billiard saloon in Sunderland.

Cuggy, Hobson, Holley and Low, four of Sunderland's best players, are on the injured list.

James Hodge is Manchester United's only "ever present."

Chelsea possess one of the greatest outside rights of the day in Ford. He is a local lad and cost the club nothing.

Bentley and Jephcott are the only unmarried men in the Albion League team.

No half-back in the country is playing better than Brennan, Manchester City's amateur.

Bobby Parker of Everton, has now scored 20 goals up to date. Only half of the season has yet gone.

The Foresters are not pulling up many trees.

It is to be hoped that sponsors of the new battalion will see their scheme crowned with success, and that they will be enabled to recruit several battalions for the great work that is before the nation ere the might of Germany is broken.

Albert Shepherd, the whilom Newcastle United centre-forward, was in great shooting form for Bradford City against West Bromwich Albion. He scored three of the five goals by which the Albion were beaten at Valley Parade.

Frank Buckley, of Bradford City, has joined the new Footballers' Battalion. He had previous military experience as a sergeant-instructor in the Second Battalion, King's Liverpool Regiment.

Certainly the weather has been vile in some of the recent matches, but when the climatic conditions are more favourable it is to be hoped that the football public will give the club a fair measure of support, otherwise it will be difficult to keep going.

There are certainly more cheerful places than the North Derbyshire town on a bad day.

HOCKEY

The Petes play in Belleville on Monday night. They must win there to keep their place in the League race.

And Picton trimmed Oshawa right in Oshawa. That means the Petes must do the same. This Picton team is travelling and the clash with them at Brock Street Rink next Friday night will be the hockey event of the season.

The group standing is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	To P'y.
Picton	4	0	6
Peterborough	2	1	7
Whitby	2	1	7
Oshawa	2	2	6
Bowmanville	1	3	6
Belleville	0	4	6

Lindsay trimmed Port Hope Juniors last night, 6 to 2, and now there will be a merry old battle for the group honours. Every one of the four teams is still strictly in the running, and the cock Ontarios, who were already planning for the second round, will have to climb down out of the clouds and battle all the way. The Lindsay gang are on their heels and the young Peterites full of fight and sailing right after them. Here is the group standing:

	Won.	Lost.	To P'y
Port Hope	2	1	3
Peterborough	1	1	4
Lindsay	1	1	4
Cobourg	0	1	5

Every Peterborough Junior player is requested to be at Brock Street Rink on Monday night, at 7 o'clock, for practice.

SLID DOWN ON ENEMY.

French Alpinists Charged the Germans on Skis.

ST. DIE, Department of Vosges, Jan. 9.—A brilliant exploit by French Alpine troops, who charged on skis down the snow-covered mountain slopes at Bonhomme, a post on the Alsatian frontier, forced the Germans to retire on Orbey, five miles down the valley of the River Meuse toward Colmar.

A strong German detachment with quick-firers held a road. The French advanced on foot within range, while the Alpine troops began to climb the heights to attack the Germans on their flank. Many of the climbers rolled down the steep slopes, leaving crimson stains behind. The survivors pushed forward until they gained the shelter of the pines at the summit.

Then began an exciting charge. The Alpine soldiers on their skis slid down the mountainside at a dizzy pace, while the infantry in the road below opened fire on the Germans.

Caught between two fires, the Germans gave way.

C. G. E. Boys Are Grateful

The following letter has been received from the C.G.E. Squad at McNab's Island, Halifax:

R.C.E. Camp, McNab's Island, Halifax.
The Secretary, The Women's War Fund Committee, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Madam,—Permit me to extend to the ladies of the War Fund Committee our most hearty thanks for the excellent gloves sent to us at Christmas. The gift is certainly most appropriate and useful. They are wonderfully warm, match well our khaki uniforms, and form a striking addition to our dress while "walking out." The gloves are very much appreciated by all.

Again thanking you for your thoughtfulness.—I am, very sincerely yours,
H. S. McKown,

To Replace Cotton With Grains.

MILK VENDOR FINED $2.00

Filled Bottle With Milk In an Alley

For keeping milk for sale and which milk was not put into bottles in the milking shed, contrary to by-law No. 1795 of the City of Peterborough, E. Metcalfe, a local milk vendor, was fined $2.00 in the Police Court this morning by Magistrate Dumble. The accused pleaded guilty to the offence and did not appear in Court this morning.

Sanitary Inspector Spence caught the offending milkman in the act of filling some bottles in an alley on Wednesday, January 6. He has been watching for a like offence for some time, as he has been under the impression that some of our milk was not properly bottled. Mr. Spence remarked to an Examiner reporter this morning that this was the first time he had prosecuted a milkman in three years.

Magistrate Dumble in referring to the case, said the object of the statute was to secure the filling of the bottles in a place free from dirt and dust, and where the bottles would be all newly washed. The fine was not very heavy but would serve as a warning to others who may be jeopardizing the health of our citizens in a like manner.

PRESENTATION TO REV. MR. SAWERS

By the Boy Scouts of the City Last Evening.

A pleasing feature of the Sunday school entertainment at St. Luke's last evening was the presentation to Rev. Mr. Sawers by the Boy Scouts of the city, of a handsome study reading lamp. The following address was read by Assistant Scoutmaster Victor Sedgwick and Assistant Scoutmaster Horace Blake made the presentation:

Peterborough, Ont., Jan. 5, 1915.

Rev. F. J. Sawers, Scoutmaster, City of Peterborough:

Dear Mr. Sawers,—It was with feelings of deep regret that we learned of your intended departure from Peterborough to Cobourg. At the same time we rejoidce to know your ability has been recognized by offering you a larger sphere of work, which no doubt will prosper and grow under your careful oversight and management.

Since you have been connected with the Boy Scout movement at Peterborough, it has progressed splendidly, having filled some important positions, one has participating in the reception of His Highness the Duke of Connaught on his recent visit to this city. We felt we could not allow you to take your departure from our midst without voicing our appreciation for the military instructions imparted, which has added to the building of our bodies, strengthening of our character, assisting in making us good and faithful citizens of the community in which we live. On behalf of the Boy Scouts, we ask you to accept this small token of our appreciation and esteem, and wish Mrs. Sawers and yourself many bright, happy and prosperous New Years in your new field of labour.

Signed on behalf of the Boy Scouts,
Victor Sedgwick,
Horace Blake,
Assistant Scoutmasters.

Rev. Mr. Sawers thanked the Scouts for their kind remembrance, wishing them continued success in their splendid endeavours.

ANOTHER BLUNDER.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I think the City Fathers made a terrible blunder when they chose "Hydro" Johnston as Finance Minister. It cost this City a handsome sum to send a large deputation to Ottawa to learn that General Hughes was in the Hospital with a bad knee, when one cent, for a copy of any newspaper, would have done the trick. However, the boys, I understand, from a lady who arrived from Ottawa on the same train, had a "happy time".

I understand that Mr. Johnston and his colleagues were bent on making this trip regardless of expense.

Yours truly,
"Happy Days."

Heavy Fighting Continues In Alsace

16,000 Austrians Taken Prisoners Since Dec. 25th

Germans Heavily Reinforced Along The Vistula—Are Preparing Another Assault On Russian Positions —Another Clash In Poland Coming

PETROGRAD, Jan. 11.—Both sides in Poland seem to be gathering their forces for another general clash and there has been little serious fighting since Saturday, according to latest reports received here.

The Germans have been heavily reinforced and all information obtainable here indicates that they are preparing for a frontal assault in force of teh Russian Vistula river positions. Up to the present, however, the fighting has not developed any great strength. Elsewhere on the battle front the situation shows little change.

16,000 AUSTRIAN PRISONERS.

It is reported that since Christmas 16,000 Austrian prisoners, including 250 officers, of whom forty were colonels, have arrived at Kieff.

Russians Cut Off Hungary From Roumanian Frontiers

PETROGRAD, Jan. 10—The recent Russian victories in Bukowina and the occupation of Radauts and Suczawa (Bukowina) enables the Russians, in their positions on the banks of the Tisza, Sereth and Moldave Rivers, to cut off Roumania entirely from Austria Hungary. This is the situation as outlined in despatches received in Petrograd from the front.

This position of the Russians considerably alters the military and diplomatic situation, military men say, since the yielding of Transylvania to Roumania no longer depends upon Austro-Hungary, and any possibility of the latter invading the Russian southern provinces of Volhynia and Bessarabia through Transylvania are now destroyed.

The question of Roumania's future attitude, that is, whether she will join the allies, is now also less important, it is asserted, because the victorious Russian armies, in their wedge-like position between Roumania and Austria-Hungary, would paralyze any hostile action of either against Russia.

AUSTRIAN EMPEROR'S INTIMATION

ROME, Jan. 10.—Despatches from Vienna telling of an audience given yesterday to members of the Galician nobility by the Emperor Francis Joseph state that the Emperor's reply to questions asked on that occasion regarding peace are considered to be most significant. In speaking of an honorable and long lasting peace, compensating for present sacrifices, he said that his efforts were being directed to ending the war at the earliest moment possible.

DESPERATE FIGHTING IN ALSACE

French Fortress Crowded With Prisoners—Report Says Germans Have Vacated Lille—Important Town Near Rheims Taken

LONDON, Jan. 11.—A despatch to the Daily Express from Boulogne asserts that confirmation has been obtained of the rumours that the Germans have evacuated Lille and that the City is now virtually in the possession of the British.

Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 10—The struggle in Alsace continues in spite of the heavy rains. There is more than a foot of water in the trenches. The Germans have already lost in killed and wounded 60,000 men, according to reliable reports, and Belfort, the great French fortress, is filled with prisoners, men mostly forty years of age or more.

At Basil and Felle, 12 miles southeast of Belfort, the firing of heavy guns is heard night and day. The fighting around Cernay is becoming more desperate daily, the Germans having constructed miles of trenches in the meadows and forest.

Steinbach has been taken and retaken six times by conflicting armies. Steinbach is now in the hands of the French.

Perthes Captured.

The allies have finally succeeded in capturing the town of Perthes, between Rheims and the Argonne forest, for which a bitter contest has been waged during the past two weeks. The communique issued by the War Office in announcing this achievement admitted that the Germans have succeeded in retaking Burnhaupt-le-Haut, in Upper Alsace, which the French troops captured, Thursday.

The occupation of Perthes was the culmination of a brilliant engagement begun by the Germans, who launched a severe attack on the French positions south of the town. When this effort was checked the French launched a counter attack from "Hill 200" and drove the Germans from 400 metres on the outskirts of the town. Continuing the offensive the French finally gained possession of Perthes itself. The net advance in this movement was 500 metres.

GERMAN BAKERS CRY AGAINST NEW RULES

Half of Berlin Breadmakers Depend on Flour Merchants' Credit.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 10.—The new German bread regulations have provoked a universal outcry from the bakers. Chief Baker Schmidt, who was formerly with the Crown Prince at the front, says that nearly half of the Berlin bakeries depend on credit given by the flour merchants. If their earnings are reduced the bakers will have to rely entirely upon the good-will of the merchants. It is expected that over 100 bakeries will be closed, throwing out of employment 2,000 men and 12,000 distributors.

English celluloid workers have found ways to utilize the shavings and scraps of the material in making certain articles.

Something on the order of the pushmobile is a new vehicle for children that is propelled by a rider walking upon a treadmill.

General Engagement Preparing In The Neighborhood Of Soissons

PARIS, Jan. 11.—Fighting along the Aisne, and especially in the vicinity of Soissons, is to-day rapidly taking on proportions of a general battle.

In an endeavour to regain lost territory the Germans are bringing up additional troops from the rear and are also bringing into action additional artillery.

The fact that Soissons has been used as British headquarters is believed here to be the reason for thebombardment now in progress.

TESTING THE ALLIED LINE.

The Germans are also reported to be active in the Champagne region and in Argonne, but their movements here are believed to be in the nature of attempts to feel out the French lines for a weak spot.

It is unofficially stated that there has been no actual change in the situation in Alsace. The fresh troops are slowly getting into action, but combination of snow, rain and mist has interferred with rapid movements. Both sides have lost very heavily.

Clock in Bomb Shelter Strikes, Then Stops, As Shell Ploughs Up Ground

German Gunners Sit "Like Dumb Brutes" For Days While French Artillery Shells Their Position

MUNICH, December 25.—Life in an artillery emplacement is exciting. Men so stationed are subjected to gun fire which never before has reached such an average of accuracy, and at times must protect themselves against the attacks of the enemy's aviators.

In a letter just published here this is well illustrated. After dwelling on the comforts of the bombproof cave in which the men of the battery dwell—in which they even have tables, chairs, lounges and a stove—the writer continues as follows, the shifting tenses being his:

"A tremendous black column of earth rises from the ground as the shells strike near us. The clock in our cave strikes as if scared out of its wits, and then stops. Everything trembles and shakes. The dry earth on the sides of the bombproof peels off and falls.

"We sit quietly—waiting for the shell that will bury us. One after another falls close by, but the one we wait for does not come. The enemy's battery has fired five shots and now stops.

"An hour later the bombardment started again. We sat there like paralyzed. On the table a cigar burned a hole in a glove. Nobody had sense or ambition enough to prevent it.

"When the bombardment was over everybody felt a peculiar sort of fatigue. All conversation ceased. One of the men left his seat and wearily threw himself upon the straw bed. Before he went to sleep he turned over and whispered:

"'Call me!'

PARTRIDGE PIE CHEERED SQUAD.

"The worst of it was that we were not permitted to return the fire. No doubt the division staff had its good reasons for that. Things would be different had we been able to return shot for shot. We would have been of the best spirits in that case. But to sit there, like dumb brutes, and wait for orders under such a fire was a bad experience.

"The day passed in this manner. The enemy's fire ceased at seven o'clock in the evening, and, after a meal of bacon, bread and coffee made of cereals we felt better. A partridge pie, which my mother had sent me, helped to cheer us up.

"Next morning at five the order: 'Ready for fire!' came by telephone. 'Man the guns—distance 2,100 yards—shell, fire,' said the voice at the other end of the wire. Though it was still dark, we heard from the distance the thrashing of infantry fire.

"Our shells shriek and whistle across the plain. 'Shot well placed—battery salves—every ten seconds—distance now 2,200 yards' telephoned the observation officer.

"The fun commences. It is hard work. Perspiration rolls off us like the rain, which has just commenced to fall.

"But the enemy's motor battery also starts again. The first shell hits near our position. The second one hits the bombproof we had been located. A veritable sea of explosions surrounds us—lightning detonations, crashes, shrieks, smoke and powder stench give our environment the appearance of the crater of a volcano. We are covered with mud which the enemy's shells throw up and which descends on us like hail.

GUNNER DID NOT MOVE.

"'2, 175,' I shouted at the gunner, but he did not move.

"'Fischer!' was my next shout. At that moment the body of the gunner slipped between the seat and the sighting mechanism. I noticed that a fragment of shell had entered his forehead.

"Gently we placed the body to one side, and another gunner took the seat. We continued our fire—calmly, steadily—in our minds saw the destruction wrought by our shells in the lines of the enemy's infantry.

"So it continued for some time; then came from the observation station the command: 'Cease fire for a while.'

"In the afternoon another shell hit our position, and another man had to be laid aside. He was a lovable old fellow. Later we buried the two.

"Rain fell throughout the night and next day. By noon our bombproof was filled with water. We waded around in that up to our waists. Later in the day the bombproof caved in, and we saved nothing but the telephone instrument, our carbines and coats. We then spent some time in the cellar of a nearby farmhouse, and to-morrow we go back for a rest. Our place will be taken by a reserve regiment, with wonderfully clean uniforms and brand new brown boots. Our uniforms have all the colours of the rainbow on a mud yellow background."

Turkish Corps For Egypt on Camels

LONDON, Jan. 10.— "The eighth Turkish army corps has left Damascus for the Egyptian frontier, well armed, provisioned and provided with 8,000 camels for crossing the desert," says a despatch from the Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company. The message continues: "It is reported from Beirut that all French and Greek subjects have been taken to Damascus. Two British subjects have been taken to Damascus in chains because of an effort to escape."

The Turks are hastening the construction of three railway lines across the Sinai Peninsula, according to a despatch to the Rome Giornale D'Italia from its Cairo correspondent. According to this report the Turks expect to be ready for an invasion of Egypt by the second fortnight in February. It is stated that Turkish and German emissaries are promising Egypt complete independence.

OVER FOUR THOUSAND BRITISH OFFICERS LOST

Startling List of Casualties—Three Regiments Especially Hard Hit.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Great Britain has lost, since the war began, a total of 1,146 officers killed and 2,220 wounded. In addition there are 650 officers reported as missing. These are the figures contained in the officers' casualty list for the last thirteen days given out to-day:

During this period of nearly two weeks the losses were 90 officers killed, 146 wounded and 48 missing. The heaviest casualties were recorded in the Warwickshire Regiment, with seven killed, two wounded and three missing; the Munster Fusiliers, six killed, three wounded and two missing; the Rifle Brigade, three killed, six wounded and two missing, and in the Highland Light Horse, with six officers killed, one wounded and three missing.

Letters From The Trenches

CRUCIFIX UNDAMAGED.

The following is an eye-witness's account of the dropping of a bomb on the hospital at Bailleule:

We had a bomb here yesterday. I heard it fall, and went out to look and saw the German aeroplane sailing away. It fell into a portion of the clearing hospital, about 150 yards from here. The hospital was in a college with a chapel attached to it. The room the bomb fell in was a library; it came through the roof and ceiling and burst where there were only two sick or wounded and two orderlies. It killed one man and wounded two and made hay of the library. I went and had a look at it. The ceiling was all torn to ribbons; every window near was smashed, including the stained-glass windows of the chapel, which were on a level with the roof of the library; the stove pipes, which were brought down, were piereced with bullets and fragments; the walls had many marks on them; but a large crucifix on the wall was absolutely untouched. When I went in an old priest was examining the books in the windowless bookshelves and an old nursing sister was shaking her head as she examined the blankets and remains. It is lucky it did not fall where it was probably intended to, on the headquarters of one of the corps or in the square full of motor lorries and people.

GERMAN AIM POOR.

Drummer Sullivan, of the Honourable Artillery Company, writing home to his relatives in Tottenham, says:

I am writing this while I am in a trench. There isn't much excitement. The big guns on either side are blazing away at each other, but the German guns don't seem to have much effect. It's a treat to see them firing up at our aeroplanes, which dodge them quite easily. We keep our heads well down in the trenches because of snipers, who seem to be everywhere. We get to our trenches by night, which is a trying job, because the roads are icy, and the fields are covered with snow, which makes us more visible to the enemy. . . . We may be in the trenches all day without firing a shot.

One of our fellows has just been hit through the shoulder by a sniper They cannot reach me, because I am in my little office all on my own.

The big guns have started again. Another man hit! Getting a bit hot!

I will now continue. I had to give it up when one of my mates got hit through the forehead. Poor chap! he is still alive. Nothing much can be done for a wounded man till nighttime, and then he is carried about two miles to the nearest dressing station.

TRAIN WRECK IN GERMANY KILLS MANY SOLDIERS ON WAY TO FIGHT FRENCH—An express train running at high speed and carrying many soldiers who had recovered from their wounds sufficiently to allow them to return to the French battlefields, was wrecked near Stendal when it ran into the rear of a freight train. Many of the soldiers were killed or mortally injured.

GERMAN AIR FLEET BOMBARDED DUNKIRK

PARIS, Jan. 10.—A despatch to the Havas Agency from Dunkirk says that a dozen German aeroplanes bombarded Dunkirk and environs Sunday. Thirty bombs were thrown by the airmen, but owing to the precautions that had been taken, there were few victims. The material damage was unimportant.

"BUY IT NOW," AS BUSINESS SLOGAN

Agricultural Publishers' Association Starts Campaign to Quicken Necessary Purchasing.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 11.—A nation-wide campaign to assist in the revival of business activity, with the slogan "Buy it now," has been launched here by the Agricultural Publishers' Association, a national association of farm papers.

Briefly, the movement purposes to quicken commercial and manufacturing lines by hastening purchases which in the ordinary course of affairs must be made sooner or later. The appeal is directed particularly to the farmers, who are to be urged to buy necessary implements and materials now rather than to wait until spring.

The arrangement contemplates co-operation, which it is urged would correct unsettled conditions. It does not urge indiscriminate buying, but rather economical buying of those things which have to be bought. The committee report called attention to the fact that the farm population alone is nearly 40,000,000 and that an average expenditure of $10 would place more than $400,000,000 in circulation.

GENERALS TELL KAISER TO LET THEM RUN WAR

LONDON, Jan. 11.—A correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphs that the generals of the German staff in Berlin have advised the Emperor to cease interfering with the strategy of the campaign.

The German Government, the correspondent adds, is about to issue another war loan of $800,000,000.

Third Fire In Two Years Looks Suspicious

COBOURG, Jan. 10.—A fire of mysterious origin occurred at Colbourne when in the early morning the interior of Lemon Bros.' store was found to be in flames. The fire was discovered by Mr. W. Peters, who occupied the rooms above the store, and who quickly gave the alarm. A hastily formed bucket brigade rendered valuable assistance, and the flames were in time subdued, but not before the stock was badly damaged by heat, smoke and water.

The lock was forced from the account register, and it is believed that someone had entered the building after Mr. Lemon left it, shortly after 12 o'clock the night before. Chief Jamieson is said to have passed shortly after 3 o'clock, when everything was apparently all right. About 3:45 the fire was discovered. It is understood that Inspector Reburn has the matter in hand. Within two years the firm have suffered from two other fires, which were suspected of being incendiary.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

It seemed to her that he must read their message. "For all this I challenge you," but his eyes did not shift nor alter.

Through it all; through the singsong drone of Brother Talbott's "discourse"; through the whining falsetto of their hymn-singing, even through the thud of clod on casket, one impression seemed printing itself ineffaceably on her brain. It was an impression of guns.

With the scorched green behind them, with the red and blue calico and the hodden gray of their clothing, there was colour enough, yet the most insistent note of the picture was the dull gleam of their rifles. The one scrupulously clean and modern note, too, was in the condition and pattern of their weapons.

Men might go unshaven and unwashed, but their arms were greased and polished and they came to the funeral under arms—for the history of to-day might repeat the history of yesterday.

After that was over, and after it had been decided that the widow was to take the younger children up Meeting House Fork to dwell with a brother, the missionary and the teacher started back. Jeb was to stay here alone to run the farm, and when Juanita returned to the ridge Dawn went with her.

Juanita had insisted on this. She could not bear to think of her little protegee losing herself in the uncouth environment of the "branch-water folks"; and she could not bear to think of losing the influence she had won over the child just at the transitory period of life where influences were so vital.

So when they turned back Dawn sat perched on a pillion behind Good Anse Talbott, and Jeb, watching his family separate in two directions, leaned a solitary figure on the stile and twisted his bare toes in the hot dust. He gazed staringly at the blistered weeds, and on his face sat murder in the making. The reflections that were to be his companions in solitude, were thoughts that would rankle and spur him to his sorry destiny.

Perhaps it was the misery in Juanita Holland's eyes that elicited from the missionary, after a long and silent ride, an abrupt question.

"Wall, ma'am, hev ye done got enough? Does ye still aim ter tarry in these parts?"

She looked up and besides the bewilderment and pain in her clouded pupils there was also the hurt as if of an accusation of cowardice. "Tarry!" she exclaimed, "of course. Why shouldn't I stay?"

"Wall," his weary eyes went gazing off up the slopes, "I reckon ye hain't hardly had a good time up hyar, an' hit's mightly liable ter git wuss. Ye see, ye've done made Anse Havey mad, an' hit looks right smart like ye're takin' a heap of pains fer nothin'!"

"For nothing!" She wondered if it were for nothing. Others might "warn" her for purposes of intimidation; their gloomy prophecies might be inspired, but from the sad, world-weary lips of Brother Anse and the tired soul in his tired body would come no false message. "Do you believe it's for nothing, Brother Anse? Haven't you given your life to it? Has it all been vain? Do you regret it?"

Very slowly and wearily he shook his head. "No, but I was born amongst 'em an' God laid this work on me ter chasten me an' give me a chanst ter live down my iniquities. I didn't hev no choice an' yit sometimes—" He paused and added in a dead voice, "Sometimes hit seems mightily like I hain't accomplished nothin'. They liatens ter me, but they goes right back an' sheds blood ergin. Hit's born in 'em an' when they dies they passes hit down ter their children."

"I hoped," she told him with gentle reproach, "that you at least could see some value in my efforts; that you sympathised with them."

The missionary loked into her face and his eyes burned with the fierce fire of prophecy.

"Little gal," he said vehemently, 'hit looks ter me like ye're a plumb saint sent by Almighty God, but I kain't b'ar ter see yore heart broke. Hit's a young heart an' these mountings will shorely break hit. They're too big an' men like Anse an' Milt will stop ye. God knows I wants ter see ye stay, but God knows I counsels ye ter go."

"I'll stay," she said simply.

After that they rode in silence until Dawn from her pillion spoke for the first time. They were passing a tumbling waterfall, shrunken now to a trickling rill. On each side loomed huge sentinels of moss-covered rock.

"Onct when I war a leetle gal," she said, "Unc' Perry war a-hidin' out up thet branch from ther revenuers. I used ter fotch his victuals up thar ter him."

Juanita turned suddenly with a shocked expression. It was as if her little song-bird friend had suddenly and violently reverted as if the flower had turned to poison weed. And as Juanita looked, Dawn's eyes were blazing and Dawn's face was as dark as her black hair; dark with the same expression which brooded on her brother's brow.

"What is it, dear?" Juanita asked; and in a tense and fiery voice the younger girl exclaimed:

"I wishes I war a man. I wouldn't wait and set still like Jeb's doin'. By God, I'd git thet murderer. I'd cut his heart outen his body."

"I take ye," quietly mused Brother Anse, "that ther instinct's in ther blood. Anse Havey went down ter Frankfort an' set in ther Legislater—but he came back ther same man thet went down. Somethin' called him. Somethin' calls ter every mountain man that goes away, an' he hearkens ter ther call."

"Anse come back," repeated Dawn triumphantly. "An' Anse is hyar. Ef Jeb sets thar an' don't do nothin' I reckon Anse Havey won't hardly pass hit by without doin' nothin'. Thank God thar's some men left in ther hills like Anse Havey. . . but ef Jeb don't do nothin' and Anse don't do nothin' I'll do hit myself."

Again Juanita shuddered, but it was not the time for argument, and so she went on, bitterly accusing Anse Havey in her heart for his wizard hold on these people; a hold which incited them to bloodshed as the fanatical priest of the desert urge on their wild tribesmen.

She did not know that Bad Anse Havey went every few days over to the desolated cabin and often persuaded the boy to ride home with him and spend a part of the time in his larger brick house. She did not know that Bad Anse was coming nearer to lying than he had ever before come, in withholding his strong suspicions from the boy because of his unwillingness to incite another tragedy. So when one day a McBriar henchman by the name of Luke Thixton had left the mountains and gone West, Anse hoped that this man would stay away for a long while, and he refrained from mentioning to Jeb that now, when the bird had flown he knew definitely of his guilt. Proof positive had confirmed his deeply grounded suspicions too late, and he had made no effort to intercept the refugee. Now he set himself methodically about the task of guarding the boy lest his suspicions should go baying on a false trail.

While Dawn, under the guidance of her preceptress, was making the acquaintance of a new and sweeter life whose infinitudes fed her imagination and fired her quick ambition, her brother was more solemnly being moulded by the Havey chief. He was drinking in, as Anse Havey read, the lives of the men of whom Plutarch wrote and of the laws of his own State which should arm him to safeguard his timber and coal against the depredations of the foreigner. Each teacher thought of the other as an irreconcilable foe, and each had at heart without realizing it the same object. Each was striving in honesty and earnestness, to protect and strengthen the same people.

* * * * *

The water-mill of old Bob McGreeger was the nearest spot to the dwelling of Bad Anse Havey where grist could be ground to meal and sometimes when Joe came over to the brick house he would volunteer to throw upon his shoulders the sack of corn and plod with it up across the ridges. He would sit there in the dusty old mill while the slow wheel groaned and creeked and the cumbersome mill-stones did their slow stint of work.

So one day toward the end of August, Juanita, who had climbed up the path to the poplar to look over her battle-field and renew her vows, saw Jeb sturdily plodding his way in long resolute strides through the woods toward the mill, with a heavy sack upon his shoulders, and a rifle swinging at his side. His face was sullen as usual, with downcast eyes, but he did not see her, and she did not call to him as he passed on and out of sight in the sunburned woods. That day chance had it that no one else had come to mill and Bob McGreeger had persuaded the boy to drink from the "leetle blue keg" until his mind was ripe for mischief. While the mill stones slowly crushed out his meal Jeb McNash sat on a pile of rubbish in the gloomy shack, nursing his knees in interlocked fingers. Old Bob drank and stormed, and cursed the inertia of the present generation. The lad's lean fingers tautened and gripped themselves more tensely and his eyes began to smoulder and blaze with a wicked light as he listened.

"Ye looks like a right stand-up sort of a boy, Jeb, growled the old-fire-eater, who had set more than a few couples at each other's throats. "An' I reckon hit's all right, too, fer a feller ter 'bide his time, but hit 'pears ter me like ther men of these days don't do nothin' but bide ther time."

"I won't bide mine no longer then what I has ter," snapped the boy. "Anse 'lows he'll tell me when he finds out who hit war thet got my pap. That's all I needs ter know."

Old Bob McGreeger shook his head knowingly and laughed in his tangled beard. "I reckon Anse Havey'll take his leisure. He's got other fish ter fry. He's a thinkin' 'bout bigger things than yore grievance, son."

The boy rose and his voice came very quietly and ominously from suddenly whitened lips. "What does ye mean by thet, Uncle Bob?"

"Mebby I don't mean nothin' much. Then ergin mebby I could give ye a pretty good idee who kilt yore pap. Mebby I could tell ye 'bout a feller — a feller thet hain't fur removed from Old Milt Miself—thet went 'snoopin' eerost ther ridge ther same day yore pop died, with a rifle-gun crost his elbow, an' his pockets strutty with ca'tridges."

It was as if each word were a hot needle galling and irritating the obsession about which the lad's thought had been pivoting and pirouetting for weeks with nightmare grotesquerie.

The finger nails of his two hands bit into their palms and his brows drew themselves into a wrinkled mask of malevolence.

"Who war he?" came the tense demand with the sudden snap of rifle-fire. "Who war thet feller?"

Old Bob filled and lighted his pipe with fingers that had grown unsteady from the ministration of the "leetle blue keg." He laughed again in a satirical, drunken fashion.

"Ef Bad Anse Havey don't 'low ter tell ye, son," he artfully demurred, "I reckon hit wouldn't hardly be becomin' fer me ter name his name."

The boy picked up his battered hat. "Give me my grist," he said, shortly. He stood by breathing heavily, but silently while the sack was being tied, then putting it down by the door, he wheeled and faced the older man.

"Now ye're a-goin' ter tell me what I needs ter know," he said, quietly, "or I'm a-goin' ter kill ye whar ye stands."

Uncle Bob laughed. He had meant all the while to impart that ruecullent bit of information, which was no information at all, but mischief-making suspicion. He had held off only to infuriate and envenom the boy with the cumulative force of climax.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of the various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, blotches, ulcers, etc., and the only treatment you can use is some sort of a good blood cleansing remedy which will put the blood into a perfect condition, and thus eliminate all the different poisons from the system which cause these different eruptions to occur.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters. All we ask you is to try it and be convinced. Thousands have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but praise for its curative powers.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, Plantagenet, Ont., writes: "I am one woman who cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. I was covered with boils, and could not get rid of them. I was advised by a friend to try B.B.B. which I did, and I can truthfully say that it completely cured me. I have never had a sign of a boil since."

See that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as there are many imitations placed on the market which are said to be "just as good."

DYNAMITE AS A TOY

Children In Toronto Found Playing With High Explosive.

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—About ninety sticks of sixty per cent. dynamite were found yesterday in a ravine north of Danforth avenue by a number of children. They were throwing the explosive around the streets.

George Harbitt, 73 Chatham avenue, yesterday 'phoned that children were playing with dynamite not knowing what they had. Officer Mumford was immediately sent to the scene. To a ravine just north of Danforth avenue the children led him. There the recent thaw had uncovered two boxes of the explosive. The children had carried away a number of sticks, but one box was full. There were about ninety sticks in the two boxes.

From the location of the boxes, it was evident that no care had been taken in hiding them. It is thought they were taken by foreign workmen and just covered with snow.

When Mumford examined the dynamite he came to the conclusion that it was frozen. This probably accounts for the fact that none of the children were injured when throwing the explosive about.

WHAT WILL RELIEVE STOMACH TROUBLE

A Hard Question—But This Retired Ohio Farmer Answers It—Mr. Matteson's Statements Are Reliable.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"I suffered from nervous dyspepsia and stomach trouble so that large lumps would seem to come up in my throat, and would get so dizzy I could not stand up or even see. I tried different remedies but nothing seemed to help me until one day my druggist told me about Vinol. I tried it and soon noticed an improvement and now I am well."—IRA T. MATTESON, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

Vinol seldom fails to strengthen and tone up the tired, overtaxed and weakened nerves of the digestive organs and remove the cause of indigestion and soon enables the sufferer to digest with ease the foods that once caused distress. Vinol also creates a healthy appetite and builds up the weakened run-down system.

We have such faith in Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, that we ask every person in this vicinity suffering from nervous dyspepsia or stomach trouble to try Vinol on our offer to return their purchase money if it fails to benefit.

A Great Blessing to be Freed of Indigestion

For Years He Suffered After Almost Every Meal—Attributes Complete Cure to Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The experience of many people who suffer from indigestion is like that of the writer of this letter. Stomach medicines may bring some relief, but chronic indigestion is almost invariably the result of derangements of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and cannot be actually cured until these organs are set right.

MR. BARRETT.

With the liver sluggish there is constipation, and the food ferments in the bowels instead of being digested. This is the source of pain and suffering, and the cause of such dreaded diseases as appendicitis, peritonitis and kidney disease. It is much better to be on the safe side and prevent such ailments by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. J. D. S. Barrett, Nelson, B.C., and formerly of Twillingate, Nfld., writes:—"For several years I was a great sufferer from indigestion. The least bit of food caused me considerable trouble, and often I could scarcely eat a meal a day. The many remedies I tried proved futile until I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and after using about eight boxes I was completely cured.

"Since that time I have not been troubled with indigestion, which I consider a great blessing. I feel grateful for this cure, and shall gladly answer any inquiries from persons suffering as I did."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SWINE POINTERS

Hogs utilise a great deal of feed that would otherwise go to waste. Here is the secret of profitable pig raising. Profits depend on management and better management is possible with small herds.

About one man in 10,000 can take hold of a big feeding proposition and make it pay. Pigs show to best advantage as a by-product on the farm.

The plunger won't make money out of pigs. The men who make money out of pigs are the ones who stick consistently to their breeding year in and year out. When markets are high they reap the benefit. When markets are low they are not overloaded. Even at low prices hogs furnish a good market for home grown grains. Hogs go down but then eventually come up again, so stay with the business.

"Business as Usual" and "Quality Better than Usual" should be the slogan of the hog breeder and feeder to-day.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Santa Maria Derelict

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

Of all the devilish, cold blooded things done by men you will have read of few to equal what took place aboard one of the Spanish merchantmen, the Santa Maria, in the year 1902. It was published in the papers at the time, but only a partial account, and as we had war and excitement at home the incident was soon forgotten.

One of the oldest business houses in Mexico up to the date above named was that of the Spanish house of Galera & Co., founded seventy-five years previously. The business of the house was banking, mining, merchandising and cattle raising. It had a dozen branches in Mexico, and it had dealings with half a dozen countries. In a financial sense it was stronger than the government, and its yearly profits footed up an enormous sum. A son of the founder had succeeded to the management, and when old age came he turned over the active work to a cousin named Alvarez. The new manager was a young man of twenty-five, born in Spain of a fine family and had been educated for the priesthood. He was a man without a vice. Such was his probity that he was called "Holy Alvarez" even in his youth. At an enormous salary and with autocratic powers young Alvarez took over the management of affairs in Mexico, and almost as soon as he stepped foot on North American soil a change took place in his character. He began to drink, gamble and play fast and loose.

Of course there was gossip about the new manager, and there were those who predicted that his extravagances would ultimately bring ruin to the old house, but there were no official complaints. He knew little or nothing of business, but he did know how to spend money royally, and in a year he had people guessing how much longer it would take him to bankrupt the house. It was after the balance sheets had proved to him that he was spending more than the profits of the house and was a debtor to an enormous amount that he set about preparing a grand coup. The Spanish merchantman was loaded with a consignment of gold, silver, copper, furs and dyestuffs for Spain and the cargo insured to the last cent. Alvarez took into his confidence a young man named Prado, and when the Santa Maria sailed his confederate went with her as supercargo.

The ship was manned by a crew of fourteen men, all Spaniards. Thirty days after her sailing to the southward the American bark Homeward left the port of Valparaiso homeward bound. We had been out three days when we ran into a dead calm, with the weather so terribly hot that the deck planks smoked in the sun. As we lay heaving on the ground swell a small boat drifted into view. It seemed to be empty, and it had been in sight for two hours and was not over half a mile away when the captain decided to pick it up. A boat was sent off, and when she returned with the stranger we had a sad spectacle under our eyes. There was a dead man lying at full length under the thwarts.

About two days later we came up with a derelict from which the man in the boat had no doubt escaped. On board a horrible sight met us—the bodies of fourteen dead men.

The derelict was a great find to us. Her manifest showed a cargo valued at over $2,000,000, and the ship was all right above deck.

As the man got away alone and had provisioned the boat it must have been after the others were dead. He it was, then, who had brought about the wholesale death of the crew, and he must have had a strong motive. That motive was discovered when some of the boxes of treasure were hoisted out of the lazaret and broken open. Aside from one or two boxes, the whole treasure business was a fake. Lead and iron substituted for silver and gold. The furs were a cheat and a fraud, and the value of the dyestuffs was not one-quarter of the sum they were insured for. A second and closer search of the staterooms evidently occupied by the supercargo gave us the key to unlock the whole mystery. He had left behind a letter of instructions signed by Alvarez at the City of Mexico, and in that we learned that the name of the dead man was Prado.

With the auger hole plugged and a part of our crew on board the Santa Maria, we laid our course for the port of Valdivia, and in due time both craft arrived there in good shape. The dead had been given burial, of course, but there was no lack of other proofs. As soon as the plot was unraveled steps were taken for the arrest of Alvarez in Mexico, and our claim for salvage was filed. Governments move slowly in international matters. It was months before they got ready to arrest the man who had plotted this sea tragedy. He had meanwhile continued his career of dissipation and extravagance, depending upon his insurance money to make everything good. News got to him somehow from Valdivia of the derelict being towed in, and he left Mexico and hid away in Bolivia. There he was at last found, but he cheated the hangman by committing suicide.

As a plot hatched against an equal and as a tragedy of the sea one must believe that Prado was little short of a devil incarnate to sweep aside coolly the fourteen human beings who stood in his path.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GREY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Colour and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all grey hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Grey, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

Wooden Cars Must Go.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9. — Wooden cars in New York subway must go. The public service commission sent virtual notification to that effect yesterday to the Interboro Rapid Transit Co. with a request that the company inform the commission how soon and not later than May 1 next, all steel cars can be substituted for the 475 composite cars now in use.

Negro Confesses To Murder.

NORTH SYDNEY, Jan. 9. — John West, colored, has confessed to the murder of Miss Cassie Dunn. West made this statement yesterday morning and said that the motive was criminal assault. The murder was committed on Dec. 31, and was discovered shortly afterward by a boarder in the Dunn home. The body was lying in the cellar.

Turks Looking To Egypt.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Jan. 9. —A Cologne despatch says that the Turkish troops are concentrating at Jerusalem, preparing for an attack on Egypt.

According to a news agency report, nearly 200,000 Turks are reported to have assembled.

BREAD PRICE RISING.

U. S. Officials Will Probably Make an Inquiry Into Increase.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Department of Justice officials expressed interest last night in reports that the price of a loaf of bread was about to jump from five to six cents in New York, Chicago and possibly other large cities. No complaints have reached the department, however, and no action is in immediate prospect.

Attorney-General Gregory has kept a close watch upon any efforts to raise the cost of living through combinations of producers in any line, and it is considered certain that a rise in bread would be looked into at once. It is realized at the department that, with wheat far above normal figures, bakers undoubtedly have been forced to face the prospect of higher flour. Officials are interested, however, in learning whether there is any conspiracy among bakers over the country to effect a raise in price of their commodity. Concerted action that involved bakers in different states would allow prosecution under the anti-trust act.

Resort To Corn Bread?

CHICAGO, Jan. 9. — Two dollar wheat will mean that Americans will eat corn, it was said here yesterday by prominent dealers in grain. A national agitation to induce congress to place an embargo on the export of wheat and flour, as well as on arms and ammunition, will be introduced at the next meeting of the Chicago Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association, it was announced. S. Westerfeld, chairman of the trade relations committee of the National Association of Retailers, planned to begin in this manner a determined fight against the high cost of flour and incidentally of home-baked bread.

Leaders on 'change predicted yesterday in some instances that if the price of wheat went much higher there would be a general turning to corn in place of wheat bread, both in this country and in Europe. Other dealers declared that bakers' complaints were unwarranted — that a barrel of flour, costing $7, would make 275 loaves of bread, which the retailers sold for $13.75, at five cents a loaf.

British Ship Bought.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Strachan & Co. of Savannah have purchased the British steamer Harley, owned by the Union Navigation Co. of Montreal. The name of the vessel will be changed to Southerner and the ship transferred to American registry, to be used in the German cotton trade.

It is also understood that the Vincent and Pass of Balleny, two deep sea sailing vessels, have been purchased for cotton shipments to Germany by Harriss, Irby & Co.

Reading That Sticks.

An old lady, says the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, was discussing the differences between the old and the new. "We hadn't anything but the reading book to read when I was a girl," she said, "but I know the best parts of that so I can say them to myself now I'm sitting here in the dark, and my grandchildren don't know what they read last week! It soaked into me and it drips off of them." The editor concludes: "Not what drips off, but that which soaks in is of real importance, stays with the reader and affects and develops character."

Of Course He Swooned.

While the judge was giving his charge to the jury in the burglary case one of the jurymen fainted. His lordship had just impressively said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, in arriving at the verdict you must take the testimony of the witnesses for the defense into consideration and give them full weight."

At the words "and give them full weight" the juryman swooned away. He was a coal merchant.—London Mail.

KIDNEY TROUBLE AFFECTED HIS SPINE

Suffered For Forty Years Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives"

BRANTE, ONT., OCT. 31st, 1913.

"For about forty years, I was troubled with Lame Back brought on by Kidney and Bladder Trouble. I was never confined to my bed with the trouble, but it affected my spine and I had to rest for a time. I took advertised remedies which never did me any good. Then I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decided to try them. They did me more good than any other remedy.

My son suffered from the same trouble and frequently had to leave off working, but "Fruit-a-tives" remedied it for him. I would strongly advise anyone suffering from Kidney and Bladder Trouble to use "Fruit-a-tives".

A Red Spider Gone Wrong.

The chigger is really an embryo that never got out of the chrysalis stage. He started out to be a red spider and stopped at becoming a pest. His papa and mamma are red spiders, about the size of a pinhead and bright red. They inhabit old stumps and logs in the woods and feed on vegetable diet. But their offspring are divided into two classes—the bloodthirsty and the non-bloodthirsty. The non-bloodthirsty, like a well behaved child, heeds mother's advice and dines on grass and leaves and old woods. He grows up to a red spider. But the bloodthirsty little cuss hunts up a quadruped or a biped when he feels hungry and borrows. He has no control over his appetite, says the entomologist, and gorges himself. Ergo, he dies. He is the chigger. He is so small that he can scarcely be seen by the naked eye. Of course he doesn't rear a family, in consequence. But his non-bloodthirsty brothers and sisters will reach years of maturity and acquire offspring. And among their children will be chiggers. So the race is kept up.—Kansas City Star.

Debt.

Debt is the one thing which goes contrary to the laws of nature, because you can contract and expand it at the same time. Nothing exceeds like debt. Every one is always in debt to some one else. Every debtor is a creditor, every creditor is a debtor. There being no clearing house of humanity the thing goes on from day to day, getting more complicated. Everybody starts by owing the government his part of the interest on the national debt. As this is increasing all the time, the fatal habit some people have of putting off the day of their birth counts against them. Debt is a poor sleeping companion. He won't stay hitched. If you put him off in a room by himself and draw down the blinds he always breaks loose and interrupts you just when you are beginning to enjoy yourself. If you fail to pay his board and lodging he grows larger and eats more. And what a witless companion he is!—Life.

Famous Doors.

One of the most beautiful doorways in the world is that of Magdalen college chapel in Oxford university. It is the west door leading into the chapel and is of Tudor architecture, with the statues of five saints placed in niches over the top expense. Visitors must remember that Magdalen is pronounced Maudlin college by the English.

Extemporaneous Speaking.

The strangest excuse for "extemporaneous speaking" is given in a story told by Dr. George L. Perin of the Franklin Square House. While traveling he formed the acquaintance of a clergyman who was fond of "talking shop." "Never prepare your sermon in advance," counseled the cleric. "Why?" asked Dr. Perin. "Well, if you put it into writing the devil can look over your shoulder and will then go and nullify in the hearts of your people every word you have uttered. As for me, I never put pen to paper. I just make for the pulpit, and the devil himself doesn't know what I'm going to say!"—Boston Traveler.

A CANDID EDITOR

Max Harden, Germany's Most Prominent Journalist is no Apologist

Maximilian Harden is about the only German editor who is well known outside of his native land. Before the war broke out he was the steadfast critic of many German institutions. Now he says boldly that Germany brought on the war because she wished to do so. She denies the right of the world to judge her. So long as Germany approves of Germany's actions no more is to be said.

He asserts in a recent article that, however terrible is the scourge of war, it is less terrible than other scourges that threatened Germany, though what these are he fails to mention. War was a Divine necessity for Germany. Therefore he bids those who attempt to argue about it to be silent.

"Therefore cease the pitiful attempts to excuse Germany's action. No longer wail to strangers, who do not care to hear you, telling them how dear to us were the smiles of peace we had smeared like rouge upon our lips, and how deeply we regret in our hearts that the treachery of conspirators dragged us, unwillingly, into a forced war.

"Cease also, you popular writers, the degraded scolding of enemies that does not emanate from passion, but out of greedy hankering for the applause of the masses, and which continually nauseates us amid the piety of this hour. Because our statesmen failed to discover and foil shrewd plans of deception is no reason why we may hoist the flag of most pious morality. Not as weak-willed blunderers have we undertaken the fearful risk of this war. We wanted it. Because we had to wish it and could wish it. May the Teuton Devil throttle those whiners whose pleas for excuses make us ludicrous in these hours of lofty experience. We do not stand, and shall not place ourselves, before the court of Europe. Our power shall create new law in Europ. Germany strikes. It conquers new realms for its genius, the priesthood of all the gods will sing songs of praise to the good war."

Germany wages war, he says, because she believes that as a result of her achievements and in proportion to them she is entitled to a wider field for the exercise of her genius. There was no room there for Germany. "To hoist the storm flag of the empire on the narrow channel that opens and locks the road into the ocean"—this, says Harden, is why Germany is at war. With the Belgian coast in her possession, and with German mortars pointing at England, the British Empire would have to come into a friendly agreement as a power of equal strength, entitled to equal rights.

HUNTING THE SNIPERS

Concealed Germans Made It Uncomfortable For British Outposts

Writing to London Answers Private S. Benneson of the 2nd Manchester Regiment tells of a hunt for German sharpshooters.

We relieved a company in the trenches, and our officer picked six men and a corporal and sent us over to a farm about fifty yards away, he says. We were to reconnoitre, and to see if there were any snipers anywhere about.

We looked everywhere, but found none, so it was decided to leave us on guard, and to post a double sentry every two hours to watch for snipers. I had my two hours with a chum, and went into the farmhouse, where I thought I would have a wash and a shave, because I had a nice little beard through having missed shaving for ten days. When I got inside I was surprised to find some people there, hidden away in a kind of underground cellar.

There were some children, and four of the people were very old men, who could hardly walk.

When we told them that we were friends, they made us coffee, and I had the luxury of hot shaving water. But I had hardly commenced shaving when a shot rang out, and a bullet went whizzing past the gate. After that, anyone who passed near the gateway was shot at by a sniper, who was hidden away somewhere. The people tried to tell us where, but we couldn't understand them, so we left for our officer, who managed to reach us under cover of a trunk, and he at last made out from the people that two Germans had been in a loft all night and had fired shots at us every now and again.

We found that their last hiding-place was the top of a haystack. They must have seen that we were after them, however, because when we reached the haystack we discovered their knives, helmets, bayonets, etc.; but they had left in a hurry.

RECIPROCITY IN BATTLE

French and German Soldiers Mutually Agree to Passage of Food Wagons

M. Maurice Barres, writing in the "Echo de Paris," said: "The enemy never fire on our food wagons, nor we on theirs, although we hear them well enough when they arrive in the silence of the evening, for on both sides we respect them. Similarly at night the French and German sentinels, posted well in front of the trenches and quite close to each other, refrain from aiming at each other."

M. Barres adds: "Are not these customs which spring up without an expressed agreement sufficiently striking?"

"So absolutely regulated has this warfare become that at one place on the Suippes road there is an understood daily truce of one hour to allow of both sides obtaining supplies of fresh water from a good well which happens to lie between the lines.

"Punctually to the minute the whistle sounds, and the men troop out with buckets, and five minutes before the hour is up the whistle goes again; for one minute after the hour the sharpshooters are sniping briskly. I am told that while as a rule the water carriers do their work in silence, confining their attentions towards the opposite camp to scowls, at times they get to fisticuffs, and officers have hastily to separate the red trousers from the blue-grey tunic of the foe."

The King's Roll of Honor

It is characteristic of the keen interest that King George takes in the men who are fighting for Britain that he ordered a record to be kept at Buckingham Palace of the names of all those serving in any capacity who are killed during the war. When the proper time arrives, it is His Majesty's intention to place a suitable tablet to their memory, either in the private chapel at his London residence or in the Chapel Royal, St. James.'

When the roll list is completed, it will be handsomely bound and placed in the royal archives at Windsor Castle, close to where a similar list of the African War is kept.

King Albert Of Belgium Is His Nation's Hero

Has Love, Trust and Respect of People; Earned Through His Courage and Simplicity

Arno Dosch, the war correspondent of the World's Work, tells the following incidents:

"On an afternoon late in October the Town Square in Furnes was full of military automobiles and a few provision waggons. I did not see any field pieces or machine guns. Every last one was right upon the firing line. My feet were tired from walking over the Belgian blocks, and I held tenaciously to the sidewalk passing around the square, though it was mostly taken up with cafe tables and baby trees in boxes. At one point the tables were empty and a single sentry was sauntering up and down. I stopped to ask him the way to the gendarmerie, and in the middle of giving me the directions, he came to attention, as a door opened behind me, and saluted.

"Two men came out of the door, one rather tall, with an easy manner, and smartly dressed as a general in the Belgian army. The other was older, also a general, wearing, if anything, the more gold braid of the two. They entered a waiting automobile, and drove off as casually as two men at home might leave their office for their club.

"Something about the first of the two men impressed me as familiar. I had only seen his back, but that had arrested my attention. I thought possibly I had seen him at the beginning of the war in Brussels, so I asked the sentry his name.

"That is our King, Albert," he said quite simply.

During the next couple of days I saw the King of Belgium a number of times. He spent his nights at a small villa on the seashore at La Panne, a hundred yards possibly beyond the hotel where I spent mine. He passed through the streets as unnoticed as any one of the other Belgians who had retreated from Antwerp and Ghent ahead of the army, but preferred the chilly nights in an unheated seaside hotel in Belgium to comfort somewhere beyond. It seemed to be a point of courtesy on the part of the Belgians not to bother their king with ceremony at this trying time. I doubt if he cared much for ceremony, any how. Searching around for a single adjective to describe him, I should call him offhanded. His manner, even then, while alert, was casual. It is easy to see why the Belgians love him. If kings had always been as simple and direct as Albert, I am inclined to think democracy would have languished."

In an interview Emmanuel Havenith, Belgian minister to Washington, says:

"We have received letters recently from the soldiers figting in Flanders in which they speak many times of our king. It is when one talks with our soldiers that one perceives how he is loved; they say, all of them, that they will die for him. He is constantly at their side, encouraging them by his presence and his courage. At certain moments he adventures too far; always he is in the very midst of the combat.

"One soldier said to a friend of mine, who writes in this letter his words: 'The King came and placed himself at my side in the trench. He took the rifle of a soldier so exhausted he could not stand, to give him a chance to rest, and fired comme le plus picupicu—just as one of his own soldiers—during an hour and a half. He himself carries their letters to the soldiers and distributes among them the little gauguets which their friends, their parents, send them from the homes now destroyed. He shares—what do you call it?—la ratatouille (soldiers' mess) with his soldiers and he calls them always 'my friends.' He does not want that they shall render him honours; he wishes simply to be a soldier in the full strength of that term. One night he was seen, exhausted by fatigue, sleeping on the grass at the side of the road."

ROYAL YEAST
MAKES PERFECT BREAD

OUR HOME GUARD.

Across the sea they may not go,
To fight the haughty German foe,
Harsh fate denied the chance,
For King and country at the front
Nobly to bear the battle's brunt
Upon the fields of France.

But see them marching on parade
In warlike trappings proud arrayed
'Neath banners waving high,
Mark well the dauntless courage strong
The iron will, to crush the wrong
That kindles in each eye.

Then say if men of sterner mould
Than our good Home Guard brave and hold
Have ever faced a foe,
Be sure this worthy Patriot band
For right and liberty will stand
And strike oppression low.

What if the tyrant's purblind hate
His hordes should master at our gate
And sounds war's wild alarms,
Each well-trained Home Guard, old or young
Will show, from British blod they've sprung
And buckle on their arms.

And fight as lions roused, awake
Fiercely, for why, they have at stake
All that they hold most dear
Will jeopardize their lives to death
N otyield, till their expiring breath—
For heroes feel no fear.

They recked not of the meed of fame
When with heroic zeal aflame
At duty's clarion call,
They joined the ranks, to quell the power,
Of war lords, who would have them cower
Low as the lowest thrall.

Not let the cold disloyal knaves
With hearts of bondmen, souls of slaves
(Which, Heaven be thanked, are few)
Sit safely in their homes and sneer
When they like men should volunteer,
And join our Home Guard too.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The redingote style for the older girls is very good indeed, having the somewhat fitted body to waistline and the full circular skirt part below. The joining of skirt and body is always covered by the broad belt. The "Faire" model with Magina sleeve is more for everyday wear and is perhaps the most practical coat style for the schoolgirl. A good example is shown here, made of checked coat suiting having big pockets, that may be rolled upon to bring the hands warm in the coldest kind of weather. The small view shows the coat fastened up to the throat, a fashion which will appeal to mothers perhaps more than the revers opening of the main view. The coat pattern, which is No. 4973, comes in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years.

A nice hat to go with this coat is made of velvet, with a soft crown and a brim which turns up just a trifle at the left side of the front. Only a band of satin ribbon trims the narrow ends trailing off to the back. Velvet and plush are much used for children's hats and bonnets, trimmed with ribbons, flowers and fur.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required (age, if a child).

WEAK TIRED FOLKS GIVEN NEW VIGOUR

Strength Returns, Health Renewed, Vitality of Youth Re-created.

Exhaustion and Bodily Tiredness Every Day Being Turned Into Vigor and Ambition by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

From Cheboque Pt., N. S., comes the following from Mrs. W. A. Reynolds: "A year ago my health began to fail, I lost appetite, became nervous and sleepless. My weight ran down, I became thin, hollow-cheeked and had black rings under my eyes. I really felt as if the charm of life had left me and when springtime arrived I was in the 'blues.' I read of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and got five boxes at once.

"Within a month my appetite and colour were good. I gained strength and felt like a new woman. New life and vigor returned, and my friends scarcely knew me. A medicine that will do this should be in every home."

Good health means much to you. Success and happiness depend upon it. The maintenance and source of health is found in Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

MEANING OF SALVATION

(Rev. Joseph Fort Newton in The Universalist Leader.)

So unfortunate are many of the ideas associated with the word salvation, that it would be a gain if the word were not used at all for a decade. At least we should make clear what we mean by it. Let us go back to Tyndale, the father of our English Bible, and see what use he made of the word—if so we may track a word to a world-ideal. His ambition was to make the Bible so simple that a ploughboy could read it. Strangely enough, he hardly used the word salvation at all, but instead such words as health, wholeness, soundness, holiness, but most frequently health. For example, "Perform your health with fear and trembling." And again, "How shall we escape if we desire so great health?" Why did so great a scholar use these words? It was because he saw that it was nearer to the meaning of the word used in the Bible, and he was right.

Salvation, then, is health of soul, wholeness of nature, soundness of character—to awake to the reality of spirit and the spiritual world, and live as a citizen of that world. It means the growth of the soul, leading its powers forth to beauty and grace, making it superior to the evils that are ready to prey upon it, liberating it when it is in bonds of sense and selfishness, and by all means, human and divine, bringing it into right, that is normal, wholesome, happy, relations with God and life and its fellow souls. If it has fallen into sin, there is healing; if it has lost faith, there is ever the path to the mount of vision. By growing a rich, refined, tender, valiant soul, we are working with God, and have behind us and within us all the redeeming forces of life. And such a soul is a messenger of God for the redemption of his fellows.

AN AMAZING CURE FOR NEURALGIA
MAGICAL RELIEF FOR HEADACHE

The Most Effective Remedy Known is "Nerviline."

The reason Nerviline is infallibly a remedy for neuralgia resides in two very remarkable properties Nerviline possesses.

The first is its wonderful power of penetrating deeply into the tissue, which enables it to reach the very source of congestion.

Nerviline possesses another and not less important action—it equalizes the circulation in the painful parts, and thus affords a sure barrier to the re-establishment of congestion.

You see the relief you get from Nerviline is permanent.

It doesn't matter whether the cause is spasm or congestion, external or internal; if it is pain—equally with its curative action upon neuralgia—Nerviline will relieve and quickly cure rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, strains, swellings or enlarged joints, and all other muscular aches.

Nerviline is a guaranteed remedy. Get the large 50 cent family size bottle; it is far more economical than the 25 cent trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere, or, direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Building a Fire.

In building a wood fire in an open fireplace shake out a double sheet of newspaper and crush it tightly, leaving the edges loose, that it may ignite easily. The back log should be of the greatest size that the fireplace will hold and may be of green wood, as this is the slowest to burn out, and the draft and fire are strongest in the back. The log should be shoved against the wall. If it is a split log the inside of it should be turned toward the front. Three logs are a good number to start a fire with—the back log, a smaller one in front and the third log on top of these. All of the ashes of the first three or four should be left on the hearth, as they make a fine bed for keeping the embers over night. They have fallen through the andirons. The wood should be mixed in order to have an ideal fire—green wood with dry, and the harder varieties, oak and pine, with the wood of old fruit trees that have died. Apple wood gives a mellow, delightful glow. Rock fish.

Nightingales as Pets.

Although in nature the song of the nightingale does not extend later than the middle of June, yet in captivity the bird will sing up to the time of the autumn molt and will begin again at Christmas. The one distraction from the merits of the nightingale as a pet bird is its inhospitality. Some birds will sing only when no one is in the room with them, some will sing under any condition, and some will be silent for ever if they change ownership. At the earnest solicitation of a friend I once parted with a nightingale which was the finest singer I had ever heard, and in its new ownership, although it was kept in the same cage and was fed in exactly the same manner as that to which it had been accustomed, it never uttered a note during the remaining seven years of its life.—London Graphic.

Connecticut Taverns of 1644.

Taverns came early, and under order of the general court in 1644 they were established "not only in Hartford, but others in each town upon our river." An old authority tells what a guest might expect:

"Clean sheets to lie in wherein no man had been lodged since they came from the laundresse and have a servante to kindle his fire and one to pull off his boots and make them clean and have the boots and liquors to visit him and to eat with the hoste or at a common table if he pleases or eat in his chamber, commanding what meate he will, according to his appetite. Yea, the kitchen being open to him to order the meat to be dressed as he liketh it best."

The landlord was not to allow a penney or to entertained in his house up to dinner unseasonably or to tingle after 9 o'clock at night.—"A History of Connecticut," by George L. Clark.

How Loch Awe Was Formed.

Highland tradition gives a quaint explanation of the creation of Loch Awe, that noble mirror of the mountains in the magnificent scenery of Argyllshire. The bed of the loch was once, it is said, a fertile valley, with a fairy spring which had always to be kept covered, bubbling from the mountain side. A careless girl, however, having drawn water, forgot to recover the well. All through the night the spring welled, and by the morning Loch Awe had come into being. No one need regret the disappearance of that highland haunt. Loch Awe is now one of the most romantic of beauty spots in Great Britain—a charming sheet of water, studded with pretty islands, while around the shores are many places associated with interesting legends and historic incidents of the Highlands.—London Answers.

Greek Wind Vanes.

The Greeks as far back as the fifth century B. C. were the first to make regular meteorological observations, some results of which still are preserved. Their great capacity for pure science induced them to propound meteorological theories. At this time they used wind vanes, and in the first century B. C. they built the tower of wind at Athens. The first quantitative observations—that is, the measurement of rain—were made in the first century A. D. These were made in Palestine, and their results are preserved in the Talmud.

Salt in the Coffin.

In certain localities in the old world they put salt in the coffin before it is lowered into the grave. This is the survival of an ancient custom which was once universal. The custom grew out of the idea that Satan hates salt because it is the symbol of incorruption and immortality.

The Source.

People say "God bless me" after sneezing, from the fact that in the days of the plague this trouble usually began with violent sneezing and other indications of cold. The quick relief was then considered a prayer to be delivered from the plague.

The Initiative.

"Mr. Wilson tried to kiss me last evening."

"How dared he?"

"He didn't. I dared him."

Color of Roses.

Persian color of roses is quite different from the Bulgarian product. The crops of the Persian district of Fars have been famous for many centuries.

All Settled.

Taking Medicine in the Dark.

Never take medicine in the dark. This is the advice in an interesting little booklet I found in a drug store. It is timely and wholesome, and has a wide application. The people of this country are too fond of taking medicine in the dark. They are so credulous and so eager to make money that they are constantly the victims of their own folly. A man has made a large fortune during the past fifteen years by writing letters from Spain to persons in this country telling the latter about fortunes left them by strangers on certain conditions. These conditions always involve the payment of money before the fortune can be secured. It is amazing how many persons who ought to know better have given up from $200 to $1,000 to an absolute stranger in the belief that with this amount the latter could ready to turn over $20,000 to $100,000 to his victims.—Exchange.

"Pape's Diapepsin" settles sour, upset stomachs in five minutes.

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmicist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, dizziness or headache, distress or intestinal griping. This will all go, and nothing else will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

MORE TRENCHES TAKEN BY ALLIES

GERMANS LOSE HEAVILY AT SOISSONS

OFFICERS SELECTED

Four From Peterborough Have Been Chosen For The 3rd Canadian Overseas Contingent

LATE MILITARY NEWS

Five Peterborough officers have already been accepted for the third Canadian contingent. Major S. T. Medd and Lieut. Harry G. Rogers, of Peterborough, who volunteered for active service, have received word that they have been appointed to the 8th Mounted Rifles, while Capt. A. E. Carruthers of C. Company of the 57th Regiment is made quartermaster of the 39th Infantry Battalion. Lieuts. C. Ross Cameron and W. Eastwood of the 57th Regiment are also given commissions in the same battalion. Capt. K. G. Lech of the 57th Regiment, has also volunteered, but so far has received no word as to whether or not he has been appointed.

A sadly disappointed man to-day was Major T. J. Johnston, of Otonabee, officer commanding the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, when the orders received from Kingston failed to contain news of his appointment to the 8th Mounted Rifles. Major Johnston had volunteered for active service and it was expected that his reputation and experience as a cavalry officer would ensure his being selected. He has been untiring in his efforts since the recruiting for the Mounted Rifles began, and has been at the armouries superintending the enlistment at three sessions a day since orders were received. Major Johnston is popular with officers and men alike and there was great regret this morning when his name did not appear in the list. It is hoped that he may yet be selected, as the present list is only a provisional one. The general feeling among the dragoons is that there is no finer officer among the cavalry units, and many men have been waiting for news of his appointment before they enlisted.

The list for the 3rd Dragoons as received by Major Johnston this morning comprises Major A. E. McLaughlin, Bowmanville, Major S. T. Medd, Peterborough, Lieut. T. D. Johnston, Otonabee, Lieut. Rogers, Peterborough an Lieuts. Hughes and Smeath. Lieut. Johnston is a nephew of Major Johnston and went to England with the first contingent. There was no berth for him there and he returned to Canada last month to take a position with the 3rd contingent.

The appointment of Capt. Carruthers of the 57th Regiment as quartermaster of the 39th Battalion, is a popular one. Capt. Carruthers is in command of C. Company, which heads the list for the number of men sent in the first two contingents.

Recruiting is going along rapidly at the armouries, both mounted and infantry units continuing to take on men. The Dragoons were to-day reinforced by a contingent of fifteen men from the Trenton district who arrived at noon. They had been medically examined at Trenton and will face Dr. Cameron this afternoon. The Mounted Rifles are drilling twice a day and the 57th contingent will commence at work. The mounted men received the pleasant word this morning that inoculation for typhoid is to be begun immediately and twenty victims were selected to receive the first dose this afternoon.

It is probable that the men will be kept here at least a month before they are moved to the mobilisation centre, although nothing definite is known. In the meantime they are receiving $1.00 a day pay with 10c. per diem field allowance and 75c. per diem subsistence allowance, amounting to $57.35 a month.

Allowed Out on Ticket-of-Leave

Ernest Jamieson and Max McClelland Get Their Release

Mr. G. N. Gordon of Gordon and Widdifield, has been successful in his efforts to secure the release of Ernest Jamieson and Max McClelland, who were sentenced to the Central Prison for a term of two years, a year ago this month. They pleaded guilty to a series of robberies. They entered a number of stores. The boys are being allowed out on ticket-of-leave.

ALLIES CONTINUE TO GAIN GROUND

Trenches Are Captured Between the Lys and the Oise, at Soissons, and North of Perthe's While the Artillery Duels All Favour the Allies.

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, France, January 11. — Violent fighting is in progress along the entire line between the Lys and the Oise. In a series of combats the French have succeeded in taking a line of German trenches in this vicinity, according to this afternoon's official announcement. From the sea to the Lys the fighting continues to be entirely in the nature of artillery exchanges.

Heavy fighting in the vicinity of Soissons continues, the Germans continually sacrificing men in an effort to regain the ground which they were forced to reliquish last week. The fighting is increasing in volume but the French War Office emphatically denies the German claims of gains at this point. Instead, it is asserted, the allied lines are being advanced into trenches heretofore held by the Germans. Between the Aisne and the Champagne region the artillery duels continue, with advantage to the French. North of Perthes another line of German trenches has been carried by assault by the French. Heavy snows are slowing up the progress in the Vosges and Upper Alsace, and are adding to the misery of the wounded. The fighting continues unchecked with little advantage to either side as yet.

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 11.—The position of Great Britain on foodstuffs shipments caused the most comment here to-day. It was regarded as the principal weakness of the British position outlined. Because the Teutonic allies are alleged to be disregarding international laws, is no reason, this government will vigorously contend, for the shutting off of foodstuff shipments unless destined for the armed foes of the enemy.

BASLE, Switzerland, January 11.—With all of upper Alsace turned into a battlefield and with the hostilities continually increasing, Switzerland to-day took steps to preserve her neutrality.

All of the troops now mobilized have been ordered to guard the frontier. In addition the railways have been put back upon their former schedule and the plans completed for the caling out of additional troops as they are needed.

Both the Germans and the French continue to pour additional troops into the adjacent country. At the present time the Germans have more than 160,000 men.

All the German hospitals along the Rhine have been emptied of their regular patients, increased in size, and are now being used for the wounded who continue to arrive.

The French have also strengthened the positions they have taken and are bringing up additional artillery to maintain them.

North of Altkirch, where the fighting is almost continuous,, the French have control of the approaches and the main road from Cannes to Belfort. They have constructed a system of railways so that they can transport men quickly to and from every threatened point.

BERLIN, January 11.—Admitting for the first time that the allies have gained a foothold in their trenches north of Soissons, the German war office to-day declared that the battle at this point continues with the allies unable to make any further gains.

The report confirms the French claims that to the north in the vicinity of Nieuport, Ypres, and directly south of there, the exchanges continue to be confined to artillery.

In connection with the fighting north of Soissons, the War Office says that the French, who have occupied only a small part of the German trenches, have again attacked in an effort to carry the main position.

So far it is stated, they have gained no advantage, although the battle continues unchecked.

INAUGURAL MEETING

Of The City Council Was Held This Morning—Mayor Buller's Inaugural Speech

STANDING COMMITTEES

Another milestone in the history of Peterborough's civic administration was reached this morning, when the 1914 Council passed out and the birthchant of the new Council was intoned. Mayor Buller heaved a sigh of satisfaction as he sank in the red plush chair, with the prospect of another year's work ahead of him. He sprinkled the meeting with a generous spraying of oratorical lydite, including his inaugural address, which was interred in the minds of the aldermen. The Mayor promised his colleagues a well-defined policy of civic economy, twenty-five cents an hour for the working man and a drainage system for the East and West Wards. After that the Council may adopt the maxim of James J. Hill, the well-known railroad magnate—"Trust in the Lord and haul no empties."

Regretted Ald. Duncan's Retirement.

Mayor Buller remarks upon what he called an "unforseen circumstance" that had prompted Ald. Duncan to take the field against him. He regarded him as an old friend and regretted his retirement from the City Council.

The Mayor went on to welcome the new members of the Council, held post mortems on the retired or rejected ones, and thanked the ratepayers for supporting his candidature. The latter were not represented outside of the Council.

A Stated Wage.

"Regarding the work of the ensuing year we must be governed by the condition of the money market," said His Worship Mayor Buller. I would like this Council to see that all civic contracts are framed so as to ensure local workingmen the preferepce in all city work. Another thing I would like to see is a stated wage of twenty-five cents an hour. I would be a party to anything that would benefit the workingmen. Give them the same privileges as other factions enjoy. I would suggest that the Board of Works take up the question of a drainage service for the East and West Wards. The outfall sewer and the separation system is another big question that will have to be considered. Whether the present site for the sewage disposal plant will be accepted depends upon the action of the Provincial Board of Health. However, I don't think that they will see fit to change it. We will have to meet the work as we see it, and until the dark clouds have passed over."

The Council then resolved into a committee of the Whole for the purpose of striking the standing committees for the ensuing year.

Standing Committees.

As was expected, the choice for the Board of Works fell upon Ald. G. W. Green. For the Fire, Water and Light committee Ald. J. J. Duffus was the selection of the committee. Some little difference arose when the Power committee was reached. Some of the committee were inclined to re-elect Ald. Johnston to that all important committee. Ald. Johnston was inclined to disagree with the move, claiming that any further responsibilities connected with this committee should be shouldered by the whole Council. He then moved that the whole Council be a committee to supersede the Power committee, and that the Mayor act as chairman. This was carried.

The committees are as follows:

Board of Works—Ald. G. G. Green, (chairman), Aldermen Johnston, Duffus, Stratton, Saunders, Weir, Evans, McIntyre, Edgar and Dobbin.

Fire, Water and Light— Ald. J. J. Duffus (chairman), Aldermen Green, Weir, Evans, Stratton and Dobbin.

Manufacturers—Ald. A. Weir (chairman), Aldermen Evans, McIntyre, Green, Saunders and Duffus.

Finance Committee — Ald. A. H. Stratton (chairman), Aldermen Green, McIntyre, Duffus and Johnston.

Property Committee—Ald. McIntyre (chairman), Aldermen Johnston, Duffus, Green, Edgar, Weir and Saunders.

Legal and Reception— Ald. F. H. Dobbin (chairman), Aldermen Johnston, Edgar, Stratton and Saunders.

HOW THE ALDERMEN LINE UP.

Ald. Saunders—Board of Works, Manufacturers, Property and Legal committees.

Ald. Edgar—Legal, Board of Works, and Property committees.

Ald. Stratton—Board of Works, Fire, Water and Light, Finance and Legal committees.

Ald. Dobbin—Legal, Board of Works, and Fire, Water and Light committees.

Ald. Duffus—Board of Works, Fire, Water and Light, Finance, Property and Manufacturers.

Ald. Green—Board of Works, Fire, Water and Light, Manufacturers, Finance and Property committees.

Ald. Johnston—Board of Works, Finance, Property and Legal committees.

Ald. McIntyre — Board of Works, Manufacturers, Finance and Property committees.

Ald. Weir— Board of Works, Fire, Water and Light and Manufacturers Property committees.

Ald. Evans—Board of Works, Fire, Water an Light and Manufacturers committees

AEROPLANES DROP BOMBS ON DUNKIRK

Five Civilians Are Killed and Several Buildings Badly Damaged—Paris Takes Precautions Against an Attack by German Zeppelins.

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 11.---Hostile aeroplanes again bombarded Dunkirk this afternoon. Several buildings were badly damaged, five civilians killed and several badly wounded. When a German aviator attempted a reconnaisance over the French positions at Amiens to-day he was pursued and the French aviator demolished his machine. The pilot was killed and the officer observer wounded and captured.

That a German raid by Zeppelins on Paris is expected developed to-day. Following reports received Premier Milerand held a conference with General Galliemi at which precautionary plans were considered. It was agreed that lights should be still further dimmed in the city and an address to the people reciting steps to be taken in the event of an aerial bambardment was prepared. It will be issued later.

RIO JANIERO, Jan. 11.---British vessels all along the Brazilian and Argentine coasts have been ordered to remain in port owing to the report that another German squadron is operating along the Brazilian coast.

No information regarding the composition of this squadron is available here although one report claims that the Kaslerahe and her convoys have been augmented by German ships that ran the gauntlet of the British fleet in the North Sea and escaped after the bombardment of Scarborough and Hartlepool.

ROME, January 11.—Advices from Constantinople indicate that the bombardment of the Dardanelles forts by the allied fleet, has already greatly damaged some of the outer forts. The fear is growing in Constantinople that the fleet eventually will force the passage, and that the allies will be able to capture Constantinople. If that happens grave fears are expressed by the officials fully cognizant of the situation, that a massacre of the foreigners will be hard to prevent.

Up to the present all information that the Turkish army has been disastrously defeated in the Caucasus, has been withheld from the Turkish people.

The official announcements deal only with the fighting in Northern Persia where the Turks have gained some minor successes. The latest advices show that the Turkish army in the Caucasus has been strongly reinforced and that an attempt is being made by its commanders to reform the defeated forces and resume the offensive.

OTTAWA, January 11.—The nature of the war tax proposals for the approaching session of parliament, will be kept a profound secret until Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, delivers his budget speech. Your correspondent learned this morning that while the Minister of Finance is devoting close attention to the problem of raising a bigger revenue, his proposals have been submitted to the Cabinet. It is practically certain that there will be a number of tariff changes designed to increase the customs revenues.

It is generally believed that bank cheques, business receipts and other forms of commercial paper will be subjected to a tax.

PRIVATE BILLS

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 11.—Notice is given already of over seventy private bills for the coming session of Parliament. Twenty-five are applications for divorce, this constituting a considerable falling off as compared with other years. Last year there were 42.

There will be a great many applications for the extension of time to commence and complete branch lines and extensions.

HAVE BEEN IN ACTION

Captain Newton of Princess Patricia Canadian Regiment is Reported Killed in France

OTHER DEATHS LIKELY

TORONTO, Jan. 11. — Additional confirmation that Princess Patricia's have been in action within the last day or two, reached here to-day in the shape of a letter from Corporal Hayes, dated Christmas day. The envelope was franked by "D. O. Newton" Captain, of No. 3 Company, of the Princess Pats, and who, according to a cable this morning, has been killed in action. It is thought here hardly possible that Captain Newton could have met death unless there were other casualties in his regiment. Further particulars are eagerly awaited here, as there was a large enlistment of the Princess Pats from Toronto and other parts of Ontario. Corporal Hayes remarks in his letter, "We are now within sound of the German guns."

THE ESQUIMALT SQUAD SENDS ITS THANKS

Esquimalt Naval Yard, Jan. 3, 1915.

To the Women's Ward Fund Committee, Peterborough, Ont.—

Examiner,— With the kind permission of the editor, I would like to express, on behalf of the C.G.E. war contingent, Esquimault squad, our appreciation for your thoughtfulness and kindness toward us at Christmas. The box arrived safely, and every man in the squad considers himself highly complimented on account of the fact that he was remembered with such very useful gifts, and hearty good wishes by the "good old Peterborough" people.

We all join in wishing you all the happiness and prosperity that the New Year can possibly bring forth.

Yours very sincerely,

Hotel Keeper Fined $20.00

Fred. Blastorah, proprietor of the Palace Hotel, in whose case judgment was reserved by Magistrate Dumble on Friday last at the Police Court, was fined $10 and costs, which were $10.35, amounting in all to $20.35, to be paid in five days, and in the event of non-payment, fifteen days in jail.

The fine was on a charge of having allowed Howard Innis, an inebriate on the prohibited list, to loiter in or about the bar on Dec. 31.

Mr. Blastorah was defended by Mr. Widdifield, of Messrs. Gordon and Widdifield.

Magistrate Dumble found in his judgment: "That Innis was at the time on the 'black' or prohibited list, and this implied that notice of this fact had been served upon the defendant. It appeared that the bartender saw Innis and another person, also a prohibited person, in the sitting-room of the hotel. There was no attempt to order them away. Innis was under the influence of liquor."

The Magistrate found that the proprietor was responsible for the actions of his bartender in this connection, and the bartender neglecting to see to the removal of Innis, committed an offence as charged.

ADVERTISING THAT PLEASED BOTH WAYS

A very pleased man dropped into the Examiner Office this morning, and the cause of it all was the results Mr. Banks had obtained from the half-page advertisement inserted in the Examiner a few days ago. In addition to Mr. Banks' happy face may be seen the happy faces of the large number of boys and girls who have taken advantage of the cut he has made in all hockey and skating supplies to furnish themselves with everything necessary for the proper enjoyment of our typical Canadian winter. Some more young men and ladies and boys and girls can be fitted out very moderately if they hurry along to the Banks' Shop, on Charlotte Street, before everything is cleared out.

COMPLETE THE ORGANIZATION.

This morning the City Council partially organised for the year's work by selecting and appointing the several committees. This organization will be largely machinery without steam if it is not completed by the organization of a policy for the year; by a consideration of the problems that have to be met, the work to be done and the provision and adoption of means for carrying some systematic scheme of activity into effect. The great lack in effective and consequently economical civic work is lack of system, such as is applied to every successful industrial or commercial enterprise. Except in the interests of the city advice to our representatives might be considered impertinent; but there is no doubt that civic affairs suffer from lack of directness of effort when a programme of work, definite as possible, drawn up with reference to available resources and requirements, is not compiled. To supplement the partial organization of the Council, effected this morning, it would be a good thing for the members of the City Council to have a "round table" or symposium at which, the work of the year should be discussed, and a definite programme arranged, and a definite object to be gained, set up as a mark to be hit. If such a programme were thoughtfully devised and an effective system adopted in giving it application, there is no doubt that better results with greater economy of expenditure, with less overlapping and less confusion, would be obtained in the civic handling of our affairs.

TWO WAYS.

There are two ways of meeting a disagreeable necessity. Owing to the conditions arising from the war, one great railway system is faced with the necessity of reducing expenses in order to meet expenses. Of two ways in which this can be accomplished, the wrong one is suggested—that of reducing the pay of employees. That does not seem to be the beter way—a variation of the idea of the greatest good to the greatest number — the lesser harm to the lesser number—seems to be indicated. Railway experts may scout the idea or they may agree with the idea that a fairer way for a railway to reduce expenses would be to increase its freight and passenger rates. There would have to be only a very slight increase, to produce a sum equal to the saving made by the reduction of wage rates. It seems to be practicable, for already one great railway is making application for authority to increase rates in order to approximate income and expenditure. There may be necessity for the adoption of measures of one or the other kind; but it seems, that the burden should not be concentrated upon a few instead of the many. A reduction in the rate of wages would fall upon a comparatively few, say fifteen or sixteen thousand, while the burden if it were noticeable at all, in the event of increase of rates, would be distributed among millions who in the course of a year contribute to the passenger and freight traffic receipts of a railway. In the case of a passenger—a type perhaps of millions—who may take a railway journey once a year, the burden of increase would be almost inappreciable, while in the case of employees the concentrated burden would be felt every pay day and all the days between, by men and family. On the contrary the situation being met by increase in rates, the burden, if any, would be distributed and not bear with very sensible effect upon a comparatively few. If our City Council, supposing the improbable, were to take a fancy to lower the tax rate and would proceed to do it by lowering the rate of wages of civic employees, they would only contribute a drop in the bucket; they would inflict great hardship on a few without sensibly relieving the great body of ratepayers. If reduction of expenses or its equivalent, by the railways, is to be made, its burden should not be placed upon the few, but rather an equivalent be reached in the form of advanced rates, in which event the burden would be so divided, would fall upon so many shoulders, that it would not be felt to be a burden. If, however, the increase of rates is not practicable, then the alternative, reduction of wages should, one would think, in fairness and justice, be made to include the salaries of the higher paid officials. The relations between the public and the railways are so intimate and interrelated that there seems to be no impertinence in suggesting something that seems more equitable than the practice of economy by means, of what may easily result in comparative hardship.

RESOURCE AND RESOURCES.

Germany is a country of immense resource; Russia is a country of great resources. These related, if not contrasting conditions indicate that Russia could win out single handed in this titanic war struggle. Germany in the preparation of this war has shown almost infinite resource and applied the results to the point of exhaustion of her resources. The fight has assumed a character of wearing down, and in this, Russia and the allies have not yet half developed their capacity for operating the costly and gigantic process of attrition Russia, especially, has herself resources in men, means and supplies, very greatly superior to those of Germany and her already winded running mate, Austria. It is worth while to particularize a little as this superiority is bound to be a decisive factor in determining the issue of the struggle.

The territorial area of Russia is forty times as great as that of Germany. Russia's population is more than a hundred million greater than that of Germany. In 1912 the population of Germany was 67 million; that of Austria-Hungary 52 millions, while that of Russia was 170 millions, 50 millions greater than that of the two countries combined. This indicates that Russia, is able to draw for soldiers upon a population nearly a third greater than that of Germany and Austria. Even if the population of 35 millions of decadent and down-and-out Turkey is added, we find Russia outnumbering by ten or twelve millions the combined population of her enemies in this war.

But when we come to add the population of Great Britain, of 46 millions, and of her outlying empire of 400 millions; france with 34 millions; Servia wod 3 millions; Portugal with 15 millions, we have a total of 647 millions on the side of the Allies, as against a population of the Austro-German alliance, of 154 millions. If we add Italy, which is on the edge of coming in, with 35 millions, and, Roumania and Greece, both possible members of the Entente nations, with a population of 6 millions and 3 millions, respectively, we shall have, also counting in Belgium, the enormous total of 718 millions, arrayed against the 154 millions of Germany, Austria and Turkey. When we consider that the resources of the allied nations are in equal proportion to their population, and in the case of Great Britain infinitely greater, we shall have to come to the conclusion that Germany and her party are greatly over-matched, in resources of men and means. And Germany, in spite of her ceaseless cult of war, in spite of her half century of war preparation, has demonstrated that she cannot wage war, even man for man, any more skilfully or successfully than her opponents. We can see only one end of the conflict. Germany has been met in military resource at every point, and in the matter of resources, she is overwhelmingly outclassed. When we turn into the scale the force and value of the saying—"thrice is he armed whose cause is just"—the cause of Germany and her allies becomes even more hopelessly, or from our point of view, hopefully, doomed.

GERMAN HATRED OF BRITAIN.

When hatred rises to the point of frenzy it has in it something of fear. The strong does not hate the weak as the weak hates the strong. Contempt, if not magnanimity, forbids it. The man who surrenders himself to the blind fury, mad rage, of ungovernable hatred is a weakling. The strong man curbs his resentment and does not let it get out of hand. If he means to have revenge, he is silent about it.

Frantic hatred, moreover, is never so displayed as when craft finds itself baffled by craft. A man never curses so savagely as when, having set out to cheat his neighbour out of a dollar, the neighbour cheats him of two dollars. There is no howling like the howls of the man who has fallen into the pit he dug for another. Everybody is glad to see the biter bitten, except the biter himself. His mood is the opposite extreme, of unmitigable complaint.

These two points go far to explain the hatred of England by Germany. Back of all her boasts and threats lies dread. Her fleet crouches in hiding. She knows that her first confident plans have failed. Many of her industries are starving to death for lack of raw material. Her food supply is threatened even if not already scant. All around her is a wall of fire and steel, which she has been unable to break through. She knows that time is against her. The outlook is one she scarcely dare contemplate. Fear is in her heart. And, because she knows that had it not been for British intervention her fleet would already have ravaged the coasts of France, and her armies have invested Paris, she raves against Britain.

Further, she is profoundly convinced that "perfidious Albion" has again outwitted her. Everything has gone differently from what she expected. Belgium resisted. Italy stayed out of the fight. The Triple Entente hung together. Russia was ready. Britain intervened. The colonies and India proved to be enthusiastically loyal. The United States is manifestly in sympathy with her foes. She blames the guile of Britain for it all. Even the apparent decadence of the British Empire seems part of the sham. She is wounded in her tenderest part. All her diplomatic scheming, her secret preparations, her masked artifices have been nullified by the diabolical cunning of the British. She hates as a swindler hates when he finds himself swindled by his intended dupe.

These reflections should be consoling to John Bull. He has been often told that he was stupid, and has sometimes suspected it to be true, but he never thought anybody would call him clever.

Anyhow, it is a revelation to the world of the panic which is invading the hearts of the Germans.—Journal of Commerce.

The Alternating System Of Electing Representatives

This year's experience with the two-year term for the members of the Board of Education, combined as it is with the practice of sending one-half of the trustees to the polls each year, should lead to an early change in the method of election. There is no reason why aldermen, controllers, and the Mayor should be elected for one year only and the school trustees for two years. The same system should be used in forming both municipal bodies, otherwise the elector will be confused and the will of the people frustrated.

On January 1st more than forty-five thousand votes were counted for Mayor and only thirty-nine thousand for the Board of Education. Allowing for the lesser interest in the contest for the Board, it still remains true that the greater part of six thousand of the ballots that were cast in the Board of Education election were probably spoiled by electors who forgot that while each ward had two trustees the elector could only vote for one in this election. Indeed, the estimate of six thousand spoiled ballots is moderate, for thousands of electors who have votes for the Board of Education are not entitled to vote for the Mayor. It may be argued that few of these take the trouble to vote, but that claim is discounted by the fact that in Ward Three, where many electors qualify on their income for a vote for the Board of Education, nearly a thousand more votes were cast for the Board of Education candidates than for the Mayoralty candidates. In the other wards the number of votes counted for the Board fell short of the number of Mayoralty votes as follows. Ward One, 2,609 votes; Ward Two, 668 votes; Ward Four, 169 votes (only two candidates ran in this ward, hence few ballots were spoiled); Ward Five, 1,579 votes; Ward Six, 2,136 votes; Ward Seven, 157 votes.

The alternating system by which the trustees seek endorsation at the polls condemns itself. Is is scarcely short of a calamity that six thousand voters, or thirteen per cent. of the number voting should be disfranchised in the way indicated and their choice of representatives be thus blocked. Nor has any case yet been made out for the two-year term. The electors have not shown themselves too eager to change the personnel of the Board, and it is undemocratic to prevent them when electing trustees, from expressing dissatisfaction with members whose work has not been up to the standard. The Board of Education should lose no time in joining hands with the Council in changing the law on which the present system is founded.— Toronto Star.

CANADIAN PEAT AS A REALIZABLE ASSET

Attention is being drawn to the possibility of expansion of Canadian commerce and industry as a result of the war. This may take the form of domestic production of articles for a supply of which we have been dependent upon foreign sources, or of increased exports to other countries of products hitherto supplied by Germany and Austria.

Among other things this emphasizes the importance which development of the latent resources of Canadian peat bogs might readily assume if full advantage of the new conditions arising from the war were taken.

Sulphate of ammonia, the chief by-product of European peat plants, is a valuable fertiliser worth about $60 per ton. The world's production last year is estimated at 1,365,000 tons, worth about $80,000,000. The chief importing countries are as follows, the figures representing excess of consumption over production:

	Tons	Value
United States and Canada	59,000	$3,500,000
Japan	115,000	7,000,000
Java	57,000	3,500,000
France	15,000	900,000
Spain and Portugal	42,000	2,500,000
Italy	15,000	900,000
	302,000	$18,300,000

Of these amounts the portion supplied by Germany and Austria was:

	Tons	Value
Germany	90,000	$5,400,000
Austria	30.000	1.800,000
	120,000	$7,200,000

These figures show the existence of extensive markets which might be supplied, in part at least, by Canada, and of an opportunity to capture some share of the trade of Germany and Austria in this product.

The extent and rapid growth of the domestic market for artificial fertilisers is shown by the following statement of Canadian imports for 1902 and 1903 and the past six years:

Year	Value
1902	$ 84,996
1903	112,256
1908	403,171
1902	539,690
1910	548,493
1911	586,453
1912	620,147
1913	737,656

Many Canadian peat bogs are rich in nitrogen, and therefore suitable for this industry, and enquiries have already been made by British capitalists with a view to establishing chemical works in Canada, provided that a sufficient supply of peat can be guaranteed.

Apart from the potential value of our peat bogs as a subsidiary source of fuel supply and for production of sulphate of ammonia, there are numerous other products such as moss litter, peat dust, alcohol, acetic acid, acetone, tar, tar oils, creosote, etc., which might form the basis of paying industries giving employment to many people, where now we have only waste lands.

In the peat bogs of Northern Holland alone it is stated that about $3,000,000 worth of peat fuel is made yearly, and over 200,000 tons of peat moss litter. About 10,000 families are employed in the peat fields, and many prosperous towns owe their existence and prosperity to the industry. In addition to shipments made by rail, it is estimated that peat furnishes annually about 48,000 cargoes to the Dutch canal boats.—Journal of the Canadian Peat Society.

AT CRITICAL STAGE.

Relations Between Greece and Turkey Strained by Outrages.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The relations between Greece and Turkey have reached a critical stage. The immediate cause of the trouble is the alleged persecution of Greeks in Asia Minor.

A long official despatch from Athens, received in London yesterday, states a number of Greeks have been murdered by Turkish bandits, and asserts that the Turkish authorities are making no effort to arrest the bandits.

A private despatch states Christians are being persecuted by Turkish authorities, who are making requisitions on land owners compelling them to give up large portions of their produce. These requisitions, the despatch says, amount to confiscation, since no money is paid in return and no receipts are given.

"This state of affairs," says the despatch, "coming as it does after the expulsion of 120,000 Greeks from Asia Minor last autumn and the repeated promise of the Porte to stop the systematic extermination of Greeks, renders the situation critical to the utmost degree."

BOMBS AT DUNKIRK.

German Aeroplanes Drop Explosives on North French Towns.

LONDON, Jan. 11. — A Zeppelin airship, accompanied by three German monoplanes, passed over Furnes, Dunkirk and Calais Saturday night, according to The Daily Chronicle's French frontier correspondent. It was believed, the correspondent adds, that the aircraft were headed for Dover. They were flying very high and did not attack the towns they flew over.

No hostile aircraft were sighted at any point along the English coast Sunday, although a vigilant aeroplane and automobile patrol was maintained as a result of the rumors that the Germans was believed to be headed for England.

A despatch from Paris says that a dozen German aeroplanes bombarded Dunkirk and environs yesterday. Thirty bombs were thrown by the airmen, but owing to the precautions that had been taken there were few victims. The material damage was unimportant.

GETTING INTO CHRIST'S BODY

"Putting on Christ"—"The Very Elect" — Their Citizenship in Heaven — "Christian World" a Misnomer—Civilization Not Christianity—Kingdoms of This World Basis of Membership in the Church of Christ—Covenant Relationship With God Through the Precious Blood—Character-Likeness to Christ a Necessary Acquirement.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

PASTOR RUSSELL

Providence, R. I., Jan. 10.—Pastor Russell delivered a very interesting discourse here to-day on the text, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." (Acts 26: 28.) He said in part:

A Christian is a person who intelligently believes that he is by nature a sinner, that by Divine grace Jesus Christ the Righteous died for his sins, and that through faith in the atoning blood and obedience to the Redeemer's teachings he has become "a New Creature in Christ Jesus." For such, "Old things have passed away, and all things have become new." Such New Creatures are separate and distinct from all other members of the race. Instead of earthly aims, ambitions and hopes, theirs are Heavenly.

It is not sufficient that these should make the proper start of faith in Christ and full consecration to do God's will and not their own wills. It is incumbent upon them, after having made such a start and after having been begotten of the Holy Spirit, that they shall grow in grace, knowledge and love. (2 Peter 3:18.) This is styled "putting on Christ"; that is to say, adding the graces of character which God will accept and reward with association with the Lord Jesus Christ in His Kingdom. For these God has made provision of spiritual food in the Bible—"meat in due season for the Household of Faith." (Matthew 24:45.) These are represented as at first "babes in Christ," requiring "the milk of the Word," but if faithful gradually attaining full stature —"strong in the Lord and the power of His might."

Such spirit-begotten Christians must needs "fight a good fight"—not with others, but with themselves—overcoming the weaknesses and besetments of their own fallen flesh, the allurements of their environment and the wiles of the Adversary. Such as are faithful in these respects are Scripturally styled "overcomers," "the very Elect." The promise to them is that they shall have part in the Chief, or best, Resurrection, and thereafter be no longer humans, but spirit beings of the highest order—"partakers of the Divine nature." These in death are "sown in weakness," "in dishonor," human beings, but are raised from the dead "in glory," "in power," spirit beings.—1 Corinthians 15:43.

Jesus' promise to these overcomers reads, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne, even as I overcame and am set down with My Father in His Throne"—"I will give him power over the nations," etc. Again He says, "Blessed and holy are all those who have part in the Chief Resurrection; on such the Second Death hath no power, but they shall be priests unto God and unto Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years."—Revelation 3:21; 2:26; 20:6.

All Jesus' teachings are applicable to this special class; namely, those who become His disciples, His followers. His words. He did not address to be a Teacher of the world, but merely of those who leave the world, sacrificing all to become His disciples. To these He said, "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." Again, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you." The great Teacher did not include the nominal church as His disciples, but rather counted them in with the world. In evidence of this, we note the fact that it was the world which persecuted Him was the Jewish nation, professedly God's consecrated people; and that those who have persecuted the followers of Jesus have likewise been nominally people of God, but really of the world.

These are the Christians addressed by the Master, saying, "I say unto you, That ye resist not evil; but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if any man shall sue thee at law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain."—Matthew 5:39-42.

The thought of non-resistance is here, yet not to the extreme degree supposed by some. The turning of the other cheek, as illustrated by Jesus' own conduct, was a figurative expression, signifying the willingness to have both cheeks smitten rather than to do injury to another. Christians are to be law-abiding, whether they consider the laws just or unjust. If, therefore, the law deprive them of a coat, they are to yield it up. If it go still further and deprive them of their cloak, they are still to be non-resistant to the law, but submit to it with good grace, knowing that hereunto they were called.

Be it noted that neither the coat nor the cloak was to be given up upon demand merely, but only after the law, justly or unjustly, had so decreed. Similarly with respect to the compulsory walking of a mile: the Christian is not to submit himself to every whim of everybody; but, seeking to do the will of God, be is to go about his own business, unless the opposition to him amount to a compelling. And this compelling, under ordinary circumstances, would mean a legal compelling; for the protection of the laws of the land in which he lives may be sought to protect his rights and liberties, as St. Paul appealed to governors and kings.

Christians are to love their enemies in the same sense that God loves are not to love their enemies in the sense of affectionate love and tenderness, such as they bestow upon their families, friends and lovable persons. Their love for their enemies, as defined by Jesus, should be such as would lead them to feed their bitterest enemy if he were hungry, to clothe him if he were naked. They should not pray against their enemies, but for their enemies in the sense of wishing, desiring, for them enlightenment and true wisdom, which would turn them from being enemies and evil-doers, to make of them followers of Jesus or, at least, well-doers.

Christians are not to lay up for themselves treasures on earth; for they have renounced the earth and all hopes of a future life upon earth. Their walk in the footsteps of Jesus signifies that as He cast aside earthly ambitions, hopes and aims, so would they, taking instead the Heavenly ambitions, hopes and aims. In other words, they live for the future. This will not hinder them from the ordinary pursuits of life to the extent that may be necessary in "providing things honest in the sight of all men"—in providing for their families, etc. But, with these Christians, any overplus above life's necessities represents so much opportunity for serving the Lord and His Cause; and in so doing, these are laying up treasure in Heaven—a future reward.

This does not signify that they must live "from hand to mouth" nor that, if they have possessions, they must riotously distribute these to others. On the contrary, they are to seek in all things to have the mind of the Lord—to do God's will. God's mind is a sound mind; and these Christians, in seeking to do God's will, are said to have "the spirit of a sound mind." This dictates that they should live wisely and economically.

To these Christians, everything that comes to them or that they possess by nature is considered a thing of God because in becoming followers of Christ, they made a full consecration of their wills—their all—to God. Hence from that moment forward, these Christians are stewards of God's mercies—stewards of their time, their talents, their influence, their property, their all. According to the way they use their stewardship, investing their talents to the Master's praise, will be His commendation of them, as represented in the parable. Whether many talents are possessed or few, the commendation is to those who have done well, have been good and faithful in the use of their talents, not for self-aggrandizement or show, or worldly accumulations of treasure, but faithful in the service of God, showing forth God's praises in the assisting of others and themselves to the knowing and doing of the Divine will.

Christians are to "lend, hoping for nothing in return," and not, as the world, merely to be willing to do good and to lend to those who would do as much or more in return. Christians are thus to illustrate the fact that they are children of the Highest, that they have been begotten of God, that they have His Holy Spirit and disposition, and that it is shining out more and more in their words and conduct as they grow in the character-likeness of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Christians are not to go to war. Their fight is not to be with carnal weapons, but with "the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God." They have the most powerful weapon known in the world for their warfare. This does not signify that they may not put bolts and bars upon their doors to prevent robbery. It not signify that they may not call for police protection; for this is a thing they pay for in taxation and are entitled to according to the laws of the world. They may not claim of their own nation anything that an alien might not claim; but they may claim all that an alien may claim. Indeed, Christians are styled aliens, strangers, foreigners, so far as the present government of the world is concerned. Their citizenship, according to the Bible, is the Heavenly one, which they will fully enter into when they shall have shared the Chief Resurrection.

The Bible knows nothing of Christian nations or of a Christian world. The Bible puts the Christian as separate and distinct from the world and from all nations. Christians are a nation, or people, by themselves, in the same sense that the Jews are a nation, or people, by themselves. "Ye are a Royal Priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people"—a people for a purpose. (1 Peter 2:9.) The term Christian nation comes from a serious doctrinal error which crept into the Church about 600 A. D. At that time Pope Leo III. began to recognize as Christian nations all the nations which recognized his Pontificate. The custom has prevailed and is still in vogue amongst Protestants and Catholics; but it is wholly unscriptural.

A Christian conscripted to the army or the navy would be "subject to the powers that be," and obeying the Master's words would go, as in Matthew 5:41: "Whosoever shall compel thee to go." The Christian compelled to enter the army or navy might properly request service as a non-combatant in the Quarter-master's Department or in the Hospital Department; but if required to kill, he is to obey God rather than man, and not kill. He may comply with his orders to the extent of going into the trenches and being shot at, but no further.

Is it urged that such a view of Christianity would wreck our present civilization? We reply that nothing in the Bible implies that our civilization is Christian or that the Lord ever expected it to be Christian. God's time for saving the world from its sin and weakness has not yet come. The present is merely the time for calling, finding, testing and delivering the Elect. The Elect, when glorified, will constitute Messiah's Kingdom, and with Him will be empowered fully with spiritual control for the government of the entire world.

Then will come the time for the enlightenment and uplift and blessing of the whole world of mankind—the non-elect. Theirs will not be a blessing of the same kind that the Elect will secure, but a blessing which they will appreciate equally. The world's blessing and salvation will not signify a change of nature from human to spirit, but a Restitution to human perfection.—Acts 3:19-23.

What are to-day styled "Christian nations" are in the Bible styled "kingdoms of this world"; and their complete disintegration is Scripturally outlined as incidental to the establishment of God's glorious Kingdom under Messiah, for which we pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as in Heaven."

Some may wonder how it ever came to pass that all the people of civilized lands are enumerated as Christians—except Jews and professed Infidels. Statistics tell us that all the inhabitants of Italy are Christians; that more than ninety-nine per cent. of the population of Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, etc., are Christians; and that the total number of Christians thus reckoned is nearly five hundred millions. Surely it is time that intelligent people realize that some great mistake has been made, and that more than ninety-nine per cent. of these "Christians" make no pretense of being followers of Jesus.

The error arose in the now long ago. When Pope Leo III. recognized a king as a Christian king and his kingdom as a Christian kingdom, he recognized that king's subjects as Christian. There we have the matter in a nut-shell. The whole thing was a mistake. The king was not a Christian, did not know the meaning of Christianity and was not taught it. His kingdom was not a Christian kingdom, and his people were not Christians.

Meantime, here and there, obscured to the world, there have been true followers of the Lord Jesus Christ in every denomination. They have been out of accord generally with the great leaders of the church systems as well as with the political leaders of the world. It has been true of them as the Apostle wrote: "The world knoweth us not, even as it knew Him not." (1 John 3:1.) The world does not yet know, understand or appreciate that the Church of Christ is not to be found in any one of the professed churches of various names—Roman, English, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, etc. The Church of Christ is composed exclusively of those who have come into a covenant with the Lord through faith in His precious Blood, who have been begotten of the Holy Spirit, and who are seeking to walk to the best of their ability in the footsteps of Jesus.—1 Peter 2:21.

The theory that Christians only are saved from eternal torture has had much to do with the error of counting all civilized people Christians. The creeds save Christians only — Jews, Mohammedans, heathen, all go to Hell to roast eternally. Roman Catholics provide a Second Chance for members of their church, in Purgatory; and many Protestants hold to a Second Chance for the heathen who have never heard of Christ. All the while, however, the Bible declares for only one chance, but that a full one for every member of the human family.

The only chance offered during this Gospel Age is the opportunity of becoming a member of the Church — a true follower of Jesus. Such are to get the Heavenly inheritance, but not until the Resurrection. The remainder of the world will be offered an earthly future; and this offer will begin with the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom of a thousand years.

The Bible nowhere teaches that either saints or sinners pass to a conscious condition at death. The Bible declares that they all "sleep," and that the awakening time will be at the Second Coming of the Redeemer to establish His Kingdom. The First Resurrection will be the Church, and subsequently "every man in his own order." When once the fact is grasped that the Bible Hell is the grave—Sheol, Hades—then all is plain.

The great Divinely arranged Purgatory, to last a thousand years, will be glorious. All the heathen and the ignorant, superstitious millions of Christendom, who were taught to call themselves Christians, but who knew that they were not, will have the opportunity of coming to a knowledge of the true God and of His gracious provision for them.

BACKACHE

WAS SO BAD

COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

For backache, lame or weak back, one of the commonest and most distressing symptoms of kidney inaction, there is no remedy to equal Doan's Kidney Pills for taking out the stitches, twitches and twinges, limbering up the stiff back and giving perfect relief and comfort to all poor, suffering women who suffer so much from a weak lame back.

Mrs. Blackburn, R.R. No. 1, Fishburn, Alta., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep my floor. I was advised to try your kidney pills. Before I had used one box there was a great improvement as my back was much better. However, I kept on taking them until my back was completely cured. I highly recommend these pills for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Joked While Charging.

"One realizes with a curious surprise," says G. Ward Price in The London Daily Mail, "that men running across the open towards their death have after all very much the same preoccupations as men running to catch a train at home. They are annoyed when they stumble; they greet out little jokes to each other. 'Don't talk. Keep your wind. Don't waste the steam,' gasps out one Zouave to another as they start a bayonet charge at the great distance of 1,000 yards."

Girls Take the Posts.

All the men hitherto employed there having gone to the front, the work of the Camberwell Public Library is now being carried on by eight girls.

The Hourglass.

Instead of being obsolete and simply an interesting relic, the hourglass in various forms is a twentieth century necessity. A machinist authority points out that for such purposes as timing hardening and tempering tools in twist drill manufacture, where seconds or minutes must be gauged accurately, nothing serves like the hourglass with the right amount of sand. Accuracy to fractions of a second can be had much more easily than by watching the hands of a watch.

Dog Specter.

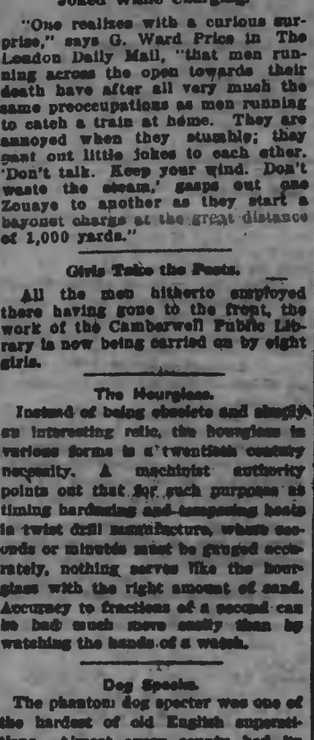
The phantom dog specter was one of the hardest of old English superstitions. Almost every county had its black dog which haunted its lonely spots and was the dread of every native. Most of them were regarded as devils, but some were held to be the spirits of human beings, transformed thus as a punishment. Lady Howard, a Devon notable of the days of James I., for instance, was said to be compelled to haunt Okehampton in the form of a dog as a punishment for her cruelty to her daughter.

Even in driving a bargain it is just as well to keep to the right.

You can't flatter an honest man by telling him that he's honest.

The cat has nine lives, while man has difficulty in leading two.

Satire, like a surgeon's knife, should be used not to wound, but to cure.



THE EXTENDED BATTLEFRONT IN THE EAST — The Russians are now carrying the fighting east of Bukowina 100 miles southeast of Przasnysz. The Germans are likely to reply with another movement against Warsaw.

BELGIANS STILL AT IT—On the northern battlefront—trenches alongside the Dixmude-Nieuport railway which has been the scene of desperate fighting.

The Mystic Canine.

A barrister once opened his cross examination of a handwriting expert by asking, "Where is the dog?"

"What dog?" said the astonished witness.

"The dog," replied the tormentor, "which the judge at the last assizes said he would not hang on your evidence."

The Word Magnet.

Magnet is derived from the name of the city of Magnesia, in Asia Minor, where the properties of the lodestone are said to have been discovered. It has, however, been asserted that the name comes from Magnes, the name of a shepherd who discovered magnetic power by being held on Mount Ida, in Greece, by its attraction for the nails in his shoes.

Same as Being Away.

Neighbor's Little Girl—When did you get back, Mrs. Browne? Did you have a nice time?

Neighbor—Why, I haven't been away, my dear.

"Haven't you, really? I'm sure I heard mother say you and Mr. Browne had been at Loggerheads for a week."—National Monthly.

He Wanted to Know.

"Didn't you say," demanded the young man of the captain, "that this ship was equipped with all appliances for human safety?"

"I did."

"Then how does it happen that I now find myself engaged to a lady I did not know when the vessel left her pier?"—Judge.

Upsetting His Theory.

"The heavy explosions of a battle always cause rain. It rained after Waterloo; it rained after Kootenay; it rained after Marathon."

"But Marathon was fought with spears and arrows, my dear."

"There you go. Always throwing cold water on anything I have to say."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Cremation in Norway.

There is in Norway a law dealing with cremation. According to the act, every person over fifteen years of age can be cremated after death if he or she has made a declaration in the presence of two witnesses. For those under fifteen a declaration on the part of the parents is necessary.—London Standard.

Bullet Wounds.

The entrance wound caused by the modern small arm bullet is not a gruesome spectacle. It is small, and its appearance has been compared to that produced by the bite of a certain parasite insect. Often there is but little external bleeding, but this is not to be taken as a danger signal, as might be popularly supposed.—London Telegraph.

Madison and the Constitution.

It is generally understood that James Madison was the chief author of the constitution of the United States. Beyond a doubt the great instrument was the joint product of the entire convention, but from the best accounts Madison was the man who put it into shape as we have it today.—New York American.

Rather Too Light.

The landlady who had not a reputation for overfeeding her boarders asked her solitary boarder as he looked dolefully at his supper, "Shall I light the gas?"

The boarder gazed at the scanty meal and replied, "Well, no, it isn't necessary; the supper is light enough!"—London Telegraph.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Rumors that the United States might put an embargo on breadstuffs and that the Dardanelles were likely to be forced, proved grim bogies today for owners of wheat. The market after violent changes closed half demoralized at 2¼ to 2⅝ under last night. Other leading staples, too, showed a setback—corn 5-8c to 3-4c net; oats ⅛ to 1c and provisions 5c to 10c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 10.—Quite a bearish sentiment was aroused on the wheat market, which caused a lower opening on all grains, wheat being 1c to 1⅛c lower, oats ½c lower and flax ½c down. The rumor yesterday that Italy and Roumania had entered the war was not quite dispelled this morning and, coupled with this, was the talk of the United States likely to prohibit the exportation of grain—these caused the lower opening. Liverpool cables came late and were strong, which changed the sentiment, and prices rallied quickly, making new high records for the season, and since the Latter boom. Later quite a break took place during the last 15 minutes of business attributed to profit-taking over the week-end. Actual sales for export were claimed to be much lighter today.

The cash demand continues good. No. 1, 2 and 3 northern wheat, and No. 2 C.W. oats are wanted most, but offerings were very scarce. Exporters were buying all offerings in shipping bodies at Ft. William for all rail shipments.

Inspections yesterday 120 cars as against 291 last year and in sight today 750 cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—The export demand for Manitoba spring wheat today was poor, and the prices bid were 1c to 1½ 6d per quarter below what exporters were asking, consequently the volume of business done was small. There was no further business done in oats for export account, but it is estimated that sales of fully 500,000 bushels were made during the week. The condition of the flour market is strong and another [illegible] is fairly active and firm. Butter [illegible] stronger and prices have scored a further advance of ½c per pound with a fair trade passing. Cheese is quiet, but firm.

Receipts of butter for week were 1150 packages, and cheese 711 boxes, as compared with 863 butter and 389 cheese for the same week a year ago. Eggs fairly active with a strong undertone. Receipts for the week 2993 cases, as compared with 995 a year ago. Stocks: Wheat, 396,107; corn, 115,130; oats, 1,296,989; barley, 286,976; rye, 6985; buckwheat, 9721; flax, 56,491; flour, 135,196 sacks.

Suffrage Bill In U. S. House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11. — The most important subject to be taken up by the House this week is the Mondell resolution proposing an amendment to the federal constitution to provide for woman suffrage. The resolution will be considered tomorrow under a special rule allowing six hours for general debate, after which the measure and amendments will be voted upon until finally disposed of.

It is generally agreed that it will not obtain this number of votes and is therefore doomed to defeat.

Wreck Reveals Missing Brass.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 11—A carload of brass shipped by a Toronto dealer to a London company was wrecked on the switching line yesterday. As the cargo fell on the ground many hundreds of railway brasses were discovered, and the railways have asked the police to investigate, as such goods are not sold by the railways.

ULTIMATUM TO TURKEY EXPIRED LAST NIGHT

Ultimatum to Turkey Which Expired Saturday Night Has Not Yet Been Followed Up So Far as Indications Show

LONDON, Jan. 11.—There is no indication in any of the despatches received here that Italy has followed up her ultimatum to Turkey, which expired last night. The attitude of Italy, Roumania, Greece and Bulgaria continues to be the subject of much speculation, but nothing definite has yet transpired to justify the hopes so often expressed that these countries would at an early date join the allies.

A Petrograd despatch, on the contrary, hints in broad terms that Russia, by her sweeping advance through Bukowina, and invasion of Transylvania, is less concerned as to the plans of Roumania.

The despatch says: The recent Russian victories in Bukowina and the occupation of Radautz and Suczawa (Bukowina) enable the Russians, in their positions on the banks of the Tizsa (Sereth and Moldava rivers, to cut off Roumania entirely from Austria-Hungary. This is the situation as outlined in despatches received in Petrograd from the front.

This position of the Russians considerably alters the military and diplomatic situation, military men say, since the yielding of Transylvania to Roumania no longer depends upon Austria-Hungary, and any possibility of the latter invading the Russian southern provinces of Volhynia and Bessarabia through Transylvania is now destroyed. The question of Roumania's future attitude, that is, whether she will join the allies, is now also less important, it is asserted, because the victorious Russian armies in their wedge-like position between Roumania and Austria-Hungary would paralyze any hostile action of either against Russia.

A despatch from Paris says: Russia's tremendous success in the Austrian crown land of Bukowina, together with the growing friction between Turkey and Italy, points to the speedy entrance of Roumania and Italy into the war. Signs are multiplying also that Bulgaria and Greece, reassured by the negotiations looking to a rapprochement of all the Balkan States, also are believed to be ready to join the allies in war against the Sultan with the full might of their armies.

CALLS REVIEW ARTICLE NONSENSICAL TWADDLE

"Peterboro' First" Points Out That Dr. Reid, Minister of Customs, Headed a Deputation From Smith's Falls on the Same Errand as That of the Peterboro' Visitors.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I see by Saturday evening's Review that it strongly condemns what it is pleased to call "The push and pull policy of the Examiner," and among a lot of other theoretic claptrap, it says:

"Mr. Burnham is to be congratulated that he will not stoop to such a policy, nor lay before the rising generation of Canada's future men and women such an example of depravity and puerility"

Did any sane community ever hear such a lot of nonsensical twaddle. Read this article, from Saturday's Mail and Empire:

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—A deputation from Smith's Falls, headed by Dr. Hanna, M.P., and Hon. Dr. Reid, Minister of Customs, waited on the Prime Minister to-day and requested that a battalion be mobilized in that town in connection with the recruiting of expeditionary forces. Smith's Falls has contributed 400 or 500 men to the cause of the Empire and its citizens think it should share in the benefits accruing from its use as a mobilization point.

But of course Hon. Dr. Reid, Minister of Customs, knows nothing of the science or ethics of the Government of which he is a member. Oh, no, that belongs to Mr. Burnham and the Review. I would strongly advise the Review not to harness itself to Mr. Burnham's chariot, if it does it will need to have its seven league boots on to keep up. All honour to these gentlemen who, unable to get Mr. Burnham to move, took upon themselves the task of representing this constituency at Ottawa; and although no immediate good will likely result from the visit of this deputation, there can be no shadow of a doubt but that it will bear fruit in due time. I think it ill becomes the Review to try to belittle the efforts of such representative citizens as his Worship Mayor Buller, Mr. E. G. Patterson, Mr. W. H. Denham and others to advance the interests of this City.

I am sorry, indeed, that Peterborough has not been selected as a centre of mobilization. What a grand patriotic object lesson it would be to the youth of this City to have these troops amongst us and to know that in a few months at most these same men would be shedding their very heart's blood for our King and country, and, incidentally, for us.

As we all know, we must keep on constantly urging the Government to do its duty and although Hon. Sam. Hughes told this deputation from Peterborough that called upon him, that if any more mobilization centres were to be selected Lindsay would have the call before Peterborough (because of course Lindsay is in the Minister's constituency and he has the pull). Still we should do everything we legitimately can to advance the interests of our City.

Yours truly,
"Peterborough First."

The election of a member to the Committee, which has charge of the charitable funds under the will of the late Almira Grover Foley. The retiring member is Mr. J. C. Anderson.

CASUALTIES ARE HEAVY.

Gen. von Heeringen Has Lost 2,000 In One Day.

PARIS, Jan. 11. — The Echo de Paris states that Gen. von Heeringen, commanding the German centre, lost 2,000 in killed, wounded and prisoners in the battle of Perthes-les-Hurlus on Friday alone. Since then the German counter-attacks have been equally furious, and it is believed their losses by this time may have reached double that number.

Report of the General Nurse

Actual Nursing of the Patients is One of the Least of a Nurse's Duties

In district nursing, the actual nursing of the patient is one of the least of the duties which the nurse is called upon to perform for the class of people with whom she meets. To this branch of our work, no more appropriate name can be given than instructive nursing.

The most helpful of all forms of public life is the work of the visiting nurse in the reduction of infant mortality. In this work the nurse goes into the homes where there are poor, sick, babies. She opens the closed windows, removes superfluous clothes prepares the babies' feeding, gives it a bath, as an object lesson to the mother, and performs a hundred otherer services which together means a difference between life and dath.

In obstetric cases our daily visits are not relaxed until both mother and baby are all right. As for the babies, we see that they have a good start in life, at least. Where the mother is the patient, and housekeeping thus at a standstill, explains further the frequent necessity of the nurse instituting a clean-up of the patient's room at the outset. If there is a woman, perhaps a neighbour, or an older child to assist, the nurse enlists their services, but if, as is sometimes the case, there is only the patient and small children, the nurse, if she possesses the sincere desire to help, brings order out of chaos by her own hands. No doors are barred to the nurse, because the trained nurse does not come as a critic, a patronizer, or a faddist, but as a paid helper in time of urgent need.

I beg to submit the following report for the year 1914:

Number of patients—125.
Number of visits, 1,770.
Number of paid visits—1,470.
Money collected, as fees, per services, $39.75.

Called on night duty nine times during the year.—Edith Hamilton.

FIGURES ARE SUSPICIOUS

Britain Will Give Every Consideration to Honest U. S. Shipping

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11. — Great Britain's preliminary reply to the treatment of American commerce by the British fleet was made public here and in London yesterday by mutual agreement between the State Department and the British Foreign Office.

The British communication concurs in the view of the United States that commerce between neutral nations should be interfered with only when imperatively necessary, and officials of the Washington Government construed it as conceded that the principles expressed by the American note were just and upheld by the previously accepted usages of international law.

The only formal comment made today was contained in a brief statement issued by Secretary Bryan, who said:

"This answer being preliminary and not being intended as a complete reply, we will postpone comment until the full answer is received."

Briefly, the British note, while conceding the principles of the American Government's contentions, points out difficulties in actual practice, refers to alleged fraudulent practices by shippers and cites statistics showing an increase rather than a decrease in certain neutral commerce in support of Great Britain's suspicions that Germany and Austria have been indirectly obtaining contraband through neutral countries. The note promises, however, that "Great Britain will make redress" whenever the action of the British fleet may unintentionally exceed "the limits of international law."

Sir Edward Grey states that there are four consignments to Sweden at the present time of copper and aluminum which though definitely "consigned" to Sweden are, according to positive evidence in possession of his Majesty's Government, definitely "destined" for Germany. He gives figures showing the enormous increase in copper exports from the United States to neutral ports, and declares that cotton has always been on the free list.

As to the protest against holding up cargoes of foodstuffs, Sir Edward agrees that, generally, they should not be detained, but adds:

"We cannot give an unlimited and unconditional undertaking in view of the departure by those against whom we are fighting from hitherto accepted rules of civilization and humanity, and the uncertainty as to the extent to which such rules may be violated by them in future."

The note concludes with the expression of a desire to enter into "any arrangement by which mistakes can be avoided and reparation secured promptly when any injury to the neutral owners of a ship or cargo has been improperly caused."

While they are generally reserved in their comment, it may be stated authoritatively that high officials of the United States Government regard the tone of the note as entirely friendly and believe, moreover, that the discussion which will follow it will be carried on in the same vein with a desire on the part of both countries to reach a satisfactory understanding.

The admission by Great Britain of one of the chief points in the American note—that the relations between neutrals were those of normal times of peace and not of war—was gratifying to officials, who believed that the controversy would now resolve itself into a frank discussion of what were the actual necessities of the case which impel interference by a belligerent when suspecting that the ultimate destination of a neutral cargo is to belligerent territory.

British Newspapers Well Pleased.

LONDON, Jan. 11. — The London morning newspapers, in commenting on the reply of Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, to the protest of the United States Government over delays to American cargoes through their being held up for examination by British warships, confine themselves in the main to expressions of complete approval of the Foreign Secretary's handling of the difficult and delicate subject.

Recognizing that the reply is only a preliminary one, the newspapers refrain from any detailed argument or criticism, but express satisfaction over the spirit of cordial frankness with which Sir Edward Grey has met the American arguments.

The figures quoted by Sir Edward of American trade are held to present a strong case from the British standpoint, and the Government is fully supported by the newspapers in its view, that while all possible concessions should be made where only questions of procedure are concerned, Britain's position in the war precludes any real change of policy.

A TRIP TO SAVE THE FLYER

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Don't you think it would be a bright idea to send the City Fathers, ex-City Fathers, the Temple Band and the Fire Department down to Montreal to call the Grand Trunk down, or in other words, call them up on the carpet in regard to cutting off the Toronto-Peterborough "flyer," as I have no doubt the city will see its finish if this "flyer" is cut out. It's neither here nor there with us whether the train pays the Grand Trunk or not. We want as many trains as possible coming into Peterborough, with or without passengers. Now this would give the boys a chance to see Montreal and enjoy another pleasant trip at the people's expense, and advertise the city, especially the band, when there isn't much doing, cost only a few dollars, and wouldn't do the Grand Trunk any harm.

Don't forget to buy the tickets over the Grand Trunk to insure success.

Well-Wisher.

Where The Styles Come From

More Sand On The Streets

The Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Allow me a space in your valuable paper as regards the City Fathers putting a little more sand on the sidewalks. They are a disgrace to our fair City, and most dangerous to our good citizens. Down on Romaine Street the sidewalks are most dangerous, and the people going to and fro to their place of worship are liable to a severe fall that might cost the City a few hundred dollars, which the ratepayers would have to face through the council's neglect to buy sand for that purpose. The main streets are all right, but it's the other streets that need sanding. You want your poll tax shortly and your rates. Well, look here, your are not going to pull the wool over our eyes all the while. Put sand on the sidewalks in the side streets and don't have people walking on the middle of the road, when they are paying for their safety. —Yours,

"BUNCOMBE."

It Don't Always Pay to be Skeptical.

When a newspaper writer and proof reader that works nights can feed himself out of dyspepsia, which most all that class suffer with, it is worth while to know the kind of food used.

This man says:

"Being a newspaper writer and proof reader, also a graduate in medicine as well, though not practicing, makes a combination that would produce a skeptic on the subject if anything would.

"Day after day I read the proof on the Grape-Nuts advertisements with the feeling that they were all 'buncombe.' All this time I was suffering from dyspepsia from the improper food I was eating at the restaurant.

"One day I saw a package of Grape-Nuts at the restaurant and tried some with cream. The food took my fancy at once. After a few lunches on it at midnight I noted an improvement in my feelings, and was able to work with less fatigue.

"I have used Grape-Nuts as a regular diet since then, and have improved greatly. The old dyspepsia and bad feelings that I thought were necessary adjuncts to night work disappeared, and I am able to do much more and better work with less effort than ever before.

"I was nearly ready to give up and seek health in some other walk in life but thanks to my change in diet I am now all right." "There's a Reason."

THE BOARD IS GRATEFUL

The Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—At a meeting of the Library Board held on Thursday evening, Jan. 7th, it was unanimously resolved that the secretary be instructed to convey to the editors of the Examiner and the library their warm appreciation of the consistent support that they have given to the work of the institution, and also of the manner in which such support has been rendered. The members of the board feel that but for the ungrudging help accorded by editor and staff alike, much less good would have been accomplished in the Library.—I remain, yours very truly,

Does Pure Food Expert Dr. Harvey Wiley.

Washington, Jan. 8.— Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, pure food expert, takes issue with Dr. Louis F. Bishop of Fordham University who recently said that "diet is the danger to brain workers."

"I have been looking for a brain food all my life," said Dr. Wiley. "Nobody but quacks knows anything about brain food nowadays. The old idea that fish was a brain food was exploded by Mark Twain. Asked how much fish he would advise a person to take to develop a well-balanced brain, Mark replied: 'Begin by eating two whales.'

"Good food, free from poisonous ingredients, will feed the brain as well as all parts of the body."

BRITISH ARE SAID TO BE IN POSSESSION OF LILLE

Civilians Are Alarmed by Fact That Allies Are Within Nine Miles of Belgian Seaport

LONDON, Jan. 11.—A despatch to The Daily Express from Boulogne asserts that confirmation has been obtained of the rumors that the Germans have evacuated Lille, and that the city is now virtually in the possession of the British.

German civilians are leaving Ostend because the allies have now advanced to within nine miles of that town, according to a despatch to The Amsterdam Telegraaf from its Sluis correspondent.

German troops were driven to the north yesterday by the French forces near Beausejour, and also in that section of the battlefield between Rheims and the Argonne. North of Beausejour, the French captured a field fort from the Kaiser's troops, while to the west of that town the invaders were driven from a line of trenches.

West of the Argonne district French artillerymen dispersed a force of German sappers who were trying to work their way up to the positions held by the republic's soldiers.

Soissons has been under bombardment again by the Germans, simultaneously with a new attack by the Kaiser's troops to regain the positions they lost to the French near Soupire. This attack failed, the French holding their ground on all the vantage points they had seized.

Strongly organized onslaughts by the Germans in the forest of Apremont, France, and northwest of Wattwiller, near Thann, Alsace, have been repulsed by the French.

The struggle in Alsace continues in spite of the heavy rains. There is more than a foot of water in the trenches. The Germans have already lost in killed and wounded 5,000 men, according to reliable reports, and Belfort, the great French fortress, is filled with prisoners — men mostly 40 years of age or more.

Yesterday's bulletins from the French War Office said:

"Last night in the Champagne region two counter-attacks by the Germans — one to the north of Perthes, the other to the north of Beausejour were repelled. In the Argonne two minor attacks by the enemy have failed—at Fontain Madame and at St. Hubert. There was a lively fusillade in the direction of Hill 263, west of Bourneuilles, and on La Haisedu des Nourissons but no attacks.

"From the sea to the Oise there have been artillery duels.

"Upon the Aisne, in the region of Soissons, the enemy, in spite of many attacks, has not been able to recapture the trenches which he had lost. At the end of the day he again bombarded Soissons.

"In the country from Rheims to the Argonne our artillery has shelled the German trenches very effectively at several points driving away bodies of sappers.

"The positions which we have gained at Perthes and around that village have been organized. A counter-attack of the enemy to the west of Perthes has been repulsed. In the neighborhood of Laferte de Beausejour we have made two-fold progress by gaining ground to the west and by taking possession of an old fort to the north.

"In the Argonne the enemy has bombarded the region of Four-de-Paris; we have replied and destroyed a German blockhouse.

"The enemy's efforts have been continued on 'Hill 263.'

"To the west of Bourneulles all our positions have been maintained.

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse nothing noteworthy occurred.

"On the heights of the Meuse in the forest of Apremont one of the enemy's attacks has been checked by the fire of our artillery.

"In the Vosges to the northwest of Watwiller (in the region of Thann), we have also repulsed an attack."

Saturday night's official statement said:

"To the north of Soissons our advances of yesterday has been maintained. A new German offensive has been repulsed. This morning the trenches conquered between Perthes Lez Hurles and Hill 200 were subjected to a lively counter-attack but the enemy was driven back after having suffered severe losses."

"Queen's" Said Farewell To Soldier Students

The following item, from a Kingston paper of Jan. 4, will be of interest to the many friends and graduates of Queen's University in this city.

Among those in the overseas contingent, who were present at the dinner spoke of here, were three Peterborough young men, Corp. S. W. Laing and Sappers A. Nimro and E. W. Langford, about whom mention was made in Saturday's issue of The Examiner.

Queen's University did well last Tuesday night to give a dinner to the overseas contingent of the 5th Field Company of Canadian Engineers, who left town on Monday. In the present crisis the universities of Canada have deserved well of their country, and of the universities of Canada none has done so well as Queen's, thanks especially to the splendid work of the faculty of Practical Science. When the war began the 5th Field Company was sent to Valcartier, so that Queen's was thus the only Canadian university to have an organized contingent at that camp. Of the work done there professional soldiers and volunteers alike have spoken in the highest terms. Of the men present about sixty under Major Alexander Macphail went overseas, and are now, so far as known, at Salisbury Plain. Major Macphail himself has won the highest praise from Canadian and British officers alike, and a number of his men have already been recommended for commissions in the new army, popularly, but incorrectly known as Kitchener's army.

With the second contingent the 5th Field company is sending three officers and eighty men, being again the only university body to send an organized unit. Of these eighty about seventy are members of the Kingston School of Mining, the other ten being picked men from the faculties of arts and medicine.

Thus the Kingston Schol of Mining, originally founded by the enterprise of the citizens of Kingston and still largely choosing its governors from the limestone city, has already sent over half of its students to do battle in the cause of liberty. Every citizen of Kingston wishes them Godspeed. We pray that all may have a safe return, and we know that in any case the honour of Kingston and of the university is safe in their hands. They are not ordinary infantry men, necessary and honourable though the task of these is; they are trained engineers; some of them are scientific experts who had already begun their life's work; now they are going to employ in behalf of Canada this special training gained by years of hard study.

In addition to these there remains a base company of about sixty men who will do active work on home service and help to keep alive the spirit of patriotism and self-sacrifice among those who remain. Their task is less glorious, but not less honourable.—Kingston Whig.

Mark Street Methodist Sunday Morning Service

"Prayer Keeps the Christian's Armour Bright"

"From every stormy wind that blows,
From every swelling tide of woes,
There is a calm or sure retreat,
'Tis found beneath the mercy-seat."

* * * * *

Prayer is the wing where with the soul ascends to heaven.

Tennyson says: "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

Archibald Alexander had a splendid conception of prayer when he said: "It is as natural and reasonable for a dependent creature to appeal to its Creator for what it needs, as for a child to solicit the aid of a parent who is believed to have the disposition and ability to bestow what it needs."

"Trouble and perplexity drive men to prayer, and prayer drives away perplexity and trouble."

"Heaven is never deaf, but when man's heart is dumb."

With some such thoughts in his mind, particularly the last, the Rev. Mr. Phelps, in the course of a thought-inspiring sermon, declared that Christ is rendered impotent by a prayerless church.

He took as his text, Luke 11:1, "Lord, teach us to pray," the context being: "And it came to pass, that as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of the disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples, followed in the next few verses by the recital of what is known as the Lords Prayer, which, Wellington affirms, contains the sum total of religion and morals.

Mr. Phelps entertains no illusions about the value of prayer to the individual and to the church, and many times referred to the splendid meetings of the past week, and their significance.

In leading up to the thought of the prayerless church he referred to an advertisement which he had seen on an idle mill: "Power to let." This he thought might very appropriately be tacked on the doors of many churches. "Power to let"; power not being utilized. Power is another word for prayer; it soars on high to Jesus, to the hand that moves the world.

"Does God answer prayer,"

This question was answered in a novel manner one time in a class of men. The leader desired a variation in the form of service; he seemed to realize that the class was not accomplishing the work it should, and asked the members to come with answers to that question. The response was remarkable. A father had been praying for a sick child; the Great Physician had come, and the child had been restored to health. More than one reported that peace and blessings had come to homes where there had been shadows other than those of sickness and death.

Prayer, Mr. Phelps asserted, was the veriest commonplace of religious experience, and because of its commonness it has fallen into disuse. Faith in the power and efficacy of prayer is an unrealized asset of the church. The believer has faith in prayer. There are too many experiences in his life to doubt it. As proof he cited the week of prayer, and the splendid attendance, especially on Tuesday night, when nearly five hundred were present. He regretted, however, that few men were there, men upon whose shoulders the burdens of th church rested. Their belief in the power of prayer was not sufficiently strong for them to put other, secondary things, aside and attend.

The British Empire is awake to God as it never has been before. To God all men shall come, and only as the church opens its doors will the world come to the church.

In the days of our Saviour, the people came out to meet Him because they had heard He has raised Lazarus from the dead. In like manner, today, the needy world is flocking to where there is something doing, something being done, to the churches where prayer ascends, prayer that moves the world to bring salvation down.

Evangelist Finny, before his conversion, was asked by some church people, "Shall we pray for you?" His answer was: "No thank you, your prayers never seem to be of any avail." Does that apply to us? Are we crowding out prayer by secondary things?

The first words of the Lord's Prayer, "Our Father," make every man a brother to some other. Every barrier is broken down; we know who is our neighbour.

In a recent charge Mr. Phelps witnessed the burial of one of the best workers in one of the largest churches of the city. It was one of the largest funerals the people had ever seen, a last tribute to a life of helpfulness to others. One who had been touched by that helping hand, told Mr. Phelps how he had been met by Mr. Johnson, who saw trouble written across his face. Putting his hand on his shoulders, Mr. Johnson raised his eyes and said: "God Almighty, bless brother S——." The prayer was no sooner uttered than the brother felt a wave of peace come over his soul. Oh, the power of prayer!

"Lord teach us to pray" should be the cry of the church to-day, lest it become a glorified clubdom and do nothing for its needy fellowmen. Without prayer she will drift into the rocks of unbelief and become a dismal failure. Prayer keeps the Christian's armour bright. When we cease to pray God becomes a phantom.

Strange indeed, would it be if the minister of the Christian Gospel did not speak of prayer. Christ prayed. His whole life was one of prayer. He had no sins to confess; his was a life of purity, yet he many times was alone with God. So we must have times of quiet, of aloneness, when the soul can commune with Christ; silent places in the hurry of life, which will make us free from the trials and troubles which beset us. Those are the best hours, when the most vital work is done, when the soul gets its poise, and its quickening for duty.

In concluding, Mr. Phelps drew attention to the need for associate prayer; circles of prayer. Even our Master knew of our weaknesses and excuses for not meeting more for prayer, when He said: "That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in Heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them."

The mid-week prayer meeting is a necessity. Christ is rendered impotent by a prayerless church. No lives our touched, no lives are made beautiful in a prayerless church. Even the sermons fail.

What of the New Year?

We must get out of the rut; we must put aside those things which hinder us from spending an hour together with Christ. Then it would not be long before souls would be converted, and the church filled with power.

Prayer moves the arm that moves the world to bring salvation down.

God's New Year Call To Youth

"Watch Ye, Stand Fast in The Faith, Quit You Like Men, Be Strong"

The evening service at the George Street Methodist Church was an inspiration to the youth of our city. A large congregation, the most of whom were young people, listened with rapt attention to a stirring appeal from the pastor, Rev. Mr. Peever, who considered it a great privilege and at the same time a great responsibility to address such a large body of youth, that they might receive inspiration from the sanctuary.

Taking as his text, 1 Cor. 16:13, "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong," he said there never was a time when thoughtful men were giving more attention to youth, when the Church and educators were trying to understand young life, to be sympathetic with it, when there was such a strong desire for youth to express itself in full service. Christian people, everywhere, are anxious that young people shall have a good time in their youth, but if we would help the young life we must understand the ambitions, the desires of youth. This point was nicely illustrated by the story of a boy visiting his grandmother in a large city. The two were looking out from an elevated position, and the old lady drew the lad's attention to a flag floating in the distance. The boy, however, could not see the flag. "Cant you see it?" she queried. "Why, I can see it quite plainly."

At last she put her face down beside the face of her grandson, and she could not see it herself.

We do not get down to the level of youth, instead, we are often harsh in our judgements and unsympathetic. We must know their ambitions, their desires, to be helpful.

God's New Year call to youth, as expressed in the text, contained three challenges: vigilance, steadfastness and courage, which they must have to come through this year and bring out the best that is in them.

How they need to be watchful, always alert!

In the case of older people their habits are, for the most part, formed. They have homes, and are surrounded by loved ones, who hold them up. But with youth it is different. Their habits are not yet formed, and they lack the home life.

God's call is for vigilance, guarding against temptation. There is a devil, a very personal devil, and in our lives we see how many have challenged Satan and are now lying beaten and broken on life's pathway.

Growing youth is curious, curious of the ways of life. Because their life is unformed they sometimes become self-confident, foolish, weak and even wicked, through the lack of vigilance. They must always be an guard like the watchful soldier, lest the enemy overcome them.

Youth sometimes entertains wrong views of life, and often no views at all. This is noticeable, particularly in the way many young men look upon the smoking and drink habits. To illustrate the wrong conception of life, Mr. Peever referred to a young emigrant in the West, who said: "I'd be glad to meet a gentleman, I'm tired meeting old-timers." On being asked to explain what he meant by a gentleman he said: "A man with good address, fine clothes, soft hands, and time for leisure," to which an old-timer replied: "Oh, we have plenty of them around here, but we call them mopers." Many young men think that life will give them the best without work and self-sacrifice.

Again, many have convictions, but are afraid to register them against other people. "If you have convictions, stand out against the world." was Mr. Peever's ringing appeal, as did Shock, one of Ralph Conner's heroes. Shock was leaving the University and his companion-to-be in Toronto, to go to the West, where, he thought, he could lift the biggest load in life. On his way out he chanced to stay overnight with an innkeeper who insisted on treating him. "Let us drink together for the future," said he.

"No sir," replied Shock. "I'm pledged against it to my mother and to my God. I'll not taste it."

"You're right young man," responded the innkeeper, and this young missionary was instrumental in leading this man to a better life.

Continuing, Mr. Peever said he loved to see steadfastness a ruling trait in a man's life.; he has a great regard for a young man who has steadfastness.

"Stand fast in the faith; son, daughter give me thine heart; remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth; he that is not with me is against me."

The decision for Christ should come early in life. He who waits till late in life can never catch up; he can never be what he might have been, had he decided early in life.

John L. Alexander, in addressing a large convention at Kingston, recently, remarked that nearly all Sunday School teachers began to teach about the age of fifteen. Eighty-five per cent. of all missionaries had decided for Christ early in life, and eighty-eight per cent. of the members of the Church came in during their teen age.

The last essential, the least admonition, was courage. How needful, these days to be brave, courageous, to have strength, to be strong. Youth is not the time to look backward. It is the time for the forward look.

Ridpath, the great historian, when a boy, wrote to the President of Harvard University, asking him to suggest a book which would give the complete story of the origin and history of mankind. The President replied that there had not yet arisen, up to that time, a man with sufficient courage to undertake such a task. Ridpath said: "I'll be the man," and his great "History of the World" is a monument to his decision.

Youth is the time of prospect. They ought to be strong because the promised land lies before them. Moses, after he had let the Children of Israel to the side of Jordan transferred his commission to Joshua, saying: "Be strong, and of good courage, and the Lord will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee; fear not, neither be dismayed."

Scott, the intrepid explorer of the South, in writing his last message before his death, to his life concerning their three-year-old son, said: "Keep him in the open air, guard against indolence, and have him lead a strenuous life."

Keenan, the great Siberian traveller, as a boy, was a coward, afraid of the dark, but by persistent effort he mastered himself.

Some say: "How can I be strong when I have the blood of generations of cowards in my veins, when I am beset by evil passions, when I have evil habits, when I am already defeated?"

Paul said: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

"Just as I am, thine own to be,
Friend of the young, who lovest me,
To consecrate myself to thee,
O, Jesus Christ, I come."

—PAUL PENMAN.

Why A Young Man Should Be A Christain

Rev. James Rollins announced to his congregation yesterday morning that he would preach a series of three sermons, beginning last evening on 'Why a Young Man Should be a Christian?' There was a large congregation, in which there were many young men out to hear the first sermon. The text was, John, 1:43: "Follow Me," being Christ's invitation to Philip. The reason around which the sermon centred last night was the fact that Christ was a young man. He finished His work before He reached middle life. At the age when most young men were merely beginning to create expectation, Jesus had completed His commission and returned it to His Father.

Jesus' appeal met its best response at the hands of young men, at the hands of those of those who shared with him the enviable gift of youth. The people of middle age and upward for the most part went on their wonted way—they were set in their opinions and fixed by their habits and duties. They had no heart for so big a venture as saving the world. They had lost imagination and romance and enthusiasm.

Religion was at its best in its appeal to youth, for to youth it appeals, not on the ground of argument and advantage to be gained for itself, but as a dream and a crusade. We had quite wrongly put the idea that the Apostles were men in middle life— they were men of Christ's own age. Many of them probably were younger. While maturity hesitated and weighed the pros and cons, and stood apart, the younger men left all and followed Jesus, and under His guidance laid the foundation for an empire, totally unlike all other empires, and surpassing them all in its contribution to the life of the world. Christ still recruits His forces from youth. He has lost none of His youth and as a young man He still makes His appeal to young men to enter the ranks of the great fellowship He established for the good of men. Mr. Rollins, in closing, made an appeal full of sympathy and appreciation of what young men could bring to this great Master, and of what Jesus would do for the young men who gave themselves to Him.

SERVICES AT THE CITY MISSION

Opening Yesterday Was Marked by Large Attendance

The new City Mission, under the able leadership of Rev. F. A. Connors, late pastor of Park Street Baptist Church, opened yesterday in the Old Opera House. The attendance at all the services was splendid, and augurs well for the success of this new Christian enterprise. The work of this new organization will also take a practical form, inasmuch as the workers intend looking after the bodily wants of the needy as well as the spiritual. Persons having second-hand wearing apparel will confer a favour by sending it to Rev. Mr. Connors at 265 King Street, who will see that it is put in proper shape to be of use to those in want. A sewing circle is being formed in connection with the mission, and old clothes will be repaired and made serviceable.

COLD HITS THE GERMANS

Equipment Not Adequate to Meet the Polish Winter

WARSAW, Jan. 11.—The German attempts to force the Russian positions on the Bzura have been marked by a reckless waste of human life.

It is impossible to estimate the German losses in the recent fighting along this stream. The killed and wounded sink forever under the muddy, freezing water, and those who reach the other side are easily made prisoners. Already these rash assaults are losing their force. After each unsuccessful attempt the weakening of the attacking columns is apparent.

It is bitterly cold. The freezing Siberian wind sweeps over the plain, and the mud of last week now is as hard as iron. The rivers are not entirely covered with ice, as the force of the wind has prevented this, and no human being can plunge into the Bzura without becoming numb with the cold in a minute.

What the Germans are suffering from exposure can be imagined from the conditions on this side, where is the well-clothed Russian soldier. The German overcoat is a thin, shoddy affair, which offers no protection against the Russian winter. So poorly are some of the prisoners clad that the soft-hearted soldiers of the Czar's army give them their mufflers.

The Siberian troops on the reserve line have built underground homes back of their positions. Each burrow is large enough for two men to sleep, and each has a fireplace, where glowing embers are always kept.

It is quite possible for the Russians to maintain themselves in their present quarters all winter, as they have the city of Warsaw behind them.

But for the Germans the case is different. Most of the towns in their rear they themselves have destroyed, and the question of winter quarters is soon going to be vital with them.

Judging from the condition of the prisoners at present, the German army has lost 25 per cent. of its original unit power. This loss increases each day. On the other hand the Russian effectiveness is always increasing.

Belgian Officers Go To Prison.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 11. — (Via London.)—A despatch to The Telegraaf from Brussels says a court-martial at Liege has sentenced the retired Belgian General Gustave Fife and Lieut. Gille to life imprisonment on a charge of assisting 350 young Belgians to reach Holland to join the Belgian army in France.

"The general at the trial," the correspondent adds, "asked for a death sentence, saying he disliked imprisonment. He told the court that Emperor William was a rascal. The general was sent to Glatz, Prussia, to the same prison where Burgomaster Max of Liege is being held."

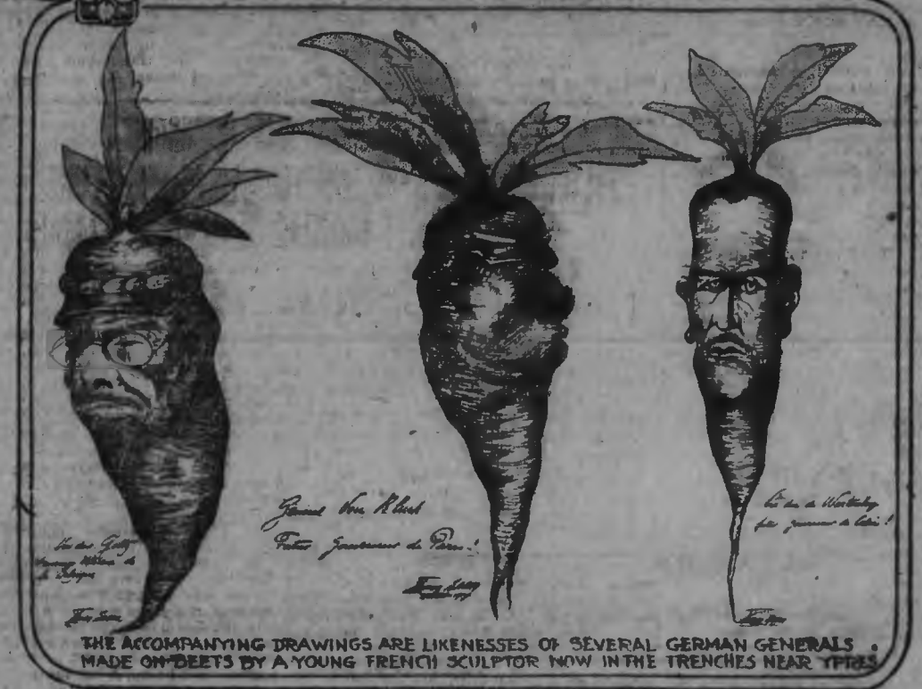
DRAWING THE GERMAN FIRE BY RUSE. IF THE CAP IS STRUCK THE FRENCH FLAG IS WAVED, SIGNIFYING "TOUCHE! NOS COMPLIMENTS" ("HIT! OUR COMPLIMENTS")



THE ACCOMPANYING DRAWINGS ARE LIKENESSES OF SEVERAL GERMAN GENERALS MADE ON BEETS BY A YOUNG FRENCH SCULPTOR NOW IN THE TRENCHES NEAR YPRES

FROM THE FRONT, DECEMBER 2, VIA PARIS, DECEMBER 10.—The plain of Flanders is covered with snow. It has been freezing, and on the dry and hardened earth, the snow, insensible to the pale efforts of a feeble and rayless sun, does not melt. The crackling of shrapnel breaks the monotony, the smoke lingering in little clouds, opaque in the heavy atmosphere of the snow.

Indescribable is the dreary sadness of this overhanging sky, so black and hostile. Some fires are rising from the villages that the obus are ravaging and the cannon thunder in a continuous fashion. We no longer take notice of it, any more than we do of the shells bursting near us.

At one moment we cross the camp of some Hindoos. They have constructed for themselves some impovised huts. Their tall and shivering silhouettes stand out against the gray of the sky. They have an air of surprise at the sudden change of temperature, and in their eyes can be read anger and a fierce desire to be revenged somehow at the inclemency of the elements.

Suddenly on the heavy air arises a quiet cry: a convoy of German prisoners comes gradually into view on the route. It is the residue of a trench that our troops have just taken possession of. the "Boches" march bareheaded, surrounded by foot soldiers (fantassins), bayonets fixed. A troop of harassed human beings, whose dull eyes betray long privations and cruel fatigues, together with keen disenchantments—heavy cattle without verve, crushed by pitiless discipline.

A convoy of our territorials arrives from the opposite direction, coming from the trenches after a sojourn there of twenty-three days in the humidity of the slimy ground. But they have that which—I know not what—that something of nervous joyousness that always marks the French trooper, and the contrast is striking between the restrained animality of the one and the unwearied go of the other.

The German officers to whom we chat are unanimous in attesting the immensity of their losses. In the trench attacks one sees the men rush out readily to the assault four by four, arm in arm, like so many automatons coming out from an inexhaustible trapdoor. If three or four hundred of these passive human beings must be mown down by the mitrailleuse, they will be, but the fifth hundred will have the chance to seize this mitrailleuse. Nothing whatever can give the least idea of the quantities of men that have been left on the banks of the Yser. The adherence to this close formation of attack has given birth to the most terrifying hecatombs. They do not even take up their dead, they abandon them to the will of the river; or else they heap the stiff bodies one on the other, making an embankment with them for their trenches.

The breaking out of their fury knows no control. They are constrained at nothing. They committed here the following act of atrocity:—A few days ago the Germans, attacking a bridge, had put at the head of their column some Zouave prisoners. Before this shield of living and fraternal flesh our soldiers and their mitrailleuse stopped short, ceasing their firing, when from the enemy's ranks came a cry uttered by a vibrating and clarion voice, "Tirez donc, N—— de D——." At this sublime oath, the general discharge of our troops broke out; the ferocious and cowardly ruse of the Germans was played out, but the unknown hero was dead. It is in scorn of the most sacred laws of honor that they imposed upon us this horrible necessity of firing on our comrades in order to reach them.

At the front war is not so sad as at the rear. The nobility of risk, the desire to vanquish, the singular beauty that attaches to the play of weapons, magnifies the darker aspects. Between the joyous dash that throws the combatants into the action and the bleeding trail they leave behind them, the painful transition loses its brutality, the ardent sacrifice of the living and of the dead is only continuing.

One great sorrow is irreducible: that is, to bring the tragedy on to our national soil and among our own people and things. Here we feel the intolerable horror of a transitory alienation of our ground and of our life. One does not realise altogether the "occupation," only at the place and hour of its breaking upon its victims.

The war is sincerely victorious only beyond the frontiers of the victor. The Allies prove this to-day in paying their successes by inestimable ransoms.

Our last progress brings us near a little village of Flanders. The Germans occupy it; we must fire on it—and we fire, although knowing that there remain somewhere a few aged people and a depot for the wounded, not to speak of the belfry, the monuments and the houses. Well, we are there, the batteries are ready, and the appalling questions remain—must we destroy this town in attempting to crush the Germans who are mining it? Must we risk the heroic and costly assault that will share the part of death and fire?

How measure the sacrifice and define the exact value of the time and of the ground that one can pay only at the price of honor?

Think of it, you who are fair, who lament the cruel executions and are astonished at the apparent delays. The nightmare of invasion must be quickly dissipated. But so long as we move upon that which is our own the fine attack that is the joy of battle is mingled with anguish and distress.

There is on the front a flux and reflux of non-combatants. The trains of refugees who gain a free country are received with the pity and sympathy that is their just due. There are also some who cannot or will not go away too far from their homes that are violated, and these and caravans loiter about, at the caprice of the line of fire. It is necessary to find an asylum outside risks and suspicions.

The brutality of the departures is lugubrious. At D—— the whole town had to be evacuated in one hour during the night. In the confusion dramas happen. One woman, distracted, runs along the column, pushing before her two children, weeping, crying out:—"Go and look for her, I have lost one; I tell you that I had three; go, she is there, and there!" At the village to which she points that the child is all burns, under the quick bursting of the shells and the projectiles.

Further on a boy of fourteen years says that at the moment when the last one quitted the village there still remained his grandparents, paralyzed, both of them. He wanted to go and look for them, but we have to prevent him: the village is inaccessible. It is being consumed rapidly. Happily, lately our liberating march is but rarely and momentarily retarded by these tragic halts. To forget all that we must go quickly to the country of the enemy.

FROM THE FRONT, NOVEMBER 15TH, VIA PARIS, DECEMBER 2.—In these last eight days the Germans have made, from the Lys to the North Sea, a desperate effort. It was around this strategic position of Ypres a new mad rush, the most intense and infuriated of the campaign, centred.

It was, in part, the English who accomplished this repulse, and they did it with their fine sangfroid and habitual intrepidity. At one moment they let the enemy advance, already seeing victory, then they slew them at leisure. The Germans were prodigal with their ammunition, they sacrificed some thousands of men. However, they did not seriously shake our front. They only obliged us to evacuate Dixmude.

Dixmude exists no longer except in name. Since October 16, the date on which the first German obus fell on the town, the church and its turret, the assembly rooms and the belfry, the solitary convent and its old chapel have mingled the dust of their stones with the mud of the roads. They are in ruins, vast ruins where bodies lie without sepulture.

Between Nieuport and Dixmude the inundations forced the Germans to abandon their trenches that were invaded by water. This part of the country is transformed into a frightful cesspool, in which are engulfed pieces of artillery and on which float innumerable bodies. An intense fog arises from these humid grounds, not allowing an advance to the enemy's positions. The mist prevents anything whatever being seen at a few yards' distance. All at once a pale sun pierces the veil. And forthwith the battle commences.

The reports of the cannon succeed each other rapidly. The obus whip the air, whistling and falling within a few yards of our ranks. Scorning danger, with heads held high, bayonets fixed, the foot soldiers run, bounding with the instinctive hope of destruction. Some blue bodies throw themselves headlong and sink, disclosing the passage. The enemy at a few yards, picking us off with their sharpshooters, grin behind their flaming rifles.

Rapidly the distance diminishes. Then, the terrible "hand to hand." One hears no longer the fusillade—the bayonets do their work, burying themselves into the flesh, indifferent to the cries of pain, to the twisted mouths, the prayers of the protruding glassy eyes. * * *

It is night. * * * Complete silence. Friends and enemies appear asleep a hundred yards the one from the other. A stray ball sent by a scared sentinel whistles across the space—and that is all.

It is a dark night. One must beware of the enemy, who may be lurking about the camp. Two sentinels only must mount guard, and by the hollow of the ditch.

The grass touches lightly our skin, our charged arms are heavy between our fingers and our eyes peer during long hours into the darkness of the night. The alertness, the spirit, the decision must not be weakened. Amid the silence there are some slight suspicious noises. A drop of water gurgles in falling to the ground, a flint stone rolls, one knows not why, and all at once the soft footstep of a hare advances cautiously, its large phosphorous eyes wide open in the night. * * * Elsewhere, in the infinity of the country, some vague noises are heard: there is in the air an inexplicable menace which touches us, seizes us. It seems to us that we have been there many hours. One has thirst, one would drink the mud of the ruts if one dared. But to drink is to move, and we must remain immobile like the stones, and as silent.

Soon, in a second or so, the struggle is going to open. The guns will be made to speak, one sees the black silhouettes oscillating, the mounts stumbling, the riders falling. Presently we shall rise, run, strike, act. But first we must harden ourselves, calm the pulsations of the arteries, count the beats of the heart that strike against the ground in our breasts. * * * Toward three o'clock an officer comes, puts me by the sleeve. * * * "Will you," he asks me in a low voice, "see something that you have never seen before?" And pulling me by the hands he makes me descend the edge of the plain. On all sides are ambulances, picking the dead and wounded. My guide at each instant the soles of my boots slip on something slimy.

Suddenly, extending the arm, my guide stops and says softly:—"It is there; wait a minute. Presently, when the moon shows itself, you will see."

Like him, I stretch out my arms; the contact of something cold makes me withdraw it instinctively. But when the moon clears from the clouds and lights the place where we are I recoil, seized with horror in the presence of a spectacle that I have before my eyes. Some rows of the enemy's soldiers were there, struck by mitraille, close, one to the other, they were not lying but standing, scarcely were they inclining against each other. The moon lighted up their blanched faces. Some had the eyes open, others the head thrown back, holding out their arms—they had been struck at the moment of firing.

Here and there some had the fists turned in toward the chests, teeth dull, grimaces of greenish wax, and the mouths appearing like black holes.

Of the dead, sunken in the mud, some seemed to sleep, faces buried in the ground like drunkards. Certain ones remained kneeling, sinking on their heels, the head in the chest, the gun in hand. They are bent as if pleading in their agony. Their very silence seems to cry out.

In one trench were two men, bayonets crossed, one a Prussian, the other a Frenchman, face to face. The latter had pierced the heart of the German, the former had plunged his weapon into the stomach of the Frenchman. A blood curdling group, standing, upheld by the walls of the trenches, tragic, manikins furiously slain there, and who appear still like enemies, even after death. Horror penetrates us.

"Let us go, it is frightful." At the same moment some balls whistle near us. A pointed helmet topples and rolls to the ground from one of the bodies. We withdraw, not without turning the head from time to time to look at this wild scene, lighted by the rays of the moon, its green reflections serving as a frame to the brilliant victory that our Allied victorious armies have just registered.

An army corps is a great family. For three months we have encountered each other at the crossroads, in the woods, in the cantonments, on the field of battle. We have had time to recognise one another. No work disgusts us.

When I see men of high society, a shovel in hand, conscientiously hollowing out a trench, then I comprehend the meaning of the word "equality." It is a surprise, when one opens a newspaper, to see with what admiration the soldiers are spoken of. The heroes! No, the heroes are dead. Those who live are like you and me. But there are more heroes. Their name is Legion. To get accustomed and to know how to train one's self—that is all. Evidently many disappear at the very moment of success. Like the horse of Don Quixote, that accommodated itself not to eat when he had to die. There is, however, a school of courage by which we must pass in order to learn its virtue. The first reaction of courage is to scorn the enemy, and mock at the adversary who is not agile enough to kill you.

Nothing must prejudice the courage that will prove one's neighbor. I know some batteries, insolent, timid, shy, that are suddenly seized by a strong energy. It is a matter of mysterious psychology. And then the courage is equally a training. The example of the chief, Albert of Belgium, whose birthday we lately celebrated, a soldier king, who familiarly mixes with his soldiers, his brethren, leading them to the attack, even being their orderly. One day we distinguished a man who, completely equipped, slept lying on a bundle of straw. This was the King. What is so touching in the situation rendered to the chief of a little country, of which the sovereignty is no longer exercised, save on a territory of a few square yards, and who appears grander in his distress than some others do in triumph, is that he has accepted without hesitation the struggle against the formidable armies of the Germans, that he has made a resolution to face the invasion with all its violences and all its miseries out of respect of the given word and out of regard of duty.

And I, who have just been present at the epic combats on the Yser, who have passed through the destroyed towns, on the overthrown fields of battle, who have seen all the atrocious horrors and the beauties sublime of the war, who have contemplated all the spectacles, I become tender in thinking of Albert I., Chevalier of the Right, King of Honor, to-morrow Emperor of the Peace.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

FIVE DRAWN GAMES IN FIRST ROUND OF THE CUP

Many Surprises in the Soccer Work—Swansea Beat Blackburn, While Sunderland Fell to the Spurs—Clyde Defeat Rangers, and Morton Run Hearts Close

There are now many sad hearts today among soccer enthusiasts south of the Tweed in the Old Country, and as many equally jubilant ones, and the cause of it all the results of the thirty-two games in the first round of the English Cup The initial stage in this trophy has always provided many surprises, and this year there has been as large a crop as any. Clubs that were expected to triumph bit the dust, while others that seemingly had no prospect before them than defeat live to fight again. But the greatest surprise of all was Swansea's victory over Blackburn Rovers. True, the Lancashire lads were from home, but their greater experience should have carried them through against an opposition that rose to the occasion and by securing the only goal of the game passed into the second round, which was as far as Swansea got last year, when Queen's Park Rangers gave them their quietus. Last season Rovers travelled into the third round, where they fell to Manchester City. Tottenham Hotspurs, by reason of their up-and-down form of late, were regarded as a nice mouthful for Sunderland but here again prophets were at fault and the Spurs' victory by the odd goal in three provided one of the bitterest pills the Roker Park men have yet had to swallow. It was in the fourth round last season that Burnley, the cup winners, after a replay, put Sunderland out of the running.

Still greater odds were laid on Manchester City pulling off the tie at the "Proud City," but for once in a while Preston North End, who at the moment, are engaged in a losing battle for Second League honours, proved a match for their more mighty opponents, who stand a fair chance of winning the premier championship honours. When the replay comes off City will doubtless get more than their own back. On league form Derby County should have found it the easiest of matters to put down Leeds City. Steve Bloomer's pets lead the second division, whilst their opponets are very much in the also-ran class, but with Saturday's game it was a case of the first coming last, and the news will prove a sore disappointment to Steve, who lies in a hospital somewhere recovering from wounds received fighting for his country. The second round was as far as Derby got last year, when Burnley administered the knockout. Bolton Wanderers, who fell to the same opposition in the third round, will have to show better form than they did on Saturay against Notts County if they would travel far in the competition

This must be a season of mourning for enthusiasts in the Lace City, for Notts County went down before Bolton, while their second hope, Forest, failed ignomiously against humble Norwich. On the contrary, everything is merry and bright at Sheffield. The Wednesday players, who have performed well in the league this season, were reckoned strong enough to account for Manchester United, but it was a near thing at the finish, for the "Blades" literally scraped home by the solitary goal of the afternoon at Hillsborough. The fourth round of the last competition wound Wednesday battling with Aston Villa, who passed into the semi-final stage by one goal. It was in the same spasm that Sheffield United succumbed to Manchester City, but the Sheffielders' form against Blackpool, on Saturday, was but a patch on that of a year ago, and, though they won, their chances that they will go far this year unless the luck of the draw helps them, are not rosy. Bradford must also be a happy soccer centre at the moment, for both city clubs won out by the same score of 1 to 0. The two Merseyside teams survived the struggle, Liverpool finding easy opposition in Stockport County, and Everton in Barnsley, the cup winners in 1912. Burnley, the present cup holders, had a comparatively easy time against Huddersfield, who are running strongly for Second League honours, while Exeter gave Aston Villa, semi-finalists, no great shake. Of the thirty-two games, five will have to be replayed, but chief interest will centre in that between Preston North End and Manchester City. The Bristol Rovers-Southend tie had to be postponed. The drawn games are:

West Ham v. Newcastle.
Bury v. Plymouth Argyle.
Birmingham v. Crystal Palace.
Chelsea v. Swindon.
Preston N. E. v. Manchester City.

It shows changed times at Ibrox, when Rangers have to knuckle under to Clyde, but against their more lowly neighbours on Saturday the once mighty club was but little more than a name. Hearts, too, playing at home could only claim a win over Greenock Morton by the skin of their teeth. That veteran, Bobby Walker, must be feeling anxious for his club's reputation at this critical stage, for the Maroons have the Scottish championship within their reach. A shining light of other day, Bobby donned the jersey twice a week to keep himself in trim lest the more modern lights should fail. Some say he could still lick a bunch of the present team, and in that there may be more than a mere modicum of truth. Partick Thistles were completely routed at Parkhead, but Dundee and Hibernians claimed a couple of points from Falkirk and Airdrieonians respectively. Appended are the results:

Buffalo Seeks Big War Order

BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 11—The L. & I. J. White Company of No. 43 Perry Street, is figuring on an order for 1,000,000 steel arrows to be used by the European armies. They are made from cold rolled steel, about as thick as a pencil, cut into lengths of 5 1-2 inches and the head sharpened to a point.

About an inch below the head there are four grooves in the sides so that a cross section would look like a Maltese Cross. This is to bring all the weight into the head of the arrow, so that when it is dropped from an aeroplane it will fall head downwards

These arrows weigh only an ounce A four-foot drop, however, will plant one of them so firmly in a hard-wood floor that it takes a decided pull to get it free. Multiply this distance by 1,000 and one gets the idea of the tremendous force with which they strike when dropped from an aeroplane.

There are two methods of dropping them, according to W. S. Walls, superintendent of the White Company. One is to carry them loosely in a box which is placed at the aviator's feet. When he arrives at the right point he throws a handful into the air, and the weight of the head causes them to right themselves and fall in a straight line. The other method is to inclose them in a bomb which will explode at the desired point and scatter its contents. The latter methods enables the aviator to deliver his blow from a higher altitude with more hope of reaching his mark. For hitting small targets they are not very satisfactory, but when scattered thickly above a column of moving men they are deadly.

The arrows will be packed in kegs and shipped to New York dealers, who assume all the responsibility of getting them across the ocean. This particular consignment will probably go to England on one of the English steamers out of New York. The White Company assumes none of the risks of capture as contraband of war. Its part of the contract will be fulfilled when the goods are delivered in New York.

The order for the steel will probably go to Pittsburg, J. G. H. Marvin, president of the White Company, is out of town at present.

JUNIOR GAME WITH COBOURG ON TUESDAY

The Peterborough juniors will have to win to-morrow night's game against Cobourg to stay in the running, and as the same proposition faces the Cobourg youngsters, the clash at Brock Street rink should be a hummer. Cobourg expect to beat the Petes, while on the other hand the local team realises that they will have to win, and they can be counted upon to go all the way. They want to show the fans that their showing against the Ontarios was not their real form, and they should look a different aggregation to-morrow night. Morrow will be on the defence, and there may be a change in the forward line, although this will not be decided until after to-night's practice. Lou Marsh is expected to handle the ball and the game will be called at 8.30 o'clock sharp.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The Peterborough juniors will practice at Brock Street rink to-night. Every player is expected out sharp at 7 o'clock.

The intermediates must win to-night's game at Belleville to stay in the running.

At least one Peterborough O. H. A. hockeyist is going to the front. Walter Flowers, goalkeeper for the juniors two years ago, enlisted with the Mounted Rifles this morning. Bill Rew, who played with the Brintons' Mercantile League team, Geo. Butcher, goalkeeper for St. Luke's Church League team, and Alan Sharpe of St Andrew's Church League team, have also enlisted, the last named with the 57th contingent, and the other two with the Mounted Rifles.

GERMAN PREPAREDNESS FOR GREAT WAR ASTOUNDING— FRENCH ARMY OFFICERS DUMBFOUNDED AT REMARKABLE FEATS, ESPECIALLY CROSSING OF ST. GOND MARSHES

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY AT THE FRONT, Nov. 29. — Just how thoroughly the Germans were prepared for this war does not really sing into one until one cris-crosses about the war zone. The stories one hears of their preparations are amazing and if a tenth of them are true one can not be surprised at the rapidity of their invasion at the beginning of the war.

French army officers were dumbfounded, for instance, at the rapid crossing of the marshes of Saint Gond, northeast of Paris, by the Germans. These marshes are miles and miles in extent, covering the lowlands in the region of the source of the Petit Morin. The marshes resemble from a distance a beautiful meadow, but even natives of the region do not dare venture in the tall grass for fear of being swallowed up by the ooze. Perhaps a half-dozen guides know the swamp's intricacies, and these make a living leading hunting parties through them. For an unguided person to attempt to cross the marshes would be as much as his life is worth.

Nevertheless the German troops crossed the marshes without the slightest trouble or delay. They did not even hesitate. The native guides were all well known and accounted for; they did not lead the German soldiers over. How did they escape the bogs?

Well, here's a story told me by a civil officer of the district. He had had a part in the deal and he ought to know. About three years ago a company was formed in Germany for the purpose of buying up and reclaiming swampland. The first land this company set its heart upon was the marshes of Saint-Gond. These lands belong to the commune, or county—or rather to several counties—and the officers representing the communes were asked to get together for a deal with the Germans. The German company proposed to drain the swamp and turn the land into the richest of farms, which farms would be sold off in lots to French farmers.

How much would the company give for the swamps? The company would make an offer as soon as the proper estimate of the cost of drainage could be made out.

A score of German engineers therefore began work in the marshes. Every rod of the district was explored, sounded and charted; every island and tree and hummock duly mapped; every road, bridle path and pigtail indicated, and every possible detail set down.

Then the German company made its offer. It was small, ridiculously small. The Commune officials laughed at the offer and the deal fell through and was forgotten — until along towards the close of last August when the German army advanced across the marshes of Saint-Gond without losing a man.

Another story I heard, from another source, was that some years ago a German bought a country home for himself near Paris. Upon a commanding ridge stood his house and upon the house was a pointed spire. To the right and left of the house, he planted a single line of fir trees, with graceful, peaked tops, and, down the slopes a few hundred yards, a tennis court in cement and asphalt was laid.

The German seemingly took a sudden dislike, to his country home about the time he had finished it, for he went back to Germany and did not show up again — until was was declared.

Then he was wearing a uniform, the uniform of a German officer of artillery.

The tennis court was nothing more than a foundation for heavy guns; the country house, with its pointed turret was the centre of a sighting system, of which the fir trees to right and left were adjuncts (notches!) The story has it that had the Germans advanced to this point they could have planted their heavy artillery on the tennis-court-in-disguise, used the turret and fir trees to sight by and dominate every quarter.

Dilemma Of Scarborough Editor Who Had First Big Story Since Cromwell's Time

Reginald Wright Kauffman, author, a recent visitor in New York, has described the bombardment of Scarborough, where he had been staying. He was accompanied on the trip by Travers Humphreys, K.C., who convicted Dr. Crippen, the murderer, and who is one of the most famous criminal lawyers in England.

Mr. Kauffman was just assuring Mr. Humphreys that he would show him New York, when a cable message was handed to the latter. It notified him that Louis Wessels, held as a spy in Jamaica, whom he was on his way to defend, had been released, and that Mr. Humphreys might return to England. Mr. Humphreys, who is sometimes called the "Whitman of England," said he is anxious to meet the Governor, whom he resembles closely. Last night he spent seeking the "most typical American music hall."

DIN OF EXPLODING SHELLS.

A panic, which equalled that at Ostend and at Antwerp when the Germans came, followed the bombardment of Scarborough, Mr. Kauffman said. He has lived there for several summers, and this winter stayed later than usual, seeking quiet.

"I was at breakfast when I heard some one cry that German battleships were in the harbour," he said. "I went right on eating, because I had made several dozen trips to the beach at previous times, seeking ships. In about a minute, however, I heard a shrieking, whining sound and then a noise which I may describe as similar to the noise of passing trains on the Third Avenue elevated.

"I rushed out of the house toward the beach, which my place faces. In the morning light, at first misty, but rapidly growing clearer, I saw five battleships, with the German flag insolently flaunting over them. One was within five hundred yards of the shore. All were rocking with the shock of their exploding guns.

"For twenty-five minutes the fearful din of exploding shells continued in a mad sort of fusillade. There are about forty-five thousand persons in the town, I imagine, and it seemed that all of them were fleeing through the streets. Men, women and children, some half clad, carrying odd sort of bundles which contained every conceivable sort of possession, jammed their way into the streets.

"High above their screams and cries of terror, as they fought their way along, there sounded the whimper of shells that fluttered in spirals over the town. It seemed that they hung always for an instant in little grottoes of downy clouds before they dropped heavily downward. Then came the crash of falling timbers, broken stone and the cries of the fleeing people or of the wounded.

"It was a spectacle of utter horror. In the soft morning light the German war ships vomited shell after shell on the town, which is absolutely unfortified. It is the epitome of peace and quiet. There are no guns, no forts there, as was reported. The only martial signs I ever saw were the territorials, who regarded me with determined suspicion because of my name.

TOWN ENTIRELY UNDEFENDED.

"There are a great many girls' schools in Scarborough. When the fusillade of shells began some of the principals of these institutions sent their students into the cellars, but the head of Queen Margaret's School, one of the most famous in England, evidently lost her head, and, opening her door, told the girls to run. They fled, aimlessly and in terror with the other refugees to Seamer, the nearest town.

"Suddenly, after a last salvo, the five ships in the harbour moved away, leaving the dead and the wreckage behind them. Slowly the terrified people crept back, stupefied, it seemed, by the cataclysm. But the English are a marvellous people. Two hours later I made a tour of the town. White wings were on the streets; carts were rumbling away with dead and with debris, and by afternoon only the wrecked buildings here and there evidenced the assault of the morning.

"That is the story in brief of the bombardment of Scarborough. It's a little watering place, on the seashore, quiet as only a steady, tight little English town may be, entirely undefended by even a temporary fortification, and impossible as a military centre. Its people recovered quickly from the shock, but the country will never recover from the indignation into which it was plunged.

"There's another side to the Scarborough attack, and that's the censorship which followed. I went into the office of the Scarborough Post at half-past 6 o'clock that night and found the editor with his hands tight against his head; before him lay sheafs of 'copy.' About him stood his reporters, glum with deathly glumness.

SCARBOROUGH EDITOR'S DILEMMA.

"'Well,' said I, 'how is your story?' In answer the editor just moaned and pointed to the copy. 'There's my story,' he answered. 'The first thing that has happened to Scarborough since Cromwell was here. It's a great story, and this is what the censor's office says I may print.' He handed me a little slip. On it was written 'A German battleship bombarded Scarborough to-day. The situation is developing.'

"I left him," added Mr. Kauffman. "For I had my own troubles. The London Chronicle wanted a story from me, and, remembered my newspaper days. I walked into the censor's headquarters and said carelessly, 'How soon may I get a thousand words off to the Chronicle?' The censor looked up at me with a cold, gray eye. 'Ah,' he said. 'Ah—I have just begun on the material sent me this morning by the other men who are writing articles.' As this was about twelve hours after those articles had been filed I gave it up. Censoring is a great occupation in England."

FROM CANADA TO RUSSIA

Canada to Petrograd is the latest excursion trip arranged in the world-wide ramifications of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and at present regular runs between St. John and the capital of all the Russians are being conducted. For $54.25 any Russian can now get to Petrograd, if he also pays the railway fare to St. John or Halifax to catch the boat. Passengers by this route will take a decidedly interesting journey. They will take the C. P. R. boat to Liverpool. From Liverpool they will sail to ports in Sweden or Finland, and from these make the final run to Petrograd. It is not likely that the history of rail and steamship travel has ever shown a single advertised trip with so many countries and so many possibilities for so small a price.

This service has been put on by the C. P. R. owing to the large number of Russians desiring to return to their native land since the war started. In present conditions the Russians have a predilection for travelling by British routes, feeling safer under the Union Jack. Hitherto, Russians coming to Canada generally journeyed [illegible] have been reversed, and on their return journey they are taking the Canadian line.

It is stated that a large number of Russians who have been in Chicago and the Western States are taking advantage of this service. One party will come through Montreal and sail for Petrograd by the Missanabie, which leaves St. John on January 15, while another party will sail by the Grampian on the 29th.

PACIFIC SERVICE RESUMES.

Another evidence of the effect of battle on maritime commerce is shown by the fact that as a direct result of the defeat of the German fleet off the Falkland Islands, at the extreme southerly point of South America, the Canadian Pacific has been able to resume its trans-Pacific passenger and freight service. Only one boat will go into service at present, but it will be followed later on by others.

The British Admiralty has notified the C. P. R. that they have released their steamship Monteagle, which since the opening of the war had been taken over for Admiralty purposes. The Monteagle will, as soon as she is put into shape, return to her regular run between Hong Kong and Vancouver. She is expected to leave Hong Kong on her first voyage on February 24th, sailing to Yokohama, whence she will sail for Vancouver about March 6, reaching the British Columbia port about March 21st. From that time on the Monteagle will resume her regular runs between the Canadian, Japanese and Chinese ports, unless war conditions arise to interfere with business. The other C. P. R. Empresses are still engaged in the Admiralty business.

Music & Drama

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH.

The large audience at the Grand Opera House on Saturday saw a splendid production of the book play, 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch.' All the famous book characters are preserved in the play and the result is a delightful entertainment. A thoroughly adequate company presented the production, and every role was cleverly presented. Mrs. Wiggs, Lovey Mary and all the rest were realistically portrayed.

Canon Davidson Gave Address

Meeting of The Ministerial Association Held This Morning

The regular meeting of the Ministerial Association of the City was held in the Y.M.C.A. room at 10 a.m. to-day. The President, Rev. Jas. Rollins of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, occupied the chair.

The chief item of business was the deliverance of an address by Rev. Canon Davidson of St. John's Church, on "Canadians and the Worship of God." In this paper he discussed very seriously whether the Christian Church was putting enough of reverence and the true spirit of worship into the mind of the Canadian people. He contrasted the various effects of the ritualistic service and the extemporary form of worship, as obtaining in the Churches of to-day.

A very interesting discussion on the part of the ministers followed the deliverance of the paper.

DRIVING SHED WAS DESTROYED

$2,000 Blaze On Simcoe St. Early Yesterday Morning

A driving shed and contents, belonging to G. Innis' livery establishment, Simcoe Street, was almost completely destroyed by fire at an early hour Sunday morning. The damage is estimated by Fire Chief Howard at about $2,000, partly covered by insurance. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A telephone call from the night watchman of the Peterborough Lock Works, which is directly opposite Innis' livery, at 4.30 a.m., brought the Fire Department. The fire had gained considerable headway before it was noticed and in consequence the interior of the building was destroyed before the firemen arrived.

Neighbours Alarmed.

The fire was a very spectacular one and the residents in the neighbourhood were thoroughly alarmed for their places of residence. The young ladies at the Y.W.C.A., across the street and west, were up, and watched the blaze with interest. The burning building was closely surrounded by residences and outbuildings, but the firemen succeeded in preventing the fire from spreading further.

Partly Insured.

The contents of the building destroyed were four four buggies, four cutters, four light delivery waggons and one cab, also a miscellaneous collection of articles used in connection with a livery outfit. The loss to the buildings and contents has been estimated at about $3,000, partly covered by insurance.

The cause of the fire is unknown at present. The policeman on the beat at that time passed about 4.30 o'clock and did not notice any blaze, and according to the Fire Department the interior was completely destroyed before they arrived. It must have been burning forsome time to gain such headway.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE SOCIETIES REUNITE ON ANNIVERSARY

The 13th anniversary of the foundation of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society was celebrated on Sunday. In the three Catholic churches there was a large attendance of the members at communion in the morning.

A joint meeting was held in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum in the afternoon. It was of the order of a re-union, and served to introduce the idea of consolidation of the three societies for the further advancement of total abstinence. Bishop O'Brien opened the meeting with a reference to the accomplishment during the existence of the Total Abstinence Society. It had done more good for the spiritual and temporal welfare of the people than any other society. Evidences of its results were innumerable. At the same time the members have preserved their enthusiasm and by the amalgamation of three societies it is hoped to secure still greater results. Bishop O'Brien encouraged the men not only to remain faithful to their pledges, but also to put forth their strongest efforts to win new supporters for total abstinence. Rev. Dean McColl stated at the first meeting of the branch in connection with the Church of the Immaculate Conception that there were 50 members and this membership was just doubled at the second meeting. Rev. Father Phelan and Rev. J. J. O'Brien spoke of the other two societies. It is felt throughout the society that the knitting together of the branches will create an interest that had apparently begun to wane as the result of the divisions of the parent society with parochial branches. Groups of the main body were isolated from it by the formation of the parishes. Hence the new idea will reunite the T.A.S., the members of which are determined to persevere in their attempt to turn man's wills against the use of intoxicants.

Rev. J. J. O'Brien made special reference to the work among the children, urging that boys brought up on the principle of total abstinence would be strengthened when they met it in later years.

Jap Warships Operating in Atlantic

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—That Japanese warships are now operating in the Atlantic is the opinion of Captain Williamson of steamer Curacoa, in to-day from Havre. He reports that he passed a warship off the Azores en route and that he is sure from her build that she was a Japanese.

Despatches received here to-day say that the German cruiser Konigsberg, which was bottled up in a river off the coast of Africa some months ago, has since been sunk by British warship guns directed by aeroplanes.

WEDDING BELLS

McILMOYLE—CLARK.

The home of Mrs. John Clark, Bracebridge, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Friday, January the first, when her youngest daughter, Emma Janet was united in marriage to Stanley Hall McIlmoyle, of Fraserville. Promptly on time and accompanied by the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Myrtle Gibson, the bride entered the room on the arm of her brother and was attired in her travelling suit, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Miss Eileen Prentiss, niece of the bride, was flower girl, and carried a basket of carnations.

The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. A. Jackson of Bracebridge Baptist church. At the conclusion of the ceremony hearty congratulations were offered the young couple. The guests then adjourned to the dining room, where a dainty repast was served.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts from her hosts of friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold wristlet watch; to the flower girl a gold bracelet.

The happy couple left on the 2.30 train for Toronto amid showers of confetti.

Mr. and Mrs. McIlmoyl will reside at Fraserville and will at home to their friends after Feb. 1st.

JOHN ACORN'S OPINION

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Hadn't our people better remember that the Bible foretells future conflicts and says, "You shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, for nation shall rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom?" How, in the face of this, ministers can go around praying for everlasting peace and for stamping out war, is more than I can understand. The attempt to defy prophesy will end as it has ended now, in failure.

Yours truly,

John Acorn.

Is Canadian Flour Going To Germany?

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—That Canadian mills are supplying Germany and her allies with flour was asserted here to-day. It being stated that a large portion of the cargo of steamers of the Scandinavian-American Line, plying between New York and Copenhagen, consists of Canadian flour shipped to the Scandinavian Peninsula by the large mills in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The American mills in Minnesota also are shipping large quantities of flour to Copenhagen.

Since the beginning of the war the Scandinavian-American Line has increased its service until it has now running between ten and twelve boats a month, in contrast to the two steamships a month which formerly maintained trade relations between America and Scandinavian ports.

All is Contraband.

Besides flour, large quantities of coffee, cocoa, and tea are shipped to Copenhagen. These are considered by the belligerents as contraband of war. But as the consignments are made to Scandinavian firms they cannot be seized unless it is proved that the shipments are destined for countries with which the allies are at war. Local officials of the Scandinavian-American Line admit that the exports from Copenhagen to the United States have almost doubled since the outbreak of the war. That Germany is still exporting large quantities of her home products is evidenced by the fact that 7,000 barrels of German beer arrived last week in Hoboken from Copenhagen via the Scandinavian Line.

Indefinite News From Alsace Causes Much Anxiety in Paris

Germans Said to Have Hurled Huge Forces at Steinbach Retirement Would Create Depression Throughout France--Aerial Engagements Have Been Numerous Recently With Many Machines Lost.

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 12.—Serious anxiety is beginning to be felt here concerning conditions in Alsace. No official word has been received regarding fighting there since Friday. Meanwhile unofficial reports say that the Germans are hurling huge masses of men against the French positions at Steinbach and the heights of Cernay. The War Office says that the Russians are maintaining their positions, but make no claims of additional gains.

MAY BE PREMATURE OFFENSIVE.

The fear is expressed that the offensive here may have been premature and, like that initiated in the early days of the war, advantages gained cannot be maintained.

A retirement from Alsace at this time would cause the utmost depression throughout France, where the recovery of the "Lost provinces" has become fanatical religion. Latest reports from there reaching here to-day say that heavy snows are interfering with operations, but that desperate fighting continues.

FIGHTING FROM RHEIMS TO VERDUN.

Serious fighting is also in progress in the territory between Rheims and Verdun. North of Soissons and at St. Georges in Belgium. Elsewhere rains and alternate thaws and freezing conditions make any concerted forward movements impossible.

With a lull general in the north both sides are devoting themselves to aerial activity. Clashes between rival aviators are common occurrences, and both sides have lost more men and machines in the last ten days than in any similar period of the war.

Allies Shatter 'Castle Of Asia'

Fort at Entrance to Dardanelles Demolished by Warships' Guns

NO INVASION OF EGYPT

ATHENS, Jan. 11. — The fort at Tchanak Kalessi, guarding the south side of the entrance to the Dardanelles, has been demolished by the continued bombardment of the allies' warships, and has been evacuated by the Turkish garrison, according to a despatch received from Salonica today. Forts Elles and Sedil - have been badly damaged, but are still holding out.

Tchanak Kalessi is known as "the Castle of Asia." The forts there, Kalo Sultanie, was of old construction, but new guns of the largest type had been mounted within the last two years.

TURKS ABANDON INVASION OF EGYPT

It is reported here that the plan to have the eighth Turkish army corps proceed from Damascus to the Egyptian frontier has been abandoned. Previous advices were to the effect that this corps, with 8,100 camels, already had left Damascus for Egypt. The cancellation of the programme is said to be due to a fear lest the allies disembark troops in Syria, which would threaten the Turkish line of communication.

TURK GOVERNMENT DEMANDS BIG CREDIT

Advices from Constantinople say that the Turkish Government has introduced in Parliament a demand for an extraordinary credit of £10,000,000 Turkish. Next year's budget, it was stated, will show a deficit of £20,000,000 Turkish, in which connection the credit "Ottomane." A Turkish pound is equal to eighteen shillings, or $4.36.

GREEKS SUFFER IN ASIA MINOR

The situation of the Greeks in Asia Minor is becoming desperate, owing to the persecution and violence to which they are being subjected. Greek stores have been pillaged, women insulted and men forcibly enrolled in the army.

At Sidonia, Magnesia, the despatch adds, several Greeks have been murdered in the streets, and conditions are so bad at Smyrna that a massacre is feared.

How Roumania is Cut Off—The recent Russian victories in Bukowina enables them to cut off Roumania entirely from Austria Hungary. This position considerably alters the military and diplomatic situation since the yielding of Transylvania to Roumania no longer depends upon Austria-Hungary. The question of Roumania's future attitude is now less important, because Russian armies could paralyse any hostile action.

Intoxicated Recruits Will Be Dismissed

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—Orders have gone out by direction of the Minister of Militia to all commanding officers in Canada to the effect that any recruit found under the influence of liquor shall be summarily dismissed from the service. The Minister has decided not to tolerate any marked inebriety in the ranks of the Canadian force preparing for the front, and hereafter drunken soldiers should no longer be seen on the streets at the mobilization cities.

WORE STRAW HAT IN MID-WINTER

Young Man Causes Consternation by Walking Down Street in Summer Attire.

An elderly gentleman attired in a fur-lined overcoat and with a fur cap pulled snugly over his ears was noticed to pause while walking on King street recently and look around. What he saw he could not believe and blaming it on his failing eyesight or his foggy glasses he took from a pocket a handkerchief and polished the already shining spectacles. He then adjusted them and taking another good look at a retreating figure he shivered perceptibly and pulling his great coat closer about his figure he shivered again and muttering to himself he turned and continued on his way.

What the man in the fur coat saw was enough to make the blood of anyone run cold. What at first he had believed to be an illusion due to his bad eyesight proved to be a dapper young man attired in a light weight suit and wearing on his head one of the latest creations in straw hats. The elderly gentleman was not the only person on the street who turned and stared after the retreating figure that brought to their minds scenes of the good old summer time, but like the former, they were at a loss to account for his presence on a day when the temperature was far from summer heat. It was later learned that the straw hat had been worn by the young man as a result of a wager.

Joffre's Plan To Worry The Enemy

To Direct Pressure At Different Points In The German Line And Generally Harrass Their Forces

PARIS, Jan. 11—General Joffre has taken the motto of General Grant, the famous American soldier, for his winter plan of campaign: "He is going to fight the battle out along the present line, if it takes all winter." He is going to give the Germans no rest. The allies will keep pressing against the German front with varying degrees of pressure, using the bayonet at some points and artillery exclusively at others.

What Will Happen.

The results expected from this plan of campaign may be summed up briefly as follows: "It will wear down the morale of the Germans; the general Anglo-French pressure all along the front will prevent the Germans from shifting any considerable body of troops to the eastern theatre of war; the ammunition stops of the Germans will be strained to meet the continuous fire of the allies and the Germans will be compelled to relinquish advanced positions under the battering of fresh French and British troops.

A Fight for Highways.

In the Champagne region the violent fighting for possession of roads is still in progress. The hostilities around Perthes-les-Hurlus and Beausejour as well as those further east in the Argonne may be described as a fight for highways. Both Perthes and Beausejour lie a trifle to the east of Souain, between Rheims and the Argonne, on high ground controlled by an important road. This highway connects with the strategic turnpike stretching eastward from Rheims through St. Menehould. In times of peace it was used to a large extent by automobile tourists by reason of its width and fine, hard surface. Just west of Perthes and Beausejour, another road runs northward from Souain. From St. Menehould, another highway runs north along the western slopes of the region of the Argonne forest. These roads are important alike to both French and Germans.

A CERTAIN CURE FOR THE GERMAN MEASLES

Here is a prescription which has obtained circulation in England: Mix some Woolwich powders with disc. of iron or essence of lead, and administer in pills (or shells.) Have ready a little British Army (a little goes a long way), some Brussels sprouts and French mustered. Add a little Canadian cheese and Australian lamb and season with the best Indian curry. Set it on a Kitchener and keep stirring until quite hot.

If this does not make the patient perspire freely, rub the best Russian Bear's Grease on the chest and wrap in Berlin wool. — Dr. Cannon's Prescription.

P.S. — The patient must have on no account, any Fleet-Soap until the swelling in the head is quite disappeared.

YORKSHIRE NEEDS FARM LABOURERS

Food Prices Affected and Suggestion Has Been Made That Lads Be Freed From School

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Scarcity of farm workers in North and East Yorkshire is now most serious, education authorities being petitioned to free lads from school in order to assist farmers. Members of the Government are getting anxious over raising the price of foodstuffs.

Partly due to shortage of labour at docks, Belgian refugees would be glad, it is said, to earn money, both at docks and on farms, but trade unions would be instantly in arms against such proposals.

The Government would almost certainly decline to support such method getting over present difficulty.

In regard to wheat shortage here the suggestion is made that the Canadian Government should prohibit exportation of wheat to any country except Great Britain or allies, and the whole of Canada's surplus should be purchased at a fixed price, shipped here and sold again on condition that an agreed price should be charged consumer.

GERMANS HAVE 160,000 IN ALSACE

Swiss Troops Lined Along the Border to Maintain Neutrality

BASLE, Jan. 11.—With all Upper Alsace turned into a battlefield and with hostilities continually increasing, Switzerland to-day took steps to preserve her neutrality. All the troops now mobilised have been ordered to guard the frontier and plans have been completed for the calling out of additional troops if needed.

The Swiss Red Cross and the National Sanitary Commission, the sisters of the various Roman Catholic organisations and other nursing guilds, have taken up positions along the frontier of the Jura Mountains. They will care for all wounded, regardless of nationality, who may be sent across the border.

Enemy in Strength.

Both the Germans and the French continue to pour additional troops into the adjacent country. At the present time the Germans have there more than 160,000 men, including the 15th and the 8th army corps. Sixty thousand men are concentrated at Mulhausen, and 35,000 additional along the roads north and west of that city.

The French have also strengthened the positions they have taken and are bringing up additional artillery to maintain them.

UNCLE SAM LOOMS SMALL IN EUROPE

Chicago News Man Says Little Old U. S. A.—Is Making No Real Friends and is Laying Up Trouble

GERMANS SCORNFUL

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—The Daily News prints the following special Marconigram from Willward Price, its London, Eng., correspondent: —

"Conversations with persons of force, representing the sentiments of Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy, Germany and Austria, compel the conviction that the United States is making no real friends in this war. On the contrary, it is impossible not to see that the American name is suffering, and that conceivably the Republic is laying up grave trouble for itself in the future.

"The general charge against our country is that we are displaying a shameless lack of idealism, chivalry, magnanimity and courage. Britons, Frenchmen, Russians and Italians blame Americans for ignoring the invasion of Belgium and the violations of the conventions of The Hague, and then springing into the international arena with a protest relating exclusively to matters of trade. The argument in these complaints is that if President Wilson had protested against the violations of treaties and the principles of civilized warfare he could have protested with vastly greater effect against the arbitrary and possibly indefensible interference with American cargoes.

Unmoved by Belgium's Fate.

It is asserted on every hand that the Americans witnessed, unmoved—that is, so far as official action was concerned — the crucifixion of Belgium, the killing and maiming of women and children and other non-combatants, the destruction of private property, and the strewing of the open seas with long-lived floating mines, all involving enormous sacrifices to life and wealth without commensurate military advantage.

"Again and again one hears men of repute say that Mr. Wilson has revealed his own cowardice, degraded the Presidency, and dishonoured American political and moral traditions.

"These outbursts do not proceed from resentment at Mr. Wilson's protest with respect to British and French treatment of American trade with neutral countries. Everyone admits that Mr. Wilson is bound to protect the neutral commerce of America as far as he can. The indictment against us, so far as I can measure it, simply is this: we abdicated ignominiously and ran away when great questions of morals and humanity were concerned, but promptly recovered our sense of duty and our courage when the state of war threatened to reduce the profits of the coppers kings and otherwise penalize America materially.

Lost Respect of Teuton.

"Now, if we have lost, at least for the time being, the respectful admiration of the allies, I think it cannot possibly be said that we have gained the high opinion or affection of the Teutonic empires. My experience is that influential Germans are inclined to speak of us with scorn. They accuse us of cringing to Britain, of enduring its arrogant monopoly of the sea, of tolerating British control of cables largely owned by Americans, and otherwise showing ourselves small.

"'If you Americans can put up with all this,' they say, 'and if you will not end the brutal and contemptuous British world-tyranny, we Germans will.'

"Thus, it seems that the whole of Europe is hardening against America. Enthusiastic friends we have nowhere. One cannot doubt, as matters stand, that when peace comes the United States will have no hand in the making of terms. Its isolation, in all events, so far as Europe is concerned, will be nearly complete, and the materialistic or not only its own traditional policies in the western hemisphere, but its own national security, will require the utmost naval and military strength of which it is capable."

PANIC IN TRIESTE OVER FEAR OF BOMBARDMENT

SPECIAL CABLE:

VENICE, Jan. 12.—Refugees from Trieste who reached here to-day, report that the city is in a panic, fearing a bombardment by part of the Franco-British fleet, now active again in the Adriatic. Prince Hohenlohe, governor, they say, is holding a fast automobile in readiness day and night for flight. The Prince, it is claimed, has already made two false starts, only to learn, when he had got away from the city, that there was no bombardment.

Great Excitement In the Wheat Pit

Bulls, In a Mad Frenzy, Send Wheat Up to $1.40, Highest Since 1909

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Smashing of war record prices for wheat began promptly to-day at the first gong on 'change. Opening quotations were 7-8 to 1 5-8 cents above last night. May wheat, the leading option, jumped to $1.39 3-4 as against $1.39 5-8, the tip-top for yesterday.

Reports of an ultimatum to Turkey by Italy had an explosive effect with buyers.

On a second wave of buying May wheat went to $1.40 a bushel, the highest figures, with few exceptions, in fifty years, the parallel thus going back broadly to the American civil war. To-day's high prices were supported by despatches telling of excitement in the grain trade at Liverpool and admitting that demand there was keen.

James A. Patten's Hand.

The opinion was general that undoubtedly James A. Patten, whose name is one to conjure with in the pit, was in the market, but the belief was accepted that the situation was outside the power of any individual. Heavy cash purchases and conditions abroad were credited with responsibility for the present situation.

Scenes in the pit grew more exciting as the day wore on. Brokers seemed to have gone mad for the moment in the general rush to buy. Many fairly lost their voices screaming orders.

Predictions were freely made that May wheat would go to $1.45 per bushel by to-morrow noon.

Still Soaring.

At noon wheat was quoted at $1.40 3-4 for May and $1.38 1-4 for July. At this time there was no indication of any break. On the other hand, buyers still were greatly in the majority.

Wheat $1.50 in New York.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—May wheat sold on the Consilidated Exchange afternoon at $1.50 a bushel, as compared with yesterday's price of $1.47 1-4.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

"Hit warn't nobody but—" after a pause he went on—"but Old Milt McBriar's own son, young Milt."

"That's all" said Jeb soberly; "I'm obleeged ter ye."

He went out with the sack on his shoulder and the rifle under his arm, but when he had reached a place in the woods where a blind trail struck back, he deposited his sack carefully under a ledge of overhanging rock. The clouds were mounting and banking now in a threat of rain, and since it was not his own meal he carried he must be doubly careful of its safety.

Then he crossed the ridge until he came to a point where the thicket grew down close and tangled to the road. He had seen young Milt going west along that road this morning, and by nightfall he would be riding back. The gods of Chance were playing into his hands.

So he lay down, closely hugging the earth, and cocked his rifle. For hours he crouched there with unspeakable patience, while his muscle cramped and his feet and hands grew cold under the pelting of a rain which was strangely raw and chilling for the season. The sun sank in an angry bank of thunder heads and the west grew lurid. The drenching downpour blinded him and trickled down his spine under his clothes, but at last he saw the figure he had expected, riding a horse which he knew. It was the same roan mare that Bad Anse had restored to Milt McBriar after that other day.

When young Milt rode slowly by, fifty yards away with his mount at a walk and his reins hanging he was untroubled by any anxiety because he was in his own territory and was at heart fearless. The older boy from Tribulation felt his temples throb, and the rifle came slowly up, and the one eye which was not closed looked point-blank across immovable sights and along a steady barrel into the placid face of his intended victim. He could see the white of Milt's eye and the ragged look of hair under the hat-brim which looked like a smudge of soot across his brow. Then slowly Jeb McNash shook his head. A spasm of battle went through him and shook his him like a convulsion to the soles of his feet. He had but to crook his finger to appease his blood-lust — and break his pledge.

"I've done give Anse my hand ter bide my time 'twill I war dead sartain" he told himself. "I hain't quite dead sartain yit. I reckon I've got ter wait a spell."

He uncocked the rifle and the other boy rode on, but young Jeb folded his arms on the wet earth and buried his face in them and sobbed, and it was an hour later that he stumbled to his feet and went groggily back, drunk with bitterness and emotion toward the house of Anse Havey. Yet when he arrived after nightfall his tongue told nothing and his features revealed less.

CHAPTER XVI.

Juanita, living in the cabin she had built, with the girl who had become her companion and satellite; making frequent hard journeys to some house which the shadow of illness had invaded, found it hard to believe that this life had been hers only a few months. Suspense seemed to stretch weeks to years and she awoke each new day braced to hear the news of some fresh outbreak, and wondered why she did not hear it. A few neighborhood children were already learning their rudiments, and plans for more building were going forward.

Sometimes Jeb came over from the brick house to see his sister and on the boy's face was always a dark cloud of settled resolve. If Juanita never questioned him on the topic that she knew was nearest his heart it was because she realized that to do so would be the surest way to estrange his friendship and confidence.

In one thing she had gained a point. She had bought as much property as she would need, probably much more than she would need, unless her dreams were fulfilled to a degree that lay beyond the probabilities.

Back somewhere behind the veil of mysteries Anse Havey had pressed a button or spoken a word and all the hindrance that had lain across her path straightway evaporated. Men had come to her, with no further solicitation on her part, and now it seemed that many were animated by a desire to turn an honest penny by the sale of land. In every conveyance that was drawn—deeds of ninety-nine-year lease instead of sale—she read a thrifty and careful knowledge of land laws, and reservation of mineral and timber rights, which she traced to the head of the clan.

Anse Havey had seemed ready to abide by his proposal for when she met him on the road one day, instead of riding by her with a curt, high-headed nod he drew rein and asked brusquely, "Got all the land ye need?"

She looked at him, statuesquely sitting his horse and raised her brows inquiringly. "Why?" she asked coolly.

"Because if ye ain't I stands ready to supply the balance."

"Thank you," she told him, partly because it gave her a feminine pleasure to bring that glitter of cold wrath to his eyes. "I only ask you to be just. I sha'n't tax your generosity."

"Suit yourself," was his short reply. "I'm ready to keep my word. It looks like a pity fer ye to sink so much money on a plan ye won't never have no call to use, but that's your business."

Her eyes flashed anger. "Is that a threat?" she inquired. "It doesn't frighten me. I shall use it enough to bring your system to ruins."

He laughed. "Go ahead," he said. "An' any time ye needs more rope call on me."

As summer spent itself there was opportunity for felling timber and the little sawmill down in the valley sent up its drone and whine in proclamation that her trees were being turned into squared timbers for her buildings. Often she would go down there and watch the pile grow and every log that went groaning against the teeth of the ripping disc was, to her, a new block for her house of dreams.

When one or two solid buildings should stand there it would all seem more tangible. Now, because of the murmurs of warning which continued to come to her, she could not shake off the sense that she might on any morning awake to find her whole scheme a shattered vision. It concerned no man, whispered the vague, disquieting little voices of rumour, to prevent her building a plant if she chose to do so in the face of warning, but hands might fall blightingly and arrestingly on that plant when its operation was completed.

Once when Milt McBriar rode up to the sawmill he found the girl sitting there, her hands clasped on her knees, gazing dreamily across the sawdust and confusion of the place.

"Ye're right-smart interested in thet thar woodpile, hain't ye, ma'am?" he inquired with a slow, benevolent smile. His kindliness of guise invited confidence and there was no one else within earshot so the girl looked up with her eyes a little misty and her voice impulsive.

"Mr. McBriar," she said, "every one of those timbers means part of a dream to me, and with every one of them that is set in place will go a hope and a prayer."

He nodded sympathetically. "I reckon," he said, "ye kin do right-smart good, too."

"Mr. McBriar," she flashed at him in point-blank questioning, "since I came here I have tried to be of use in a very simple and ineffective fashion. I have done what little I could for the sick and distressed, yet I am constantly being warned that I'm not to be allowed to carry on my work. Do you know of any reason why I shouldn't go ahead?"

He gazed at her for a moment quizzically, then shook his head.

"Oh, pshaw!" he exclaimed, "I wouldn't let no sich talk as thet fret me none. Folks hyarabouts hain't got much ter do except ter gossip round. Nobody hain't a-goin' ter hinder ye. We hain't such bad people, after all." After that she felt that from the McBriars she had gained official sanction, and her resentment against Anse Havey grew, because of his scornful ungraciousness.

The last weeks of that summer were weeks of drought and plague. Ordinarily in the hills storms brew swiftly and frequently and spend themselves in violent outpourings and cannonading of thunder, but that year the clouds seemed to have dried up, and down in the tablelands of the Bluegrass the crops were burned to worthless stalks and shrunken ear. Even up here in the birthplace of waters, the corn was brown and sapless so that when a breeze strayed over the hillside fields they sent up a thirsty, dying rasp of rattling whisper.

But it was not only in the famished forests and seared fields that the hot breath of the Plague breathed, carrying death in its fetid nostrils. Back in the cabins of the "branch-water folks" where little springs diminished and became polluted, all those who were not strong enough to throw off the touch of the spectre's finger, sickened and died, and typhoid went impartially in and out of Havey shack and McBriar cabin, whispering, "A pest on both your houses!"

The Widow McNash had not been herself since the death of Fletch. She, who had once been so strong over her drudgery now sat all day long on the doorstep of her brother's hovel, and in the language of her people, "jest sickened an' pined away."

So, as Juanita Holland and Good Anse Talbott rode sweating mules about the hills, receiving calls for help faster than they could answer them, they were not astonished to hear that the widow was among the stricken. Though they fought for her life, she refused to fight herself, and once again the Eastern girl stood with Dawn in the briar-choked "buryin' ground" and once more across an open grave she met the eyes of the men who stood for the old order. But now she had learned to set a lock on her lips and hold her counsel. So, when she met Anse and Jeb afterward, she asked without rancour, "May I take little Jesse back with me, too? He's too young," she added with just a heartsick trace of her old defiance, "to be useful to you, Mr. Havey, and I'd like to teach him what I can."

Anse and Jeb conferred, and the elder man came back and nodded his head.

"Jesse can go back with ye," he said. "I'm still sorry to give ye all the rope ye wants. When ye've had enough an' quits, let me know, an' I'll take care of Fletch's children."

Strangely enough the death of her mother did not seem to bring as much torture to the soul of the mountain girl as had that of her father. Often, indeed, she sat with a wide stare in her deep eyes and an agonized twist on her petal-like lips, in the mute suffering of a stoic race. But Juanita saw that this hard form of scorrow was yielding, and that even in a few weeks the new and, to Dawn, wonderful phases of life here at the Holland cabin would rouse her out of herself. All unconsciously her silvery peals of laughter would ring out at each fresh challenge to her sense of humour and merriment. She spoke no more of vengeful thoughts and Juanita believed that she was once more the light-hearted song-bird, the depths of whose nature had not yet been truly stirred; a creature meant rather to smile to the sunshine than to moan to the storm winds.

And on her farm, as folks called Juanita's place, that September saw many changes. Near the original cabin was springing up a new structure, larger than any other house in that neighbourhood, except possibly the strongholds of the chiefs, and as it grew and began to take form it loomed an air of ordered trimness to the countryside about it. It was fashioned in such style as should be in keeping with its surroundings and not give too emphatic a note of alien strangeness.

How Zam-Buk Cures Skin Diseases

As soon as applied, Zam-Buk penetrates right to the very root of the disease and kills the cause thereof. The rich herbal essences then so stimulate the cells below the surface that new healthy tissue is formed, which, as it grows, forces out the diseased tissue. Zam-Buk cures from the bottom up. This is the reason that sores and skin diseases cured by Zam-Buk, do not return.

Zam-Buk is entirely different from all other ointments. It does not contain harsh minerals, or poisonous coloring matter. Nor does it contain coarse animal fats, which, in a short time, go rancid. Zam-Buk will keep indefinitely.

Many people have been cured by Zam-Buk after having suffered years and spent hundreds of dollars trying various remedies in vain. If you suffer from any skin disease or injury, benefit by the experiences of others. Try Zam-Buk first. Don't trouble with useless remedies.

Zam-Buk is unequalled for eczema, piles, pimples, cuts, burns, bruises, cold sores, frost bites, chapped hands, and all skin diseases and injuries.

We are so convinced that a trial of Zam-Buk will prove to you its superiority, that we will send you a FREE TRIAL box on receipt of this article, name of paper, and 1c. stamp to pay return postage. Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

VON DER TANN SUNK?

British Battle Cruiser Invincible Victorious, Says Rumor.

BUENOS AYRES, Jan. 11. — La Prensa publishes the report that an engagement has taken place off Rio Grande de Norte, Brazil, between the British battle cruiser Invincible and the German battle cruiser Von der Tann, adding that the Von der Tann has been sunk.

The German battle cruiser Von der Tann was reported several weeks ago to have crossed the Atlantic to join the other German warships in the South Atlantic and Pacific. Her arrival in these waters has never been recorded.

The Von der Tann is of 18,000 tons displacement, 562 feet in length, a speed of 27.6 knots. She carries a complement of 910 men and an armament of eight 11-inch guns, ten 5.9 guns, 16 24-pounders and four torpedo tubes.

The British battle cruiser Invincible is of 17,250 tons displacement, with a complement of 731 men. Her armament includes eight 12-inch guns, 16 4-inch guns and four torpedo tubes.

The Invincible was one of the British squadron which sunk the German squadron, including the Gneisenau, Scharnhorst, Nurnberg, and Leipzig, off the Falkland Islands.

Report Not Confirmed.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 11.—The Havas Agency has received no confirmation of the reported naval battle between the British cruiser Invincible and the German cruiser Von der Tann, off Rio Grande de Norte. Naval officials here place little credence in the report.

Bread Famine Causes Riot.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 11. — (Via London.)—A despatch to The Telegraaf from Brussels says: "A bread riot has occurred at Marcinelle, Province of Hainault, Belgium. A crowd collected around the town hall and smashed its windows. The police restored order with some difficulty, and later bread was supplied to the populace.

Nervous Prostration, or Neurasthenia, is one of the worst forms of nerve trouble and brings about a general weakness of the whole nervous system.
The symptoms presenting themselves are headache, a feeling of depression, disturbed and restless, unfreshing sleep, often troubled with dreams, 'right when in crowded places, dread of being alone, horror of society, fright of travelling, muscular weakness, sense of fatigue upon effort, etc.
When the nerves become affected in this way the heart generally becomes affected too.
All are curable if taken in time.
Milburns Heart and Nerve Pills are just what you require at this time. They strengthen the nerves and build up the whole system.
Mrs. John Hewson, Caledonia, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to let you know the great benefit your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. I suffered for four years with heart trouble and nervous prostration. I was so bad I could not go up stairs without sitting down at the top before I could go to my room. I could not sleep nor could I lie on my left side, for it would seem as if my heart would stop. I thought my time had come. I was doctoring with the doctor, but didn't get any benefit. I took eight boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and am enjoying good health."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

SOMETIMES A CLEAR CONSCIENCE NEEDS NO ACCUSER

I was shopping one day, when a woman in the place where I was buying dry goods was arrested for shoplifting. She seemed to be a lady and very much cut up. She endeavoured to convince the proprietor that she as respectable and had no occasion to steal, but he was obdurate, and the poor woman was hustled off to a police station. A few days later I saw by a newspaper that the lady was the wife of a wealthy and prominent man. She lived in another city, and, there being no one at hand to vouch for her, she spent the night in a cell. Her husband came for her, got her out and commenced suit against the dry goods firm for $100,000 damages.

This matter made so great an impression on me that I dreaded thereafter getting into such a position myself. I never went to a counter to look over goods but that I felt that the eyes of a detective were upon me.

One day while buying some goods I laid my bag on the counter to examine them. Several other persons came to the counter while I was there. When I finished making my purchases—they were to be sent home—I took up my bag and went to another counter, where I bought a spool of thread, and, opening my bag to put in the purchase, noticed some bundles that I could not account for. Either they had been put in my bag or I had changed bags with someone else.

Remembering the case I have mentioned, I became terror stricken lest I should be arrested as a thief.

And here is where an innocent person is liable to incriminate himself. Unless very cool and collected there are nineteen chances in twenty that he will do the wrong thing, and there are nineteen chances in twenty that one, especially a woman, will not be cool and collected. I certainly was not, and I did not do what I should have done—that is, take the bag to the office and report the facts. My one desire was to get out of that store before the lynx eyed detective on duty should pounce upon me. I went toward the door in a great hurry doubtless showing by my expression that I was a thief running away with goods.

I attracted the attention of a woman, who followed me out. I caught sight of her staring at me and, looking back on gaining the street, saw her coming behind me. I did not doubt that she was a detective, employed by the firm to watch shoplifters, and that I would be arrested as soon as she could secure the services of a policeman. I hurried on, she following as fast as she could. But she did not gain on me, for she was older than I and somewhat corpulent.

Seeing a cab standing beside the curb, I jumped in and told the cabman to drive me to my house. The woman coming up as we were driving away, endeavoured to attract the cabman's attention, but he did not see her. There was no other cab near, and I succeeded in getting away from the woman. When I reached home I ran in as quickly as I could, locked the door behind me, and after calling to the maid to admit no one I went upstairs to my room.

I had not been there long before there was a sharp ring at the doorbell. I remained in my room, shivering, and the summons was not answered. There was another and another ring, but after that whoever was there went away. I heard some one going down the steps, and, looking out of the window, saw a policeman riding away on a motorcycle.

I determined to get away from the house before he could come back, but first concluded to examine the bag. It was not mine and contained a number of articles of no great value that were evidently purchases of a woman. Then I recalled that I had been at my jeweler's and brought away a valuable brooch that I had left there for repair. I had exchanged my brooch for a yard of cambric, six handkerchiefs, half a yard of dress lining and a number of other articles of no more value.

While I was preparing to continue my flight I heard a latchkey fumbling in the keyhole of the front door. I knew it was my husband and ran downstairs, opened the door and when he entered fell into his arms. In reply to his agonized appeals to be told what was the matter I finally gasped that I was about to be arrested as a shoplifter. This naturally astonished him, and he worked hard with me till he got the story.

"Nonsense!" he exclaimed. "Some woman has unintentionally exchanged bags. Doubtless while shopping at the same counter with you, you both laid down your bags and she picked up the wrong bag. When you turned for yours you took what was left."

There was another ring at the door bell, and my husband insisted on going to the door. I ran upstairs and hid in the closet. Presently I heard him calling, but I remained where I was till he came upstairs with my lost bag.

The woman who had followed me, finding that she had exchanged bags with some one and seeing me leave the store, recognised me as one she had seen shopping beside her and had tried to catch me. Failing, she had sent a motorcycle policeman after me. He had returned, reported that he had failed to gain admittance and the woman had come to restore my bag with a $1,000 brooch in it for her own containing articles worth very little.—By Louise B. Cunningham.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Couldn't Beat Her.

Ellanora had been the negro maid at Mrs. Hopson's for several years and left to get married. She moved to another city, and nothing had been seen of her for a couple of years, when one day she called on her former mistress.

"And so you have a little son, Ellanora?" said Mrs. Hopson.

"Yas'um," smiled the woman—"a nice little boy."

"And what did you name him?" queried Mrs. Hopson.

"Well, we calls him Eggnog," replied the colored woman.

"Eggnog!" said the other. "That's a funny name for a boy."

"Well, yo' see, missus," explained Ellanora, "dat cullud woman what lives nex' fowh to me named her twins Tom and Jerry, an' I didn't want to be outdone by her."—Delineator.

Life Belts Aren't Cork.

Most people if asked what life belts were composed of would answer, "Cork." But it isn't so nowadays. Cork life belts are nearly as dead as the dodo. The substance almost always used nowadays is a fibrous stuff called kapok, obtained from a plant that grows in Java. Kapok was used to stuff cushions for many years before the idea was hit on of using its beautifully buoyant qualities for nobler purposes. The most buoyant material known to be in existence is, however, made of poppy heads. Experimental buoys have been made of this material, but not with very satisfactory results. Poppy heads crush too easily to make a perfect substance.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Confidential Communication.

"Who painted that wonderful old picture?" asked the visitor.

"Let me tell you a secret," replied Mr. Cumrox. "If I had spent my life learning to pronounce the names of all these great artists I'd never have made money enough to buy their pictures."—Washington Star.

Singing Pigeons.

The queer Chinese change pigeons into song birds by fastening whistles to their breasts. The wind of their flight then causes a weird and plaintive music that is seldom silenced in the pigeon haunted cities of Peking and Canton.

Defining a Musician.

"Pa, what is an accomplished musician?"

"One who sings songs that nobody can understand."—Detroit Free Press.

Before and After.

She (spoiling)—Before we were married you often used to catch me in your arms. He—Yes, and now I catch you in my pockets.

He is often the wisest man who is not wise at all.—Wordsworth.

Do you Believe in going straight to the weak spot in treating disease? If so, you will never use anything but Pepe for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and throat and lung troubles. Listen why!

Pepe are tiny tablets, which contain rich medicinal ingredients, so prepared that they turn into vapour in the mouth, and are breathed down to the throat, the breathing tubes and lungs direct.

Cough mixtures go—not to the lungs and chest at all, but to the stomach. There is absolutely no direct connection between stomach and lungs.

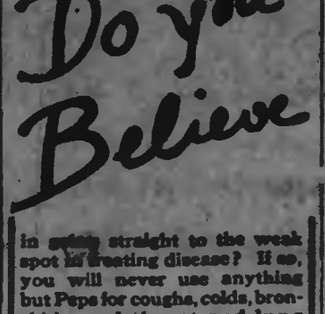
When you have a bad cold, your digestion is weakened. You lose appetite, and if a man, your usual smoke does not "taste good." In other words, your digestive system is looking town. All cough mixtures make this condition worse.

Don't ruin your stomach to heal your lungs. Take a remedy that goes right to the spot—Pepe.

Surprising how they end coughs, catarrh, bronchitis, sore throat, "clergyman's throat," asthma, and all lung troubles. Contain no poison, and are best for children.

Dr. Gordon Stables says:—"If you wish to ease and end a cough, if you desire to loosen tickling phlegm, and clear the throat and the breathing tubes, use Pepe. The pine fumes and balsamic fumes, so beneficial in throat and lung trouble, which are liberated when a Pep is put into the mouth, also serve another good purpose. They are strongly germicidal, and germs of disease in the mouth, on the palate, in the throat, and in the breathing tubes, are at once destroyed by their action."

Have you tried this famous remedy? If not, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Pepe Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Pepe at 50c. box.



Ended the Boa Constrictor.

"All my reading life," says Dr. Frank Baldwin, the Philippines explorer, "I have regarded the boa constrictor with horror and aversion. When I got into the jungle my great desire was to meet a large boa in order that I might do him some very real harm. When I did find one my sentiments were those of pity for the snake. He was stretched across the path, and when the natives saw him they pounced upon him with yells of delight. On the other hand, he seemed dazed.

"With a native for every yard of him, holding him firmly he journeyed on legs through the jungle and down to the beach. He wriggled feebly and hissed in a hopeless manner. There they cut his head off with no more ceremony than they would have used if he had been a chicken, folded as much as they could get of him into a kind of clam shell about three feet in diameter and built a fire. In an hour he was cooked, and in another hour this great snake which had been painfully accumulating feet and inches for years had disappeared. I must say that I felt a little indignant."—Youth's Companion.

Japanese Child Jugglers.

Among the itinerant street entertainers in London are a number of tiny Japanese children, usually boys. They make their way into hotels and public house bars, saloons and restaurants and, producing a sheaf of knives from their pockets, suddenly begin juggling with them in the most expert manner, accompanying the performance with a monotonous singsong which seems to be inseparable from the exhibition. Being very small, they seldom depart without receiving a shower of coppers, to which they respond at the doorway with a little chant of thanksgiving. It is difficult to guess the age of Japanese children, but none of the tiny tots engaged in this business appear to be more than seven years old.

Grades of Lemons.

There are a good many interesting points about lemons. There are several qualities that combine to make a prime or fancy brand of lemons. A first class lemon must be free from specks, have a smooth skin of a pale yellow color and be very hard. Take a magnifying glass and you will see that the little black specks on the lemon that look like seeds are really parasites. They are called lemon flies, and a curious fact is that as soon as the lemon is cut from the tree these parasites die immediately.

The best fruit comes from a little place near Naples, Italy, called Maiori. The next in grade comes from Sorrento. Those from Messina and Palermo are about the same quality and rank next, and those from Catania are inferior. The Maiori lemons are very carefully cultivated. They are on the trees even while the snow is still on the ground, but are kept covered with matting to protect them, not only from the cold, but from the scorching rays of the sun. They are nearly white when picked, very graceful and regular in shape and are exceedingly smooth and hard.—Spatula.

The Capitol.

The capitol at Washington fronts east and stands on a plateau eighty-eight feet above the level of the Potomac river. The entire length of the building north and south is 751 feet 4 inches, and its greatest dimension from east to west is 350 feet. The area covered by the building is 153,112 square feet. The dome of the original central building was constructed of wood, covered with copper. This was replaced in 1856 by the present structure of cast iron. It was completed in 1865. The entire weight of iron used is 8,909,200 pounds. The dome is crowned by a bronze statue of Freedom, which is 19 feet 6 inches high and weighs 14,985 pounds. It was modeled by Crawford. The height of the dome above the base line of the east front is 287 feet 5 inches. The greatest diameter at the base is 135 feet 5 inches. The rotunda is 97 feet 6 inches in diameter and its height from the floor to the top of the canopy is 180 feet 3 inches.

An Old, Family Cough Remedy, Home-Made

Easily Prepared—Costs Very Little, but is Prompt, Sure and Effective

By making this old-time cough syrup at home you not only save about $2, as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a much more prompt and positive remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly—and is excellent, too, for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and spasmodic croup.

Get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. It quickly loosens the dry, hoarse or painful cough, and also heals the inflamed membranes. It also has a remarkable effect in overcoming the persistent loose cough by stopping the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes.

The effect of pine on the membranes is known by almost every one. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements.

There are many worthless imitations of this famous mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Whistles Scare Them.

Indians are very fond of dogs, and around every wigwam, tepee, hut or wherever they may reside there are always from six to twenty wolfish dogs. An Indian's dog loves an Indian and hates a white man with equal intensity. When a white man drives through an Indian village and sees a dog by the wayside his natural impulse is to whistle in a friendly way. But the instant he whistles the dog turns tail and is out of sight quicker than if he had been kicked. An Indian never whistles to his dog when he wants the animal to come to him; he places his tongue against his teeth and hisses.

Origin of Quarantine.

In the fourteenth century one-fourth of the population of Europe are computed to have died of the bubonic plague, introduced from the east. The first measures to check its spread were adopted by the city of Venice, which appointed in 1348 three guardians of the public health. In 1403 Venice established a lazaret, or contagious disease hospital, on a small island adjoining the city. This was the beginning of quarantine. The word itself means "forty" and implies forty days, the period of detention imposed on vessels at this (the) Venetian quarantine.

The Right Time.

The right time to reach the members of the family is when they are at home, and the right way to reach them is through the advertising columns of the paper that goes into the homes. There are other methods of advertising that enjoy a certain transitory popularity, because they are new or novel, but the oldest, wisest and most successful advertisers tie their faith to the home newspaper. When people are away from their homes, there are a thousand things to divert their attention, but an advertisement read in the quiet of the family circle will be read and remembered.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

An argument in favor of long sleeves on work dresses is that the rolled up sleeves way be unrolled when the deadfall rings or gongs interruption of the work occurs. But this is a fallacious argument, because the sleeves by that time are crushed and rumpled and look better rolled up however informal their appearance in the meantime may be.

These essential features are possessed by the house dress, illustrated, which is made of dotted percale, with linen collar, cuffs, belt and pocket. The pattern, No. 6904, comes in sizes from 34 to 44 inches bust measure. The skirt is gored and gathered a little at the back. The waist is very plain and practical, with turnover collar and cut-in sleeve. This is the style of house dress that is most appreciated in the laundry.

Ruin And Desolation On France's Eastern Frontier

Fighting Razes Villages and Cuts Trenches From the Argonne to the Vosges—Alpine Chasseurs Lose Heavily in Action Against Germans

Vivid are the descriptions of a countryside scorched and ravaged by hostile armies, given by Auguste Avril in the Figaro. Mr. Avril traversed Lorraine, the Vosges and the Argonne in the company of other French newspaper men, who were especially invited by the French General Staff to go to the front.

"As far as Epinal," he says, "we live in the midst of ruins. The struggle has been formidable in this quarter, where the Germans, who occupied it early in the campaign, have been driven out.

"We arrived at Gerbervillier, already sadly celebrated. It is nothing but ruins, ruins lamentable and touching. Of what was in other times a pretty chef-lieu de canton (county seat) there is nothing left but a few calcined walls and heaps of debris.

"Did the battle do this? Did bursting shells ravage these houses. No, it is all the work of incendiaries. The Germans occupying it, Bavarian troops, checkmated by a battalion of chasseurs, were forced to retire. In retiring the Bavarians threw their incendiary bombs in the houses and set fire to the entire place.

"The Germans arrested hostages. They fell upon the chateau of the Lambertye family, which contained many objects of art, and upon their chapel, which was considered a marvel of artistic construction. They sacked it all.

"Chateau, chapel, all are in ruins. All one heap of blackened debris.

An Aged Man's Prayer.

"What hate there must be in the hearts of the 1,400 inhabitants of Gerbervillier obliged to abandon their homes, to wander along the roads and to search for shelter far away.

"One aged man said: 'My only prayer is that they will be made to pay in like manner when our troops strike their country.'

"From here we took up our journey, the road passing through more heaps of ruins. In Moyen a few houses are still standing. At Pierremont a desperate fight took place. But here the character of the devastation is not the same. Shells have smashed these roofs, torn through these walls, razed these farms. Soldiers fought savagely here. But it has been clean fighting—not assassination, not arson.

"Then on through Moliflen, Bro. Raon l'Etape. On all sides are evidences of the bitter struggle that took place. The Germans resisted to the last gap at this cemetery, at that railroad line, along that brook. They have been pushed back through the Vosges, where we are holding them.

"Our arrival at Epinal marked the end of the first stage of our journey. Here military activity is great. Formidable defence works have been erected. Trenches after trenches cover miles of territory, barbed wire entanglements are everywhere.

"The military governor of Epinal, General ——, is a chief in every sense of the word. He watches over all; nothing escapes him. In his automobile he is continually on the go, scouring the countryside, assisting at target practice, directing garrison manoeuvres, inspecting the fortified works.

Work of Alpine Chasseurs.

"Confidence reigns. Every one is ready, ready to march forward, to victory. I have found this sentiment everywhere along the front, especially among ga battalion of Alpine chasseurs which we saw manoeuvring in the Vosges, in the midst of an immense forest of pines.

"They are admirable soldiers, these Alpine chasseurs, mountaineers all; most of them hailing from the Dauphine. They have been resting here for two months. They took part in the action in the early stages of the war, between Lorraine and Upper Alsace. For five days this battalion, manoeuvring before us, mounting and, descending the mountain slopes, held, with one other battalion, during the latter part of September, a superior force of Germans, saving the Fourteenth corps from envelopment. Supported by some dismounted cavalry, they underwent considerable losses in the region of Mandray.

"This particular battalion left on the field 50 dead and 700 wounded. Ten officers were killed, including Major Verlet-Anus, one of the heroes of the Moroccan campaign, and fourteen wounded. The present commandant is the third since the outbreak of the war.

"Since that time the battalion has been re-formed, with the aid of drafts of new men, most of them reservists of youths of the class of 1914. Their work is very snappy. We saw them defiling along gthe mountain road. It was splendid. Supple, muscular and alert, they showed no traces of fatigue after an arduous drill."

JULES FRANCOIS

Jules Francois is poet, and gallant and gay;
Jules Francois makes frocks in the Rue de la Paix;
Since the mobilisation Jules Francois' the one
That sits by the breech of a galloping gun,
In the team of a galloping gun!

When the wheatfields of August stood white on the plain
Jules Francois was ordered to go to Lorraine,
Since the guns would get flirting with good Mr. Krupp
And wanted Jules Francois to limber them up,
To lay and to limber them up!

The road it was dusty, the road it was long,
But there was Jules Francois to make you a song;
He sang them a song, and he fondled his gun,
Though I wouldn't translate it he sang it Al;'
His battery thought it Al!

The morning was fresh and the morning was cool
When they stopped in an orchard two miles out of Toul,
And the gray mussies spat through the gray mussies' smoke,
And there was Jules Francois to make you a joke,
To crack his idea of a joke—

"The road to our Paris 'tis hard as can be:
The road to that London no matter at 'tho sea;
So, voiz-tu, mon gars? 'tis as certain as sin
'Tis wisdom that chooses the road to Berlin!"
So they follow the road to Berlin.

HOW THIN PEOPLE CAN PUT ON FLESH

A New Discovery

This man and woman—that big, hearty fellow dinner you ate last night—what became of all the fat-producing nutriment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. What food gained from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and sick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are easily out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and fussy cookery, drink drink drink the fresh crystal rubbish. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of them a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, sugar sent blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material to every part of the body. Soon much of your body, digestion filled with your food will be assimilated, the blood in costly nourishment form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 20 pounds a month with Sargol. Druggists here are authorized to guarantee it. Some of the best flesh producing elements to Sargol are contained in Vinol, but Vinol is a physician, and Sargol, which is fully and successfully used in Peterborough and vicinity will thrive subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Man's Fear of Lightning.

It is hopeless to try to quiet human fears of the thunderstorm by statistics showing that lightning kills far fewer persons than measles or motorcars. Lichtenberg, the eighteenth century physicist, who was a satirist as well as a specialist on electricity, wrote in vain his article on "Fear of Lightning." At that moment there was dysentery in Gottingen, and six persons were said to have died—"more than twice as many, in a few days as lightning has killed in our town in more than half a century, and yet the public seem remarkably easy on the subject." How different it would be, Lichtenberg reflected, "if the dysentery rose above the tendon in the form of a big black devil, changing day into twilight, and whenever it touched a victim exploded with a violent thunderclap."—London Chronicle.

Steel Rail Inventor.

The first modern steel rails of the type which made high speed railway operation possible were designed by Filmmen Henry Distler, who was born at Freedom, O., in 1838. He became a civil and metallurgical engineer, and after four years as chief engineer of the city of Akron, O., he turned his attention to railroading and transportation problems. His first invention, the dynagraph, was made in 1874. He perfected the track indicator in 1880 and three years later designed the first five inch steel rail used in America. In 1888 he introduced the first six inch 100 pound rails. Another of his inventions which made the famous "Hero" of today possible was the compensograph, an instrument for obtaining and registering strains in rails under moving trains.

Slobodnaia Forest, Lithuania.

In the great pine Slobodnaia forest, in Lithuania, which is about 180 miles in circumference, the primeval forest still stands, and all the wild animals native to central European forests are found there except bears and wolves, which were exterminated some years ago. Except for the roads which pass through it, the forest is unchanged. It is visited by few people except the foresters.

SELF TORTURE MARKS OPENING OF HOLY WAR

CONSTANTINOPLE—(By mail to New York via Salonika) — Oriental fanaticism, inciting self torture of the most repulsive character, marked the proclamation here to-night of the holy war on behalf of Turkey and her allies. I saw more than 100 men and two boys of tender years, shed their own blood at a single Persian mosque here in Constantinople as a part of the spectacle, which, for sheer brutality, carried one back to the torture days of the 12th century.

Guarded by one of the brilliantly uniformed, heavily armed dragomen of the American embassy I was escorted to the mosque in the very heart of the native quarter. I had secured permission to view the ceremony through the courtesy of one of Constantinople's leading Persian merchants. The mosque, decorated with in in the most remarkable fashion, outwardly resembled a huge factory structure. The pavilion in the rear, erected for the shiek, seemed more like a stable than a structure built for religious purposes.

Boys' Bodies Drip Blood.

Just as the sun set the strains of music burst from the crude pavilion. Then two great horses completely covered with rich trappings, came through the curtained entrance. On their backs were two small boys. They represented the slain sons of the great prophet, Mahomet. Their skulls were shaven clean so that parts of them shone like bone in the wavering fires of the torches carried alongside. The rest of their heads and their bodies were covered with fresh blood dripping from razor slashes. In their right hand eac hcarried a long knife. With it they gashed themselves anew and kept the blood from coagulating on their wounds. The crimson flow dripped down on their spotless white robes. But they sat on their horses like statues; on their faces contemptuous smiles. Behind them came a band of true believers. Their garb was black, their shoulders bare. They carried huge barbed scourges with which they lashed themselves across the back.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clog the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headache, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Diamond Saws For Stone.

In the four fields of stone cutting—hard, soft, cast stone and terra cotta—new methods have wrought great changes of late. In the large cutting plants limestone is handled like so much wood and is cut by circular saws, tungsteel by planes and bored into with much the same sort of tools as are used by woodworkers. By all means the most interesting machine used in this work is the diamond saw. The word "diamond" is not figuratively applied, for the device actually includes a huge circular saw set around the edge with real diamonds. They are not the clear, white stones that are used in jewelry, to be sure, but for all that they are real black diamonds, said to be worth about $5 a karat. These stones are about the size of dried peas and are set in gains in interchangeable steel teeth. One of these saws will eat its way through limestone at the rate of twelve inches in a minute. At the end of a month the diamond teeth are taken out and sent away to be reset and reset. A new set of diamond teeth is then put in place at a cost of about $600.—Argonaut.

The "King of Rome."

What became of Napoleon's son is a question often asked, as little mention is made in history of the young prince, the desire of his father's life, who was born March 20, 1811, amid great rejoicing in Paris and hailed as the "king of Rome." In January, 1814, Napoleon embraced his wife and child for the last time, and this really ended the reign of the little king "who never saw his kingdom." He was reared in the Austrian court under the name of the Duke of Reichstadt and grew to be a handsome young fellow and quite a brilliant scholar. He had one short year of military life and then contracted pulmonary disease, from which he died in his twenty-second year. He worshiped the memory of his father and always spent the anniversary of his death, July 22, in his own rooms. He is buried in the Carthusian monastery of Vienna, which is the Austrian Westminster abbey.

The Bottle Tree.

The Sterculia is a genus largely represented in Queensland and widely distributed. To it belongs the bottle tree of the west of Queensland. Blacks eat the seeds of one of the species of the coast, and in the Philippines those of apparently a closely allied species are considered wholesome when roasted or boiled, though eaten in large quantities. The tree belongs to a good family, being related to the Theobroma (food of the gods), which supplies the world with cocoa and chocolate. When the fruit splits open it is a brilliant scarlet with an orange tinted interior. Along the parted edges are the seeds, oval and black, covered with a rich purple bloom. The fruit, being tough and leathery, remains on the tree a long time, forming a most effective display in the gloom of the jungle.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

A Fish Story.

"The inns of dear old England are picturesque," said Richard LeGallienne, "but the food they serve is something terrible.

"After a visit to Blenheim palace I entered an inn in the quaint village of Woodstock. As I lunched—or tried to lunch—my landlord said to me:

"'The great dook of Marlborough once sat in that chair you're a settin' in, sir.'

"'Is that so?' said I.

"'And the dook once drunk 'is beer out o' that same mug you're a-drinkin' out of.'

"'And I bet,' said I, 'I bet he refused to eat this fish too. Well, take it away, my man. I don't want it either.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

There is many a good man under a shabby hat.

Don't worry today. Put it off till day after tomorrow.

Anyhow, the censor must know a lot about the war.

You can't tell what a man knows by what he doesn't say.

Not every fellow who carries a hammer can crack a joke.

Knowledge is power—except when you know you're beaten.

Sometimes people get along together better by remaining apart.

FLEET LEAVES KIEL.

Entire German High Seas Squadron Concentrated for Battle.

PARIS, Jan. 11.—According to the Copenhagen correspondent of The Temps, the entire German high seas fleet is massed at Wilhelmshaven and Cuxhaven ready to sally forth and meet the British Dreadnoughts. The Kiel port is absolutely denuded of first-class ships, and only a few obsolete vessels remain in the harbor, he says.

Turks Off For Egypt.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—"The eighth Turkish army corps has left Damascus for the Egyptian frontier, well armed, provisioned and provided with 5,000 camels for crossing the desert," says a despatch from the Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. The message continues: "It is reported from Beirut (Syria) that all French and Greek subjects have been taken to Damascus in chains, because of an effort to escape."

Our First Sawmill.

It is said that the first sawmill in the United States was at Jamestown, from which sawed boards were exported in June, 1607. A water power sawmill was in use in 1625 near the present site of Richmond.

Wasted Generosity.

"Oh, I'm so sorry I can't marry you. I had no idea you thought of me that way!"

"Well, what do you suppose I've been letting your father beat me at golf all the time for?"—Judge.

Different.

Seedy Chap (stopping pedestrian)—Pardon me, sir, but you look very much like a man I know.

Pedestrian—Indeed! Well, you look like a man I don't want to know. Good day!—Boston Transcript.

Hand-me-downs.

"Yes, we do," said the girl. "I have to wear mother's old hair."—Kansas City Journal.

Trouble Saved.

"I thought you were to move to a more expensive apartment."

"The landlord saved us the trouble," replied Mrs. Filmgift. "He raised the rent of the one we have been occupying."—Washington Star.

"Is she homely?"

"Well, I wouldn't say that exactly. But after taking one look at her no one would ever think of asking why she had never married."—Detroit Free Press.

A Single Application Banishes Every Hair

(The Modern Beauty)

Here is how any woman can easily and quickly remove objectionable, hairy growths without possible injury to the skin: Make a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, when the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a painless, inexpensive method and remember where the growth is unusually thick, a single application is enough. You should, however, be careful to get genuine delatone.

DEPENDENT ON AID.

All Classes in Belgium Fight For Inadequate Supplies.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The representative at Mussel, Belgium, for relief in Belgium, in a letter describing the first distribution there of supplies forwarded by the commission, discloses the extent to which even those who can afford to pay for food are dependent upon assistance.

"At the communal warehouses," he writes, "more than 100 persons were packed about the doors, each with a ticket, and with bags in which to carry away food. They crowded each other furiously to get in before the supply was exhausted. Old men, young men and children were in the crowd. They were not the recipients of charity. They were fighting for places to get food, for which in most cases they paid comparatively high prices. Rich and poor, all alike, had to come and await their turn in the distribution."

Mr. Carnegie spent enough money on peace palaces to be pardoned for expressing some indignation in regard to the way The Hague has treated him.

Those Dreadnoughts and super-Dreadnoughts and other terrible ships of war appear to be having fairly good luck in keeping out of each other's way.

Whether the British-American peace centenary plans proceed or not, it is becoming evident that Ghent was an unfortunate choice for the central celebration.

Weighing Words.

An Advertising Expert says, "The man who weighs his words, says what he means and no more, is the one who gets a reputation for solidity in his community. Advertisers should remember this. Exaggeration is futile—it does not convince. Aside from the morality of the matter, it does not pay to insult the intelligence or stretch the credulity of your public. Get a reputation for truthful advertising, and people will go a long way out of their road to do business with you."

Good advice and fortunately followed by nearly all our local advertisers.

THE GERMAN LOSSES ARE VERY HEAVY

VAIN ATTEMPTS TO RECAPTURE TRENCHES

COUNTER ATTACKS ARE PROVING VERY COSTLY

Germans Vainly Endeavour to Retake Their Lines of Trenches Near Soissons, Captured by the Allies—Entire Front is Covered With German Dead and Wounded ---Allies' Losses Are Lighter.

THEY HAVE A DISTINCT ADVANTAGE

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 12.—Fighting which equals in intensity any of the precept war continues in the vicinity of Soissons, where the Germans are vainly endeavouring to retake the three lines of trenches captured by the Allies according to the official communique to-day. Possession of these trenched has given the allied forces distinct advantage as, if they can be held, it will be possible to utilise mine throwers from them to demolish the main lines of German defences which extend around the base of the hills north of Soissons. The entire front of the trenches is covered with German dead and wounded. The Allies with the advantage of cover are losing far fewer men than the enemy, although the losses are admitted considerable. Violent fighting is also reported to-day north of Beausejour where the Germans have attempted a general advance. Up to the present the French have successfully maintained their positions. The official communique declares that from the sea to the Oise there has been heavy intermittent cannonading but fails again to throw any light on what is happening in Alsace.
